Town Meeting Votes $4,000 More For Anniversary

The Town Meeting members responded in goodly numbers and the attendance was good at the Special Town Meeting held last night at Odd Fellows Opera House. In absence of Moderator Barnes, who is away on a business trip, Town Clerk Merchant called the meeting to order, and read the warrant and return of constable serving it—that it had been posted seven days before the meeting.

On the motion of Melville F. Cate, William J. Holbrook, Town Counsel, was nominated as Moderator, pro tem and he was duly elected.

The new Town Meeting Members elected at the annual town election were sworn in. On a question from the floor advanced by Representative Tirrell as to whether town officers reapportioned and elected from a new precinct had to renew the oath, the Moderator ruled that they did.

The Moderator then took up the warrant. Town Meeting Member Loud moved that the sum of $4000 be raised and appropriated to be expended by the Board of Selectmen to be used for the celebration of the 300th Anniversary of the town of Weymouth. That not more than $105 of this sum be expended for an official town flag, the size to be 4 1/3 by 5 1/2 feet, to have a blue background, bear the seal of the town, and in a panel contain the words, "Weymouth Massachusetts." The report of the Appropriation Committee was accepted and the members voted unanimously on the question.

Street Railway Article

Article 2. The Appropriation Committee recommended that the sum of $3750 be appropriated to meet one-half of the deficit claimed by Eastern Mass. St. Ry. Co. for nine months ending Feb. 29, 1924; that the railroad be asked if a more equitable return of the revenue taken in on the East Weymouth and Quincy line be made to Town.

The Moderator asked for action. The question was raised from the floor that the vote must be by ballot. The Moderator appointed William A. Hodges and Melville Cate as tellers who were duly sworn.

The result of the vote was as follows—Yes 37, No 72, which defeated the appropriation.

Public Squares

Article 3 called for the longest discussion of the evening. Irving E. Johnson moved that the question be divided, and the part relating to changing the name of Independence Square to Talbot Square be taken up first.

Prince H. Tirrell hoped the question before it was finally passed on, would be given very careful and earnest consideration. He felt before the name was changed all who are interested be consulted. He knew Talbot and said no man in Weymouth had been honored more by country and state. Did not think that just naming a square, and sticking up a pole with his name on it was sufficient honor. Spoke of the disregard and in fact disrespect and shabby appearance and treatment of the sign posts in Boston. Thought this meeting should think carefully and do a good job when it did anything to honor this hero.

Irving E. Johnson said the signs had been procured and they were both attractive and handsome and a credit to all the heroes, the town, and citizens. They were of solid bronze with the service star and name. There were no finer signs in any other town and were worthy of purpose they were being erected. It had taken five years to do this honoring. Independence Square was not named before because at the time of first plans all was not known of the honors that were afterwards given to Talbot. The speaker felt that the least the town could do was to name a good-sized square after this man.

So far little consideration had been shown by the town.

Michael Coyle spoke eloquently on the subject, calling attention to the slowness of the project that had been under consideration, like the Memorial Hall, Town Home, etc. Felt that a hall was none too good for all the heroes of the town; in it everybody's name would appear.

Commander Stein read the citation of bravery of the deeds young Talbot had performed, which he felt was more than sufficient to rename this square. Other towns had thus honored their heroes and this would be no precedent for Weymouth.

Prince H. Tirrell felt just naming the square was not doing enough. Did not like the way the poles in Boston looked or were used. We should do something better.

Roland Haviland hoped the motion would pass.

Col. Bauer said some honor should be accorded this hero without delay. That his bravery was entitled to some recognition. He knew Talbot and respected him and felt the honor should come unanimous. He moved that a committee be appointed by the Moderator, to consist of one or more persons who served in the Civil War, one or more in the Spanish War, and one or more in the World War, a representative of the Historical Society, and a representative of the Board of Selectmen.

T. P. Vaile liked the previous motion and hoped it would prevail and believed there should be some committee to go into this question.

Russell H. Whiting moved that the Bauer motion be amended to include the Representative of the General Court, Prince H. Tirrell. Col. Bauer accepted the amendment.

Irving E. Johnson said the signs were ready, a previous town meeting had passed on the names, and with one of two adjustments of naming the square nearest the boys' homes to put up. Any delay might serve to confuse all that had been passed on previously. Felt any delay was unnecessary.

Fletcher Howe felt as the name of Independence Square went back to 1777 and had some history behind it, it should not be hastily changed.

Selectman Hastings said it was not easy to oppose this motion for he knew and honored the hero. But he felt if the name was changed it would hit the older citizens the hardest. He made a most eloquent plea for these early Revolutionary heroes and that the Colonial societies had to send out 29 wreaths to decorate the graves. In all there were 109 graves in Weymouth. He said the name Independence Square had some significance, the records at the Town Office went back to 1740 and was a patriotic reason behind the name. Same as Liberty Square, Columbian Square, and Union Street. Mr. Hastings spoke under difficulty, a cold making it hard for him to speak loudly, yet it was noticeable how silent the room was. He earnestly hoped the old name would be retained.

Russell H. Whiting asked relative to the scope of the committee.

Col. Bauer responded. To consider the best memorial. It could not spend money, but make recommendations to the next meeting.

The final vote was, Yes 79, No 23.

Q. Y. C. OPENING RACE

The Quincy Yacht Club opened the season on Sunday with eleven entries in the 15-foot class. Henry O'Brien and James LeCain had it nip and tuck and the former won by 37 seconds; in the wake were Stride, Eleanor, Edith W., Discard, Wool, Paul, Rosalie II, Wee Scott and Ruth.

On the holiday the Jumbo won, followed by the Eleanor, Discard, Wool, Paul, Stride, Wee Scott, Rosalie, Edith W. and Hank.

PATROL EXPECTED

The new garage at the police station is already for the new patrol wagon which is expected next week. It will be an ambulance and patrol combined and a credit to the town.

NEW INDUSTRY

Weymouth is to have a new industry. Fred Peterson of Lovell Corner, Hugh Juki and Oskar Mattson of Quincy are to open up a quarry at 784 Pleasant street on land of John Neilson, for pavings, edgestone and cellar stone.

Pageant Presented by Nevin School Pupils

The pageant given by the pupils of the Edward B. Nevin school on Tuesday, May 29, in the Fogg Opera House was one of the most successful of any of the Memorial Day exercises ever given in Weymouth. It was entitled "America is safe," and was outlined by the principal of the school, Miss Grace B. Simmons, the special room features being written by the teachers of each room. Miss Miriam Barnes took the part of Columbia; Arnold Metcalf represented Uncle Sam; Hollis Kibby, impersonated the colored servant Sambo. The scenes as given by the scholars of the different classes were:

Grade I

The children of Grade I represented the Dutch nation. A Dutch dance "Wooden shoes" was given by the following group—John Tirrell, Prescott Spicer, Nancy DeCourcy, Barbara Tirrell, Helen Halligan, Mary Hawley, Pence Rayner, Josephine Fasci, Lestelle Holt, Bertha Connor, Mildred Johnston, Richard Metcalf, Joseph Leahy. These children wore Dutch costumes—girls, white caps, etc Dutch shoes; boys, blue trousers, red patches on them, white caps, and wooden shoes. The group was led by Edith Metcalf. A flag song by the whole class of Grade I closed this scene.

Grades II and III

Sweden was represented by Grades II and III by a folk dance "I see you". The parts were taken by the following—Ruth Brackett, Ruth Marceau, Francetta Abbott, Elizabeth Johnson, Marie Lionett, Mabel Sullivan, John Gilligan, Francis Leary, Elwin Tirrell, Atwood Ford, Roger Emerson, John Alvord; Rita Beichtold, Dorothy Hopkins, Priscilla Belcher, Marie Enella, Evelyn Bates, Bertha Sampson, Louis Marceau, Eugene Marceau, John Leahy, Allan Morrissey, Graham Alvord, David Tirrell.

Grade IV

The Fourth Grade represented Uncle Sam's Italian, French, Irish, and Swiss citizens.

Clifford Blanchard in costume with a mount of three vessels represented Columbus.

The part of William Tell with bow and arrow was taken by William Harkinson.

John de Courcy, as Lafayette gave a sword drill as accompaniment to the Marseillaise which he sang in French.

Richard Gridley in costume as John Boyle O'Reilly addressed and saluted the soldiers with "A tip o' the day." "The Swiss Boy" was sung by George Rayner and "Carry me back to Erin's Isle" by Marjorie Caswell. Dressed in the red, blue, and green of Switzerland, Italy, France, and Ireland, the class sang and gave appropriate recitations.

The American group was represented by Eliot Vining, Charlotte Heald, and Hazel Blanchard.

Grade V

Grade V presented Indians in costume as the first Americans. The principal parts were taken by Lewis Warnick as Massasoit, Willard Bishop as Squanto, Catherine Smith as Pocahontas. The Indians showed Uncle Sam and Columbia that they loved America and the Stars and Stripes, but that they liked to keep their old customs. This was shown in two tableaux, the Bows and Arrows, and the War Clubs and Tomahawks.

They also showed that they enjoyed their Indian songs by singing "Sweet Alfarata."

Catherine Smith rendered very pleasingly the legend of Ossea the Magician.

The Indians concluded their part by reciting the American's Creed. Grand finale. The Indians were in a war dance—Willard Bishop, Catherine Smith, Lewis Warnick, Hazel Johnston.

Grade VI

Colonial period represented by Grade VI. An appropriate song of welcome was sung by chorus. Then the following characters gracefully danced the minuet—Eleanor Bates, George Emerson, Ruth Cushing, Robert Crawford, Cynthia Eck, Richard Twigg, Barbara Winchenbach, Willard Barnes. All wore the colonial costumes. The school orchestra played one selection at the beginning and a march while the children were being seated.

Grade VII

Grade VII represented Japan. The little "Ladies of Quality" dressed in the gay costumes of old Japan were accompanied by their coolies bearing flower parasols of cherry blossoms. The leaders were—Cahoon Cook, Phyllis Crocker, Marjory Belcher, Althea Holbrook, Beulah Sherman, Geraldine Welch, Ruth Starratt, Edna Sargent. Their coolies were Robert Gerstley, Warren Burrell, Frederick Taylor, George Loud, Andrew Morrissey, Francis Butler, Prince Tirrell, Henry Tegg. After singing the National hymn of Japan a dance was given representing the cherry festival of their country.

Grade VIII

The Eighth Grade presented the interior of a typical cabin scene showing the life of the colored people of the South. The leading characters were taken by Muriel Burke, Daniel Johnson, and Norman Lund. They were assisted by a chorus which consisted of all the pupils of the room.

The pageant ended with tableaux in which all grades took part.

Democracy Keynote of Memorial Day Address

A refreshing breeze tempered a cert was given on the Grand Army tiful sunshine day, making the conditions ideal for Memorial Day, and the general orders of Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., were carried out without a hitch on schedule time. That 35 of the 39 Veterans were able to participate in the observance of the day was remarkable. The only absentees were William B. Denton, Willard J. Dunbar, William O. Holbrook, and T. John Evans.

Weymouth has ten cemeteries and the Grand Army decorated over 600 graves as follows:

Village cemetery	146
Fairmount cemetery	104
Old North	101
Mt. Hope	74
Xavier	62
Lake View	46
Highland	45
Union	18
Reed	4
Ashwood	2
	602

The Veterans were astir early and assembled at North Weymouth before

8 o'clock. While the procession was being formed Carter's Band gave a concert at Thomas Corner. After their usual custom, the Daughters of Veterans decorated each Veteran and guest with a boutonniere. Citizens had responded freely to the call for autos and it was a long procession which proceeded to the Old North cemetery escorted by Carter's Band, the Sons of Veterans, and Weymouth Post, American Legion. In the automobiles were members of the Grand Army, officers of the Woman's Relief Corps and affiliated organizations, members of the Board of Selectmen, the clergy and the press.

At the Soldiers Monument and at each of the cemeteries the ceremonies were much the same, the Grand Army being assisted by the other organizations in decorating the graves of the soldiers, sailors and marines of the Civil War. At each grave was a member of one of the organizations, and at signal of the bugle they came to attention and simultaneously deposited a potted plant. Appropriate selections were rendered by Carter's Band. The willing work of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and school children was much appreciated.

En route about the town, stops were made at Washington Square and Columbian Square, where popular music was rendered by the Band.

The Dinner Hour
Arriving at Grand Army hall at 12.45, committees of the W. R. C., the D. of V. and S. of V. Auxiliary had a tempting dinner awaiting the Veterans, and guests. The menu included cold meats, hot mashed potato fruit salad, baked beans, rolls, coffee custard pies, squash pies; cake pies, and ice cream.

Mrs. Caroline Sewall was chairman of the committee and was assisted by Mrs. Jennie Keene, Mrs. Stella Richards, Mrs. Mabel Redway, Mrs. Clara Maynard, Mrs. Anna Williams, Mrs. Amelia Severance, Mrs. Hannah Barnes, Mrs. Mary Greeley, Mrs. Helen Lewis, Mrs. Mary R. Flint, Mrs. Agnes Abbott, Mrs. Emma Hawes, Mrs. Mary Cain, and Mrs. Katherine Day.

At the same hour a dinner was served in the vestry of the Congregational church to members of Weymouth Post, American Legion, and to the Boy Scouts, under the direction of Mrs. Egbert V. Warren and an efficient committee.

Following the dinner a band con-

Afternoon Exercises

About 2.30 a procession of the same organizations and the Woman's Relief Corps, Daughters of Veterans, Sons of Veterans Auxiliary, and American Legion Auxiliary, and marched from G. A. R. hall via Cottage street to the Methodist Episcopal church, where a goodly number of citizens were assembled.

The order of exercises were as follows:

Selection	Carter's Band
Prayer	Rev. Bro. Cressey
America	All
Greeting	Commander Bicknell
"Departed Days"	Band
Gen. Logan's orders	Chaplain Hawes
Lincoln's Gettysburg Address	Adj. Turner
"Farewell"	Band
Address	Rev. Earl E. Story
Trooping of Colors	under command
Officer of Day	Dunbar

Solo by Mrs. Ralph Young

Benediction Rev. Earl E. Story
Rev. Frank B. Cressey, a former pastor, came from Cambridge to participate in the exercises, and made a good prayer.

Commander Bicknell expressed his gratification that so many comrades responded. We meet not to celebrate not to talk over victories, but to pay tribute to deceased comrades in all the wars. He read the list of five men who had passed away during the past year, George L. Newton, Stephen Thayer, George F. Joy, Peter Friary, and George Bowker.

After the recital from memory by Adj. Waldo Turner, of Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg there was a tendency to applaud. This recalled a similar moment at Gettysburg, to Past Commander Hawes. He said Lincoln was in doubt whether the address pleased or not, because there was no applause. A friend told him, "I would as soon think of applauding the Lord's Prayer as that address."

The keynote of the address by Rev. Earl E. Story was "Democracy," and the sentiments of the speaker were endorsed. An extended abstract was prepared for this issue, but will not be published until next week.

Notes of the Day

It was impossible to get a list of persons who gave the use of their automobiles, but following is a partial list: Street Railway, bus used for band; Selectmen, for their own use; Norfolk Motors Co., M. R. Loud, H. A. Day, Dr. Drake, O. S. Clark, Donald Francis, Mrs. J. F. Ryan, O. Shaw Sacred Heart school, W. T. Newcomb Burton Hawes, Luther Piles, E. E. Frost, J. L. Bicknell, W. F. Farrar, J. I. Peers, Patrick Casey, E. E. Brown, Harry Stein, G. H. Abbott, C. A. Rogers, Ray Loud, Charles Tisdale, S. Hersey, L. Waite, Mr. Pratt, Merle Gilman.

Many houses and grounds along the route were decorated with flags.

Comrade Oliver Burrell, who is in his 88th year, hurried his breakfast in order to report at the starting point on time, and had an ill turn. The Post surgeon ordered that he be taken home for the day. But Oliver did not propose to miss his dinner, and he reported at G. A. R. hall at noon. On July 2 he will observe his 88th birthday at G. A. R. hall, and requests the Gazette-Transcript to extend a general invitation to his friends.

For 15 or 16 years Carter's Band has furnished the music for Memorial Day, and Thomas M. Carter, the leader, is somewhat of a veteran himself, being in his 82d year.

Weymouth's woman Selectman, Mrs. Annie S. Lynch, made the tour of the town with the Grand Army, and visited all the cemeteries with the other members of the board.

With solemnity and dignity, David J. Dunbar, the veteran officer of the day, can be depended upon to put a touch on the "Trooping of Colors," in which he is a past master. He is at home, too, at the head of the procession.

Chief Pratt and his officers handled the parking of autos exceedingly well at the different cemeteries, although it was a difficult job at some, particularly on Washington street at the Xavier cemetery, the travel at the time being heavy to Plymouth and the Cape.

All the cemeteries were looking beautifully this season. They are well kept, and lot owners are taking pride. Although there are ten cemeteries in Weymouth enlargements are frequently necessary. Many large memorials have been erected the past year.

Investors --- Certificates of Deposit

The maturity, redemption, or sale of securities may place an investor in possession of funds at a time when he regards conditions unfavorable for their permanent re-investment. Or surplus income may accumulate which may be needed within a few weeks or months to meet some large payment.

We recommend, under either of these conditions, a certificate of deposit which will not only provide safety and a good income for every day that it is held, but will give its holder assurance of the immediate availability of funds when needed.

WEYMOUTH, JUNE 1, 1923

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

At Norfolk County Tubercular Hospital, Braintree Highlands, there are 26 ex-service men who are suffering from the most pathetic disease on earth,—tuberculosis—and they are paying the price of service so that you and I may sing "My Country,
'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty" while we proudly look toward the Stars and Stripes. These lads are not only sick but they are lonely and disheartened and feel everyone has forgotten them when they have their high temperature days.

Weymouth Unit, No. 79, never forgets the service men, and Mrs. Alice J. Daley, chairman of the entertainment committee, planned a most pleasing program for these men, May 25. Did they enjoy it? Well, judging by the way they applauded and laughed, it is safe to say they did.

Master Robert Pratt recited several humorous selections, and although but 5 years old, his voice carried to all parts of the room, and the boys did laugh when he said he bet when he grew up, no one could make him "wash the back of his neck." His Memorial Day recitation, bringing in the Legion men, struck a responsive chord, judging by the applause.

Miss Alice Langley, accompanied by Miss Marion Burrell, pianist, sang, recited, and danced most gracefully.
With Alfred Cicchese she sang while she faintly took the part of "Maggie" dressed in an old-fashioned costume.
Mr. Cicchese then sang "Old Black Joe." Miss Patricia Collins danced her way right into the hearts of her audience. Miss Lora Belcher sang and danced prettily. Mrs. Bertha May Gibson acting as pianist.

When Miss Grace Donovan stepped on to the stage she was greeted by fine applause, indicating that she has visited and entertained these boys at other times. Her selections were finely rendered and brought rounds of applause. Mrs. R. L. Stone at the piano, while her son, Howard Stone, rendered many pleasing selections on the saxophone, completed an exceptionally fine program. Mrs. Stone also added much to the enjoyment of the evening by singing.

The Auxiliary is very grateful for the kindness of those who made it possible to put on this concert. Refreshments were served. We are going again just as soon as possible.

Six members of the Unit attended Norfolk County Council meeting at Norwood on Saturday, May 26. Norwood Unit served a most appetizing luncheon in the Civic Association building while an orchestra played many popular selections. After the luncheon all visiting Auxiliary members were shown over this fine community building, which has a gym, a swimming pool, a large dining room, and does not appear to lack anything to draw the people closer for the good of all who are proud to call Norwood their home. Miss Mary E. Murphy is president of Norwood Unit, and chairman of Norfolk council and is very successful in her work. She welcomed the visiting members and in a nice way boosted the town of Norwood.

The reports of the welfare work being accomplished in Norfolk county is most gratifying. Department vice-president, Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien stated that if Norfolk county went ahead of Suffolk county, in which she had a very keen interest, she was perfectly content. Mrs. O'Brien urged a membership drive and called attention to how proud we were during the war to have it known that we were the mother, wife, daughter or sister of a man in service; and now all who are eligible for such a fine organization as the American Legion Auxiliary should consider it an honor and privilege to be enrolled. Mrs. O'Brien told the members that it rests on them to do much of the hard work now, even if some members might feel that the Legion should do it;
that many of the boys are having all they can do to adjust themselves to the changed conditions and to make a new start. It therefore rests with the Auxiliary not to spoil the boys but to carry on willingly and bravely.

Department Secretary Mary T.
Whittaker encouraged those present by saying that Massachusetts Auxiliary had a gain of 200 members over this time last year. Mrs. Norton, chairman of Suffolk county council, was pleased to state that 600 acres of land would be given over by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to the ex-service men. She also spoke of the great good that the disabled ex-service men's store on Boylston street was doing—that the disabled man was being helped to help himself. Department Historian Mrs. Archer Ives spoke briefly on the necessity of each unit seeing that it had a carefully made up history. She spoke also of the work being carried on in the prisons in the cases of unfortunate ex-service men. Miss Hazel of the Boston State hospital stated that she felt the boys were being very well cared for in all the hospitals throughout the State of Massachusetts.

Auxiliary members are advised that the Weymouth Gazette and Transcript are to issue an Anniversary Gazette for the Tercentenary celebration and a sketch of the formation and activities of Weymouth Unit will appear in it. It will be an opportunity for members to obtain for future reference a short synopsis of our organization.

The Auxiliary served dinner to the Post members who were in march on Memorial Day. Mrs. James Peers was chairman and was ably assisted by many of the members.

Mrs. Philip Fraher, chairman of memorials committee, for some time had been with her committee getting ready for the Memorial Day service of love and remembrance. Potted flowers were furnished for the graves of all deceased World War veterans and were given to the Post to distribute. On Tuesday Mrs. Fraher and Mrs. Libby distributed white geraniums to all the Gold Star mothers. Visits were made to the graves of our members who have passed away. Mrs. Mary Slattery, Mrs. Elizabeth Wrinin and Mrs. Ellen M. Coyle and potted plants were placed in loving thought of them.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

The Christian Science church at Quincy was filled last evening at a lecture on Christian Science entitled "Christian Science: The Divine Immanence" by Peter V. Ross, C. S. B. Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. Following is an excerpt:

Christianity has always associated love with the Supreme Being, though perhaps more as a characteristic or attribute than as a synonym. But Christian Science recognizes that while in one sense love is an attribute of an all-pervading quality of God, yet in a fuller sense Love is God, or as St. John puts it, "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."

REALITY OF GOOD AND HEALTH

The deductions to be drawn from the conception of Deity as Love are most inspiring and liberating to suffering humanity. Take all the sickness, sorrow, and misery that appear to run riot in the world about us. Could they be imposed upon mankind by a Supreme Being who is Love? "Unthinkable and impossible," you reply. Could such things be made or countenanced by a Creator who is Love? The response is an emphatic "No." From whence then are they and by whom created? Christian Science replies that they have not in fact been created and that they have no actual foundation or existence, because the one and only creator, power, and presence is Love. The same is true of all the hate, malice, and strife that seem to infest society. They are the very antithesis of Love and hence can have no actual influence or potency when Love is infinite and omnipotent.

Any one who chooses can begin at once, in Christian Science, to prove this momentous truth; and having proved, though perhaps only in minor details, that discord, whether in the form of bodily ailments or of mental disturbances, can be put out of experience, he will be ready and able to see that the sum total of human wretchedness can be disposed of on the basis of its unreality and nonexistence.

DISCOVERER CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

If there has been any event of modern history more remarkable than the discovery of Christian Science, that event has been the successful establishment of Christian Science on an enduring foundation. To discover this Science, required rare spiritual insight; to establish it that the truths of Christianity should not again be lost to sight, required unsurpassed sagacity, resolution, courage, and devotion. These qualities were possessed to a superlative degree by Mary Baker Eddy, which answers the oft repeated question, Why did Christian Science come through a woman?

To a world sick with its belief in materialism, intellectualism, and skepticism, as well as sick with sin and disease, Mrs. Eddy has brought a workable means of regeneration. For the suffering and sorrowing she has made known a divinely prepared way of escape. Those who are availing themselves of the opportunity thus provided, hold her name in love and reverence, while people the world over are coming to recognize her as one of the foremost benefactors of the race.

STORES SHOULD CLOSE

Editors Gazette-Transcript:
Being only a clerk in one of our leading grocery stores of Weymouth I must relate to your paper a remark passed by one of our local grocer brothers:

"We are going to TRY and close our stores a half a day on Saturday, June 16."

June 16th marks the passing of one of the most notable events held in this vicinity or in fact ever in Massachusetts and yet our stores are going to TRY to close half a day.

Let me ask our fair minded readers of our old standby "The Gazette," if their shopping couldn't possibly be done so as to have business in our town at a standstill, to mark the business men's respect for the town that furnishes them their living?

Does the bunting that decorates the buildings of our leading merchants signify respect for our 300th Anniversary?

While the boys are hustling to get through at noon; everybody rushing here and there to squeeze in a day's work in a few hours of a morning. Does that look well for our townspeople to the many thousands of visitors that will pour in from our surrounding towns.

No! Let our business men get together and close to make that one day a memorable day, not only to themselves but to everybody.

And not say "I don't think it can be done."

It can be done as well as it should be done.

The VETERAN MOTORIST
gives a few rules of the road

"SOMEONE HAS SAID THAT 'IF' is the biggest little word in the language. If a very close friend of mine had used his head on a certain day, he wouldn't have knocked a school boy down and come within an ace of crippling him for life.

"It was queer, that day, about Jerry. Usually, a good, cool, level-headed driver. But, somehow, his attention must have been wandering, and as the kid ran out in front of him—he did the wrong thing. And he was upset about it for months after.

"His insurance company settled up the case in due time. But Jerry said something to me after it was all over that set me to thinking and I'll never forget it. Said he: 'My liability insurance protected me, but it didn't protect that youngster's suffering one iota.'

"I'd never thought of it in just that way before, but I have ever since. Youngsters are careless at times and it's up to us motorists to make up for what they lack by using more than ordinary care when they're around."

POSTAL GUIDE

Many large mailers say that the United States Official Postal Guide is indispensable to them.

It is a 900-page book bound in cloth containing general postal information of interest to the public, and giving three complete lists of post offices. The list by states is arranged as a parcel post guide, the unit number of each office being given and space provided for the insertion of the zone number. A zone key is furnished with each subscription to the Guide.

The Post Office Department is now offering this book for 75¢ which until this year was priced at $1. An additional 25¢ will pay for a set of eleven monthly supplements, which will keep the subscriber fully informed regarding rulings on mail matter during the year.

CHILDREN OF RICH MAKE TOYSThe miniature automobiles shown in the photograph were all made by the students of the Chicago Latin school, many of whom come from wealthy families. They are on exhibit at the school rooms. The makers of the toys are grouped around the table.DIFFERENTIAL IS NOT UNDERSTOODPurpose of Mechanism Is to Deliver Equal Amount of Power to Each Rear Wheel.How many automobile owners know what a differential is and of what use it is? A writer asserts that even a large proportion know little, if anything about it.On all cars with beveled gear drive such as is used on the modern passenger cars, the differential is located in the rear axle and its purpose is to deliver an equal amount of power from the engine to each of the rear drive wheels, regardless of whether one is going faster or slower than the other.What Differential Does.In driving a car in a circle, or any part of a circle, the outer wheel has to travel a longer distance than the one on the inside, with the result that it must turn around a greater number of times. If the rear axle were made of one solid piece connecting the two drive wheels, it would then be impossible for one wheel to turn more rapidly than the other, with the result that one would have to slip when rounding a curve. Thus, the differential permits one wheel to turn faster than the other, thereby keeping either of them from skidding on the ground. At the same time, it is so constructed that it will deliver the same amount of turning or twisting torque on the wheel which is turning the fastest as on the other one.The construction of the differential is similar in principle to an "even-er" which is placed back of a team of horses to divide the load between the two. The even-er divides the load between the two so that, regardless of whether one horse is ahead of or to the rear of the other, he will be pulling approximately his share of the load.In the rear axle of a car is placed the differential which divides the load from the engine, equally between the two drive wheels, the same as the even-er divides the load between the horses. The equalizing action of the differential can be seen by jacking up the rear wheels of the car, then putting the gear lever in low speed. Dis-engage the emergency brake and turn one of the wheels forward or backward, at the same time watching the effect on the opposite wheel. You will notice that the other wheel turned directly opposite to the way in which the one is going. This peculiar action has led to many interesting stories from new motorists when they have discovered it.Some Disadvantages.While the differential is a necessity in the average car, it has some disadvantages which have not yet been satisfactorily overcome. In case one wheel drops into a deep mudhole so that the tire cannot get traction, the differential will allow this wheel to turn around and prevents any more power being delivered to the opposite wheel, which might pull the car out were it not for the differential action. Different mechanical devices have been shown at various times to lock two rear wheels together under circumstances of this kind. Due to the complex nature of these devices, however, they have never come into commercial use.A great many patented types of differentials have been brought out at different times to do away with this spinning of one wheel when in a slippery spot, but so far the standard type of bevel gear differential is used on practically all standard makes of cars, which seems to prove that nothing better has been brought out so far.BRUSHES CAUSE OF TROUBLEGood Plan to Keep Close Watch to See If They Are Sparking—Investigate at Once.Watch the brushes of the generator occasionally to see if they are sparking. This may be due to dirty commutator, rough from burning; high mica, or worn out of true. The brushes may not be properly fitted, they may be stuck in the guide, have a weak spring, or be used up. When sparking is noticed have the trouble investigated immediately, as the commutator will be badly damaged and the battery will not receive the proper charge.Take Care of Car.An ounce of attention is worth a pound of overhaul.
An oiling a day keeps the repairman away.Look before you back.
Spare the oil and spoil the car.A rolling car gathers no crowd.A tool in the kit is worth thousands in the garage.

Service is as service does.

Fools rush in where experts fear to ride.A little knowledge of electrical systems is a dangerous thing.An ounce of instruction may save a pound of repair.A skid to the wise is sufficient.THEFT BUREAU URGES OWNER TO KNOW CARMany Stolen Machines Could Not Be Identified.A comprehensive report of auto thefts for the last year just issued by the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California shows that year by year there are more cars being stolen.In southern California during 1922 there were nearly $3,000,000 worth of automobiles taken by thief gangs. It is believed that this tremendous activity is conducted by professional groups of thieves organized on a commercial basis, although a certain per cent of the cars are taken for joy riding purposes.There were 2,788 machines stolen in Los Angeles alone during 1922, as compared to 2,572 taken in 1921. The figures for 1921 show a material advance over those of 1920, according to the theft bureau report.An investigation of the facts relating to the theft of each automobile shows that in most instances the car was stolen because the owner failed to lock it or even left the keys in the lock.
Such carelessness as this encourages the stealing of machines throughout the state, say the authorities. Although the greatest number of cars stolen have been recovered, great difficulty has been experienced in getting them back because the owners could not give proper information to the detectives in identifying their property, even failing to know their own license or engine numbers.Every motorist should place private identification marks somewhere on his car in a place where the thieves are not likely to find and destroy it. It is hoped to cut down the number of thefts during 1923.Canvas Fenders Help.Owners of a small car, who would like to convert it into a snappy and unique form of roadster, may take this hint. Instead of the regular front fenders a canvas guard may be stretched as shown. A couple of coil springs at the lower end will keep the guard from sagging.AUTOMOBILE

NEW DISEASE FOUND

A dejected looking World war veteran applied for assistance at the Pittsburgh chapter of the American Red Cross not long ago, saying he was ill. "What does the doctor say is the matter?" he was asked. "I dunno just what it is," replied the applicant, "but he says it's 'formation of the diagnosis.'"

Proof.

The dear young thing whimpered: "John, already you have begun to slight me. Are you sure you love me?" "Love you?" exclaimed the five months' groom. "Why, Della, what more do yuh want? Don't I let you tell me what time I've got to come home nights?"

Oratorical Difficulty.

"In order to make a great speech you've got to talk about the things nearest to the hearts of the people." "Yes," rejoined Senator Sorghum; "but a man in my position can't limit his speeches to baseball and the motion pictures."—Washington Star.

A MINOR ROLE

"Were you ever patroness at a society affair?" "No. I'm always one of the patronized."

Tit for Tat.

A money has made the mare go. For ages past, I'll state; But now the fillies grab the dough And make it aviate.

The Carry-On.

Medium—Yes, Mr. Henpeck, your dear wife is in heaven. Henpeck—Are you sure she is in heaven? Medium—Yes, there is no doubt about it. Henpeck—Well—er—there is going to be trouble there.

Choosing a Companion.

The Alreade—If your master wanted a dog why didn't he get a good one instead of you? The Lil' Cur—Well, all his children are of high-school age and he thought it would be nice to have something around which would respect and obey him.

Between Friends.

First Girl—I simply couldn't pass by without giving that blind beggar something! It touched me so much when he said: "Please help a poor blind man, pretty lady!" Second Girl—Did he really say that? That shows how blind he must be!

Test for Love Letters.

"Before mailing your love letters put them through one test." "What is that?" "Try to imagine how they would sound to you if they were being read out loud by a lawyer for the plaintiff."

A Colonial Bargain.

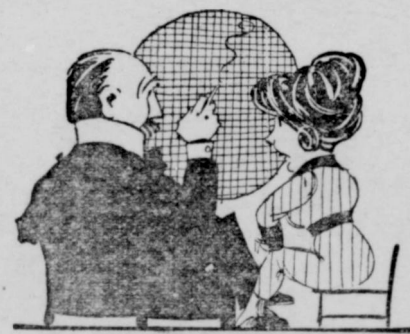

Preserved Penny—Aren't you paying the savages too much for that land? Goodman Fish—Perhaps; but then they are to pay me the equivalent annually for the privilege of hunting on the land.

Worth the Lost Ball.

The Club Bore—Say, when you sliced a drive into the rough back there your ball struck me on the jaw and knocked me out, speechless for half an hour. Hazard—Well, well; it wasn't such a bad shot after all.

Flat Dwellers.

"You know that family on the next floor I said we didn't want to know?" "Yes, they have been very aloof." "So they have, the stuck-up things. I'm beginning to think they don't want to know us."

GIVING A HINT

Mr. Hardfax—I want no woman in my life. Women are a delusion. Miss Manchester—And yet, I'm told men are fond of hugging delusions.

What's Home Without a Car! Alas! they often have A family jar, Because he can't afford A family car.

What a Girl Likes.

"I don't see how you can stand Fred as an escort. He doesn't dance." "Oh, you're mistaken. He dances attendance better than any other man I know."

The Practical Side of It.

"If we name the baby after your rich uncle he may leave us something when he dies." "Yes, but if we don't he may give us something now."

SZMOSKA CONCERT

An enthusiastic audience greeted Madame Szmoska at the Radcliffe benefit concert held last Friday evening at Fogg Opera House.

Madame Szmoska enraptured those present in her usual brilliant manner. Tenor Dean Winslow Hancock was accorded generous applause at each appearance and delighted his audience. Just before the reception to Madame Szmoska, Miss Friswell of Needham was presented to the audience who had the pleasure of listening to her beautiful voice of unusual quality.

Madame Szmoska was warm in her praise of the young singer and predicted a wonderful career ahead of her. Surely the non-appearance of Mary Boyle O'Reilly would have made the evening incomplete. She paid a enjoy in their home town such a fine and in very effective language depicted the wonderful fight of the Poles to become a nation by itself.

All present expressed deep appreciation of the opportunity given to splendid tribute to the Polish nation evening's program that was carried out with such rich artistic finish.

Grand Army Service At the Old South Church

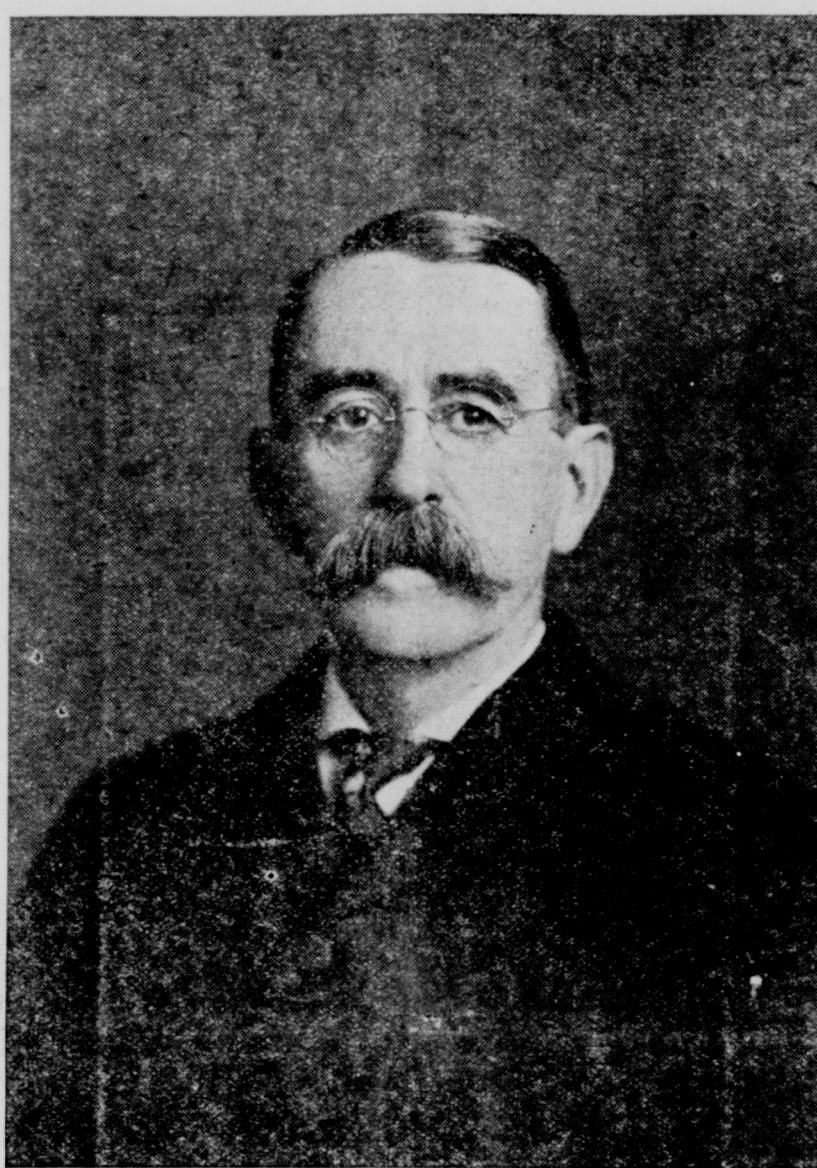

Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., which now numbers 39 members was represented by nineteen at the Memorial Sunday services at the Old South Union church on Sunday afternoon when the pastor, Rev. Francis Alden Poole spoke on "Your Message to us." The Sons of Veterans and Auxiliary, American Legion, and Auxiliary, and the Women's Relief Corps were also represented, and there was a good attendance of citizens.

Dr. Poole interpreted the message of the Grand Army to us: 1—As the unfailing source of patriotism. 2—Of the glory of dying on the right side for a great principle. 3—As an appeal to be true to a great memory.

The Concord Male Quartette sang "When the Flag goes by," "Soldiers Rest," "Abide with Me," "The Everlasting Day," and "Peace I leave with you."

Conspicuous near the pulpit were the American flag, and the Service flag of the church, the latter with 83 stars, six being gold stars.

COMRADE ELBRIDGE NASH

Quartermaster of Reynolds Post since 1870 and today in Active Business.

Quartermaster Elbridge Nash was in line as usual although in his 82d year. Not only has he been quartermaster of the Post since 1870, but he has seen more years as a business man; since 1875 he has conducted a drug store at Columbian Square and it is up-to-date, too. His name is prominent on the committee of the Post years ago when successful concerts and fairs were held by Reynolds Post which netted a good fund.

SWAGGER SUITS TAILORED IN CLASSIC PERFECTION

WHILE the general character of suits this season is ornate and of varied novelty, the classic tailleur has lost none of its prestige among a patrician clientele. The Paris couturiers are turning out many suits of the youthful type, mostly in black and navy and the new peccan shade. The skirts are fairly short, and the jackets are often decidedly so. These are finished with odd little pockets and rows of self-colored buttons, or with braid bindings around the edge. Almost without exception one sees the popular fox scarf as an accessory.

For suits similar to the one shown in the illustration polret twill is the preferred material. A welcome note in this elegant model is the bell sleeve, for in summer time a tight cuff precludes the practicability of wearing it over a crushable lingerie blouse. The lapper skirt is another feature worthy of mention, as shown in this suit, for it is a very pleasing style.

A distinctive model which departs from the usual is a youthful short coat-suit developed of navy poplin, with bias pipings of white pique.

Noted among the most fashionable suits are models of piquet with all-over-embroidered, side-fastened jackets or box-coats. The demand for the side-tie coats is insistent, and very charming they are.

In the severely classic tailleurs notched collars, linked fronts and narrow straight skirts are correct.

Among the newer modes pin-checked tweeds in both regulation and side-tie jacket styles are favored.

FROCKS FOR YOUNG GIRLS ARE INGENUOUSLY SASHED

DESIGNERS have developed a passion for sashed effects this season. If not ribbons, then the fabric itself is tied in sailors' knots, lovers' knots, butterfly bows and in every conceivable sash-like way. The side-fastened frocks and jacquettes accent the sash feature, and the Deauville kerchief has inspired the use of fanciful knotting and tying of fabrics.

It is the manipulation of picot-edged black taffeta which enhances the charm of the girlish frock in the picture. Not only is there a cunning sash arrangement which features each side of this black and white striped silk rattine gown, but a most original sleeve is designed employing the taffeta in fancy knotted effect.

Huge bows of ribbon and rosettes with streamers find placement on many of the smartest frocks, posed mostly to the left hip-line.

Newest frocks show cunning apron fronts which tie at the back with a voluminous sash. These are very pleasing on slender girlish figures.
They suggest the bustle effect, which rumor says is coming in again.

Another very attractive use of ribbon ties takes place at the back of the neckline, for it is the last word in fashion that bodices fasten in this way.

Weymouth Birthday Party—June 16, 1923

Featuring
John Colby, Jr.

By GRACE R. OLIN

(©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The Colbys were at breakfast. The head of the house, John Colby, Sr., scowled over his morning paper and snatched bits of toast and coffee in between.

Mrs. Colby, pink-checked and placid, beamed on her family and all contentedly. Miss Mabel and Miss Clarissa (a trifle pale, the result of a dance the evening before) consulted their wrist watches and yawned gracefully.

The remaining member of the household, Mr. John Colby, Jr. (more frequently called Johnnie), was to all appearances in a day dream over his oatmeal.

But, then, Johnnie was pink-checked and placid, like his mother, and only 16 into the bargain. And 16 is very likely to have day dreams, any time. 'Twas Miss Mabel who broke the silence.

"Ma, I can't find my gymnasium bloomers, and I'll need them tonight for basketball."

"And ma," Miss Clarissa shrieked. "I can't locate my black silk stockings, my best ones, with the yellow C on each instep. And I'll want them this afternoon. I'm going out."

"Must be where you put them, girls, but I'll see if I can find them for you both." Even an extra task on Saturday morning failed to ruffle Mrs. Colby.

At this point, Mr. Colby, Jr., seemed to emerge suddenly from his day dream had become seized with silent, but hearty mirth.

"Funny, isn't it?" Miss Mabel glared at her brother.

"I don't see anything to laugh at," said Miss Clarissa, abruptly rising. Five minutes later, having kissed their mother and patted their father's shoulder, they permitted the front door to be closed upon them.

Colby, Sr., dropped his paper and looked after them, fondly.

"Splendid daughters, my dear, splendid daughters," he said to his wife. "Never have they given us a moment's uneasiness. And ambitious! Why, those girls wouldn't miss a day's work if they could."

"I wish I had more money to give them, more advantages, and better surroundings. Did you know, my dear, that both the girls are as keen for the white bungalow on the hill as you are?"

"Oh, well, I suppose we must be content with what we have, but I do wish, mother, that Haskell would give me that manager's job, then we might live the way we would like."

"Now, John," Mrs. Colby shook her soft curls at him, "don't you go to dreaming, dear. I have you and the children, and I am happy. We can't have everything we want in this world, and, really, the white bungalow doesn't matter so very much."

"And don't be fretting, John, about getting that manager's position. Mr. Haskell will choose someone who can dress well and has a college education."

"Ma said it, pa," John, Jr., drained his glass of milk and pushed his chair back languidly. Colby, Sr., regarded his son with evident disapproval.

"John," he said, "I wish you wouldn't eat and drink so much. It isn't good for you."

Mr. Colby, Sr., pushed his chair under the table with an irritable little gesture.

"Now, after you have done your outside chores," he added, "you come down town to the office. I may be able to get you in this summer vacation, and a little knowledge of the way things are run won't hurt you."

"Sorry, pa," the boy's clear eyes met his father's, "but we're putting on a show in high school this afternoon, and we have a dress rehearsal this morning."

"It's a corking show, pa; can't you come. Mother's coming. I wrote the thing and I'm directing it. I named it 'Hamlet Up-to-Date.'"

"And, pa," the boy paused, his hand on the door, "I don't want to know your business. I would never like it, and I'd rather do something else this summer."

"Well, so long. If you come, pa, just ask for me at the door; they'll let you in."

For a moment Colby, Sr., stood watching the departing form of his son.

"That seems to be that young man's program nowadays, my dear," he said, slipping into his coat. "Eat and put on shows and in between times ride around with Dr. Burleigh. I presume he aspires to either a chauffeur or an actor. I wish he were as steady as the girls."

"Mabel is 21 and Clarissa 23, John," Mrs. Colby said quietly. "Johnnie is only a boy."

"That's right, Nettie, pamper him," exploded her husband. "Go to his fool shows and encourage him, and see what you'll get for it." Mrs. Colby, clearing up the breakfast things, only laughed as her husband strode indignantly down the path.

It was after 1 o'clock when Mr. James Haskell stopped beside Colby, Sr.'s desk.

"Take a half holiday, Colby," he said. "I'm going to, for the first time in years. The youngsters are putting on a show, I understand, and as a member of the school board I deem it only right to patronize and be interested."

Thirty minutes later Mr. Colby, having hastily swallowed some lunch, crept guiltily up the stairs of High School hall.

Having deposited his ticket with a dapper youth, he allowed himself to be led down the darkened aisle. When his eyes grew more accustomed to the semi-darkness, he saw with a start his wife and the Haskell sitting side by side.

Close upon this discovery came a shriek and, allowing his eyes to wander towards the stage, he beheld his son and heir resplendent in Miss Mabel's gymnasium bloomers and Miss Clarissa's best silks, those with the yellow C's.

"Do you know, Colby," said Haskell, wiping his eyes, "it's done me more good than all the money I've ever spent for medicine. A sense of humor is a great asset in life."

"Mrs. Colby," he said, turning to where she and Mrs. Haskell were chatting, "I believe your husband is just the man I need for manager, someone who doesn't take things too seriously, someone who can bring a boy up to laugh."

It was a joyous little group that awaited the coming of Colby, Jr., for supper. The Misses Mabel and Clarissa had been told the delightful news and were properly enthusiastic.

Mr. Colby had with his own hands filled the milk pitcher and stood it by Johnnie's plate. Also, the whipped cream pie was his offering as well.

"Say, ma," said Johnnie, after he had apologized to his sisters, "there was a moving picture producer there today, and he's going to give me enough for the play to buy the white bungalow you've always wanted, and there'll be enough left over to put me through college. So now I can be a doctor, like Dr. Burleigh, just as I've always wanted to be."

"Son," Colby, Sr., spoke in a choked sort of voice, "can't you put on 'Othello' and smother Desdemona with your mother's green pillow, the one with the cabbage roses on it?" "You said it, pa," responded Colby, Jr.

LAUGHED AT POWER OF MAN

Alaskan Winds Made Mockery of Explorers' Efforts to Safeguard Themselves Against It.

Wind strong enough to pick up a man and carry him off was one of the things that the party that explored the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, Alaska, had to contend with. On one occasion at the top of Baked mountain they used 5,000 feet of rope and cord to lash the tent; but at night when a big storm struck them the wind snapped the poles, and the thing was wrecked. Then a terrible hail of punice confined the explorers to what little shelter the remains of the tent provided, and there they spent the night in agony, waiting for the storm to abate or for daylight to come so that they could see to make a dash down the valley. At last the light came, but before the party was ready to start one of the men came out, and the wind literally carried him away.

Feeling that it was of the utmost importance to keep together—thus Mr. Robert F. Griggs, director of the expedition, writes in the National Geographic Magazine—made frantic efforts to detain him, but he was gone like a ghost in the night, out of earshot almost at once. I turned my efforts to hurrying the others. To face the gale was impossible, so I started backing toward the tent, bracing myself against the wind. Suddenly I found myself flying through the air, scared to death. I shall never forget the feeling of gratitude I experienced when my face landed in the mud two gullies away. The feeling that I was being carried bodily down the valley by the wind was one of the most terrible experiences of my life.

New Banjo Accessories.

Two banjo accessories, a clothing guard and an adjustable bridge, are now available, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The former consists of an elastic pad which fits over the brackets and nuts of the instrument, thus preventing any wear and tear on the garments. The latter may be adjusted to different heights and has notches of various depths, on both sides, by means of which all members of the banjo "family" can be accommodated.

Last Sunday at Overlook park the Owls nosed out Mt. Pleasant by the score of 6-5. Sullivan outpitched Ramsey throughout the whole game. J. Levangie won the game in the ninth when he singled, stole second, and third and then scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Sullivan of the Owls fanned 14.

The game between Weymouth Center and the Valley Boys club which was played at Webb park lasted 14 innings and resulted in a win for Weymouth Centre by the score of 9-8. The Valley forged ahead in the twelfth, but Weymouth Center tied the score in their half of the inning. A home run by Reid with two on bases in the fourth featured. The score by innings:

SUMMER ST. 9, RANGERS 9

The usual large crowd journeyed to Summer street last Sunday to witness the first game of the season between Summer street and Ranger A. A. of East Weymouth; it ended in a draw, the game was stopped promptly at 6 o'clock as the law requires all Sunday games to be played between the hours of 2 and 6.

The Rangers are a snappy club, full of pep and an intense desire to win. They play fast ball and never quit, but they have one fault which should be remedied and that is continual fault finding under the umpire when no just fault exists. The writer has noted this in both games he has seen them play. But one can readily overlook this when you see how earnest and sincere they are to win. It was a long drawn out game and space will not permit full details.

The features for the Rangers were Loneragan's batting and fielding, Delasandro's batting and the all-round work of the two Mauros.

For Summer Street—Humphrey made three hits, two for two bases. Ed Lukeman reached first base every time up, four times on hits and once on an error. Raulstone made three hits, one of them for two bases. Bill Lukeman made three hits, one of them a double and made a difficult catch of a foul fly. Frazier made a three base hit and a single. Warburton made two hits and pitched the last inning, striking out two of the three batters. Lefty Sandwyn played first base for Summer Street in his usual high class style.

Next Sunday at 3 o'clock Summer Street plays Waltons of Quincy at Raymond's field.

MAJESTIC THEATRE, BOSTON

"The Covered Wagon" which opened in Boston at the Majestic theatre a week ago has proved a sensation, and crowds have flocked to the Tremont and Boylston Street playhouse far in excess of its capacity. The most prominent people have endorsed the play, including the Governor of the State, public officials, army and navy commanders, and heads of patriotic societies.

The reason of this extraordinary interest is the fact that "The Covered Wagon" vividly portrays one of the most vital periods in America's annals, namely, the conquest of the Oregon Trail in 1848-49 by the "covered wagons" or prairie schooners. This is pictured in the form of a thrilling and romantic love story. The heroine is a girl from Abe Lincoln's county in Illinois, who drives one of the wagons. The rival suitors for her hand are two ex-service officers of the Mexican War. Almost every kind of hazardous adventure is encountered by the pioneers, who are shown battling against fire, flood, Indians, buffalo stampede, starvation, thirst, and blizzard in their heroic attainment of the New West. Any number of laughs are furnished by the antics of two old scouts, and of the banjo playing "terbacker-chawing" pioneer boy, Jed Wingate.

LESSEN WORK BY SEWING MACHINE

If Electricity Is Available in Home Motor Will Save Strength of Operator.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With a good sewing machine, a good light, a comfortable room where partly finished work may be kept undisturbed, a motor can manage to do most of the plain sewing for the family, especially for the children. Very often the sewing room may be combined with the children's playroom and the mother can watch and direct their occupations as well as accomplish a good deal on the machine.

Motor Saves Strength.
If one has electricity in the home and there are many garments to make, it saves strength to have an electric motor to run the sewing machine. Studies of the energy used in sewing have been carried on by the office of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. These show how much more economical of body energy a motor-driven sewing machine is when compared with one driven by foot-power or with hand sewing.

Most women realize that they work harder and put forth more muscular effort when they run a sewing machine for an hour with their feet than when they sit and sew for the same time by hand, though of course, they accomplish more with the machine. For example, in hemming sheets, it takes about six times as much energy to run the foot-driven machine for an hour as it does to sew by hand for that length of time, at the ordinary rate, but two yards can be hemmed with the amount of energy required for one by hand and in much less time. Probably 12 yards could be hemmed on the sewing machine while one was being done by hand.

Energy Required.

When the electrically driven machine was used in the department's investigations the energy required per hour was not quite twice that used for hand-sewing. It was only one-fourth as much as that needed to run the foot-driven machine. The energy used per yard was about one-fifth of that used with the foot-driven machine, and less than one-tenth of that for hand-sewing. In other words, even if the machine did not sew any faster or finish a greater number of yards in an hour, when run by an electric motor, the mother would be less tired when she had finished a given amount of sewing than if she had pedaled the machine.

SWEET POTATOES AND CORN

Recipe for One of Most Pleasing Combinations with Either Fresh or Canned Corn.

Many uses for sweet potatoes and many unusual combinations of sweet potatoes with other foods have been tried and recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. One of the most pleasing of these combinations is sweet potatoes scalloped with either fresh or canned corn.

Scalloped Sweet Potatoes and Corn.
2 cups cooked corn, 1 cup white sauce fresh or canned Salt
2 cups diced cooked Pepper sweet potatoes Grated cheese bread crumbs

Mix corn, potatoes, white sauce, salt and pepper; pour this mixture into a baking dish; sprinkle the top with grated cheese and bread crumbs and bake. Whether the white sauce should be thick or thin depends on how much liquid the corn contains. The mixture before it is baked should have about the consistency of creamed potatoes.

SPICED PRUNES WITH MEAT

Recipe Recommended by Department of Agriculture to Be Served as a Preserve.

After soaking dried prunes, from 4 to 6 hours, or overnight, using 2 pints of water to each pound of prunes, the water should be drained off. In it should be put, for each 2 pounds of prunes, 1 pound of sugar, 1/2 cupful of vinegar, 1 teaspoonful of cinnamon, 1 teaspoonful allspice and 1 teaspoonful cloves. Put the spices in a bag, or cloth. Boil all together without the prunes for 15 or 20 minutes, until syrupy, then add prunes, and cook slowly about 30 minutes. This recipe is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

WHAT IS A CREDIT BUREAU?

A credit bureau, adequately organized and efficiently handled, is an institution of value in improving the tone of a community's credit. It educates the community in the meaning of credit by orienting for its credit-givers the standing of its credit seekers. It translates thrift, sobriety, prompt meeting of obligations, right living into very real and concrete terms for each individual. Performance is recorded and made to count in his credit relations. A credit record can be established which will insure accommodation during a period of misfortune, or a reputation may be acquired which will cut off every credit avenue. Bad bills reduced and slow accounts eliminated lessen business costs and hence decrease living expenses for consumers. People who know these things are given incentive to make their actions measure to the credit standard. A credit bureau which realizes its possibilities quickens and invigorates the ethics of business relations in its community.

MAKING GARMENTS FOR CHILDREN

One Pattern Used to Make Five Different Dresses.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Clothing for children should be of the simplest kind, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It should permit absolute freedom of movement, hanging chiefly from the shoulders, and permitting the child to bend over freely, squat on the ground, kick, run, climb, or otherwise indulge in the activity natural to a growing boy or girl. Rompers for very little children, and bloomer dresses or separate knickers and blouses for those a little older are, as a rule, the most practical from the standpoint of the child's comfort and appearance, and a minimum amount of laundering. Elaborate designs are unsuitable at any time for active young children. Children should not be conscious of their clothing either from a sense of discomfort, or from vanity or embarrassment. Washable materials are preferable for children's clothing, until they are old enough to take some responsibility for keeping their clothes clean. Where extra warmth is necessary, washable woolen materials may be selected, such as serge, flannel, or challis, but most mothers find that it pays best to use woolen underwear and cotton or linen dresses, with sweaters and leggings for extra warmth when the children go out. A set of cover-all aprons made on the "kimono" pattern will be found very practical for use when children are playing in the house or yard either after school or when they are too little to go to school. Oilcloth or rubber bibs for very little children can be easily made and will lessen the number of garments to be washed.

Garments Made at Home.

A large part of the clothing for girls can always be made at home, and many garments may be made for boys as long as they wear washable clothes. Boys' knickers for play, Mouses, pajamas, underwear, and even mackinaws, which are unlined, may be successfully made from patterns at home by most mothers, but as a rule the work involved in making a boy's suit or lined overcoat is such that it pays to get these garments ready-made and economize in some other way. At times it happens, however, that a man's suit has such good material in it that it is worth while to make it over for a boy. Women's garments may be cut over much more easily to fit the girls of the family. There is always the possibility of combining two materials when there is not enough of one, or of adding just enough new contrasting material to make the result seem like a new dress.

One Pattern Sufficient.

In the illustration one pattern was used to make five different dresses. Variety was obtained by making the decorations entirely different and using different materials in each dress and guimpe. Even with dresses for older persons it is frequently possible to vary a simple foundation pattern by means of trimming, various styles of collars or cuffs, or a different way of opening, so as to have the results seem totally different. A glance at any pattern book will show how the same foundation pattern can be made up to give various effects. The advantages of using one pattern for a number of garments in this way are that with repeated use one is able to handle the pattern more easily and consequently to work more rapidly, and no time is lost measuring and laying out several different kinds of patterns. The simpler the pattern the easier it is to cut and make, and the more likelihood there is of being able to use it for cutting over a limited amount of material, as in the case of making over an old dress.

STANDARDIZE RECIPES FOR BREADS

The following basic table for quick doughs is suggested to save time in looking up recipes. It is indorsed by the United States Department of Agriculture. Any recipe may be varied by the addition of nuts, raisins, dates, prunes, cherries, or other fruits, seasonings or spices, but the proportions of liquid, flour, and baking powder do not vary greatly. The measurements are all level.

HOUSEKEEPER WOULD HAVE IDEAL LAUNDRY

Running Water and Modern Labor-Saving Devices Cannot Always Be Provided.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The ideal of every housekeeper would be a separate room for her laundry with running water and modern labor-saving devices. These cannot be provided in every home, but even where the arrangement and equipment are necessarily very simple it is often possible to make minor changes or to plan the work in such a way that it will take less time and strength.

In olden days, tubs and wash benches were brought into the kitchen because water could be heated there most conveniently, and from this seems to have developed the idea that the kitchen is the place for the laundry. The doors and steam from laundry work, however, are disagreeable in a kitchen, and the handling of soiled clothing in any room in which food is prepared is highly objectionable. If clothes must be washed in the kitchen the preliminary sorting should be done elsewhere.

In some sections it is considered preferable to have the washing done out of doors or in a room outside of the house. Otherwise the best place for a laundry is usually either in a room next to the kitchen or in a basement room directly below it, because this makes it possible to use the same chimney and if the house is equipped with running water the same water pipes for both rooms. A basement laundry generally means too many stairs for the housewife, while a room adjoining the kitchen may enable her much more easily to carry on or oversee the work in both rooms at the same time.

Good lighting is necessary for good laundry work, and tubs and ironing board should be so placed that the light comes from the side. Doors and windows should be arranged to give the thorough ventilation especially necessary because of steam, odors and heat.

A laundry floor should be of material that wears well, is not too hard for the feet, does not soak water or get slippery when wet, and is easily cleaned. Wood, cement, composition and linoleum are used. Wood floors are not easily cleaned and are often slippery when wet. Cement floors are common in some parts of the country and relatively inexpensive, and if painted with special cement paint they do not absorb water. Some composition floors are not too hard, are less expensive than hardwood, and are easily cleaned. A floor covered with linoleum is easily wiped up, is impervious to moisture, and is easy to tread, but is slippery when wet. Oil paints are preferable to water color for the walls.

The room should be divided into a washing and an ironing section. The position of the stove will determine the details of this division. To make boiling the clothes convenient, the stove should be near the tub. If a washing machine is to be used, the tub should be so arranged that the garments go directly, without handling, from the machine through the wringer to the tub, and vice versa. If arrangement is well planned, one wash-tub will be sufficient with a washing machine.

Currie interrupted to say, "But, John, if the lights are turned out, how are we to know that you did not write those messages yourself?"

Without a smile on his face Bartley replied: "I did not intend to turn out the light. I am going to do what few mediums ever attempt to do: that is, to see if we can secure a message on these slates in full light. There have been so many frauds in slate-writing séances that a test made in the dark has no value."

As he spoke he tore the wrapping from the package and disclosed a number of ordinary school slates tied together with a string. When he had cut the string and placed the slates on the table before him, he added: "You might claim that these slates already have a message written on them, so I will wash the surface of each with water. If there was any writing on them, it will be wiped out."

With our eyes following every movement, he took a piece of cloth, dipped it into the glass of water, and carefully washed one side of a slate. As he was beginning to wash the other side, he paused and said to Currie, "You may think I have not washed the slate thoroughly enough; suppose, Currie, you take it and wash the other side yourself. Make a good job of it."

Currie's earnestness was almost laughable as he took the slate and turned it over and over, examining both surfaces. When he had finished he whispered to me, "There was not a darned thing on that slate."

The same method was employed with the other slates. First, Bartley would wash one side, then would call upon one of us to examine the slate and wash off the other side. I was left until the last, and I examined my slate very carefully before I touched it with the cloth. On the side which Bartley had washed little drops of water still clung. The unwashed side was dirty but showed no traces of having been written on.

When I had finished my task, Bartley took one of the slates and said: "You have seen there was no writing of any kind on these slates. I am going to give one to each of you. Miss Potter should place hers under her feet; Currie might sit on his; the rest of you can place them under your coats."

He gave us each a slate, and we did as he suggested. I wondered, as I placed mine under my coat, just what Bartley expected to discover. Somehow the whole thing seemed so absurd. He was so serious about it, however, that I began to believe that he must expect to receive a message of some sort. We sat silent and expectant, I, for one, feeling a little foolish.

Bartley, who had glanced at his watch several times, waited for five minutes to pass before he said, "Suppose, Currie, you look at your slate."

Currie grinned, as if to say he considered it all foolishness, but did as requested. As he glanced at his slate, the smile left his face, his jaw dropped, and his eyes grew big with wonder. He looked at it several seconds as if he could not believe his eyes, then slowly passed it to me. I took it eagerly, glanced at it, and in my turn was startled. There, however, in a sprawling hand, running across the slate that had been blank a few moments before, was written, "Currie, people who steal whisky out of a vault at midnight will come to a bad end."

Almost unable to credit my eyes, I stared at the slate. Both sides had been so thoroughly washed that when Currie had taken it they were still wet. How the writing had gotten on the slate, I could not imagine.

Miss Potter gave a sudden cry. She had risen to her feet with shining eyes. Holding her slate in one trembling hand, she tried to speak, failed, then cried triumphantly: "It's a message—a message from Mr. Slyke! I knew it would come," and sank back into her chair, adding, as if unable to believe the evidence of her own senses, "It's in his own handwriting, his very own, and he tells me what to do."

Bartley took the slate from her trembling fingers, a curious expression on his face. He placed it on the table, and we crowded round to examine it. This time the entire surface of the slate was covered with writing, in the same sprawling hand that had written on Currie's and mine. The letters were large and looked as if the person who had written the message had been very weak. Too astonished to speak, we bent and read:

"All will be well with me if you aid those who are trying to discover who injured me. For my peace, do this: listen to the medium—" and the message trailed off in a large S.

"It's Mr. Slyke's writing," Miss Potter cried excitedly. "I recognize it. There was nothing on the slate when I placed my feet on it."

Bartley faced her gravely, with something in his manner that gave me the impression that he was not at all surprised at what was happening. "Then you are absolutely sure it is in his writing?" he asked.

Not trusting herself to speak, she simply nodded.

At that moment the bell rang, and the butler passed through the room on his way to the door. In the second before his return, I saw Doctor King steal a look at his slate, and, from the startled look on his face, I knew that he, too, had received a message. Meeting my eyes, he gave me a faint, wondering smile and shook his head doubtfully.

The man whom the butler ushered in was the medium that Bartley had secured in New York. He was very tall and thin, dressed in black, with white, unhealthy face, shifty eyes, and hair a bit too long.

After he had been introduced, Bartley told us that we were to begin the séance at once. The first thing to be done was to place the medium in a chair in the corner and tie his hands and feet firmly. Roche was selected to draw the rope through the rungs of the chair, tie his hands behind his back, and place a gag in his mouth so that he could not speak. He performed his task with the thoroughness of a police officer trained in the work; and when he informed us that the medium could neither move nor speak, I believed him.

At Bartley's suggestion we seated ourselves around the table. It was a small one, not very heavy in construction. We placed our hands on its surface as directed, and linked them together by hooking the thumb and little finger of each hand around the finger of the hand next to it. We were told that under no circumstance were we to break this circle.

Bartley spent some time in making sure that we were arranged in the proper manner. I was seated with Currie on my left, my little finger clasped around his thumb, and Bartley himself on my right. He rose and turned off the lights, then groped his way back to my side, and a second later his finger closed around mine.

I confess that I felt a bit like a fool as I waited there in the pitch darkness. What we were doing seemed childish; yet back of it all there was such a general air of expectancy that I was tense with excitement. The great draperies had been drawn over the windows, and not even a ray of light penetrated the room. Just what it was that we were waiting for I did not know. Something might or might not take place, the medium had said. We sat in silence for a number of minutes, minutes that dragged endlessly. I must confess that to me they were not the most pleasant I had ever spent.

Someone drew a deep breath, and I thought the table had started to move. Then a silence followed, so deep that I could not hear even my neighbor breathing. I felt as if I were all alone in the darkness. Only the reassuring touch of the fingers on each side of me drew me back to sanity.

Suddenly, when I was least expecting it, I felt the table under my fingers sway back and forth for a second, then fall back upon the floor with a little bang. Currie breathed hard, as if afraid; and his grasp on my fingers tightened. Then without warning came a series of ten knocks, faintly, as if someone were knocking at a distant door. I could not tell where they came from. They seemed to be in the air, on the floor, everywhere but on the table. One thing was sure: they did not come from the direction in which the medium sat. Besides, he had been tied too tightly in his chair to have been able to make them.

Silence again, then more raps, quick little running raps, never very loud, then would start and stop a second, then trip away like little feet running to and fro.

"Are you there?" Bartley's voice asked, hesitatingly.

Almost before his words had died away, there came a series of loud raps, almost falling over each other.

Then Bartley's voice again, cool but low, "Can you communicate with us?" I had expected that the raps would reply at once, but instead there was a long silence. Several times Bartley repeated the question, and still no answer.

At length he asked, "Shall we try some other method?"

Raps answered, tumbling over each other in their eagerness, and the table tipped so violently that I expected it would fall over. It returned to an upright position with a bang, then silence again. A deep moan from the direction of the medium startled me, then more moans interspersed with sighs.

A shrill, thin voice, ghostly and far away, said brokenly, "Oh—oh—I—ff-fee you; I know—you are—there—there—"

A silence, in which I hardly dared to breathe. The table tipped a second time and a deep voice which seemed familiar, though I could not place it, said, "I am here—here, though you do not see me. I was murdered by—by—"

What it might have added we never knew. Miss Potter suddenly cried out, not in fear but in joy, "It's Mr. Slyke—his voice—"

Bartley, afraid that she might rise in her excitement and break the circle, whispered to her, and she settled back.

I now recognized the voice as that of Slyke, a little changed, it is true, but enough like it to be easily identified. I was too dazed to think; the raps, the darkness, the voice, and the fear that was creeping into my heart, were almost more than I could bear.

Silence again, broken only by the uneasy moans of the medium. Then, without warning, someone cried in terror, "Look! The stairs, the stairs!"

Almost in front of us was the stairway leading to the tower room. There upon the top step, was a tiny light, unlike any light that I had ever seen. It was hardly larger than a silver dollar, of an unearthly whiteness; then it began to grow larger and larger, until it changed into a luminous arm floating in the air. I heard someone gasp in fear, then all was silence again. The light continued to change. Now there were two arms, then the trunk of a body, and then, out of nothing, an entire human figure appeared, glowing with a soft, pale light in the darkness. A misty figure with ghostly, shining feet and hands, but no head! It began to float down the stairs, a step at a time, seemingly upon the air.

Currie's hand trembled under mine; and I controlled my own fear with an effort, as I pressed it reassuringly.

Half way down the stairs a head appeared above the body. One moment there was nothing there; the next, a face with burning eyes and tangled hair. I knew instinctively whose it was. It belonged to Slyke, the murdered man. A voice that seemed to come from the mouth said, "I have come back to place my hand on the person that killed me."

The figure took a step toward us, the table before us felt over on the floor with a crash, and a voice almost at my elbow cried in terror, "For God's sake, turn on that light. Don't let that d-d thing touch me!"

As suddenly as it had appeared, the figure vanished, and we were left in the darkness.

CHAPTER XIV

The Murderer Speaks.

Who turned on the lights I do not know. As soon as they flashed on, we looked at each other inquiringly, our eyes filled with fear. Who had cried out in terror and broken the circle?

Bartley motioned to us to sit down again, and took his stand back of the table. He seemed to me to be very weary, and his eyes rested on us sadly, as if he were reluctant to proceed further. It was not until we moved restlessly under his intent gaze that he said, "I am not going to make any comment on what we have just seen." He paused for a second, then added impressively, "But I think I ought to tell you that I know who killed both Slyke and Briffure."

There was a murmur of astonishment. Currie looked at me appealingly, but I knew no more than he. Roche whispered to Black, and they exchanged looks of bewilderment.

Bartley still hesitated, as if he were very reluctant to continue.

"I know that some of you doubt if we can prove that Mr. Slyke was murdered. You say there are no clues, and I admit that I have never seen a case in which there were so few. There is no doubt, however, that he was murdered, though it is difficult to say what the motive was. In the case of Briffure, it was very simple."

"Simple?" Roche gasped.

"Yes, simple. There was but one reason and one way, and even one person, that could have killed him."

This statement was too much for Roche; he shook his head in disbelief.

"After the party was over, Slyke asked Mr. Lawrence to stay behind and offered to sell him some whisky. They had a drink, then Lawrence went home. But we found three glasses, showing that someone besides Lawrence had drunk with Slyke. Let us say this third person killed Slyke. Understand me: I do not believe that, when he came, he had any intention of killing him—that came later. We will assume that Slyke and this third person went upon the balcony, for what reason I cannot say, but I am sure that Slyke was the one that suggested going there. No murderer would have selected it, voluntarily, as a place in which to kill his victim."

He paused for a second, then continued: "After Slyke had been killed, the thought occurred to the murderer that it was possible to make his death look like suicide. He undressed the body in the room above the bedroom, and later carried his clothing downstairs, placing it on a chair beside the bed. But he overlooked a stocking that had fallen on the floor behind the door of the room above. Criminals, no matter how shrewd, always make some mistake that betrays them; this person drew the bed-clothes up around Slyke's neck. If he had not done that, I doubt if we would ever have suspected that Slyke was murdered. The shot took effect at once. It would have been impossible for him to have drawn the bed-clothes up around his own neck, and placed his hands by his side before he died."

The doctor's voice sounded perplexed as he said, "But, Mr. Bartley, this is all a rather fine-spun theory." "I expected that someone would say that," Bartley smiled. "It is more than an unsupported theory. However, let us proceed. The murderer went down to the living room and brought back with him two cards, which he threw on the floor of the room where the glasses were. If its being suicide was questioned, then the finding of the cards would throw suspicion on the members of the card party."

ANNIVERSARY GAZETTE

Preparations are well underway for a big Souvenir Edition of the Weymouth Gazette-Transcript to be issued June 15—the day before the town celebrates its 300th Anniversary.

It will be a paper of 24 pages or more—perhaps 32 or 40 pages,—depending on the encouragement and support which the publishers receive.

Historical articles will tell of Weymouth of Yesterday and Weymouth of Today. Sketches will be printed of our notable guests, Chief Justice William H. Taft and Governor Channing Cox, and of the men and women who have contributed to the growth and progress of Weymouth.

All the patriotic organizations, lodges and associations of the town have been invited to contribute historical reviews, and already there has been a hearty response. Several of these sketches will be illustrated.

One page will be devoted to the Selectmen of Weymouth for 75 years, a complete list of these officials being printed, giving the years of service.

Another page will be devoted to the history and progress of the Weymouth Gazette; another to an illustrated sketch of Weymouth, England, and the sketches of our Grand Army men will be reprinted.

Already the manufacturers of Weymouth and other business houses have contracted for large spaces, and there will be writeups of these enterprises. Every business house in Weymouth should be represented. Upon request, our special agent, Mr. E. A. Merriman, will call. As the time is very limited there should be no delay. All copy for advertisements and sketches should reach the Gazette office before June 10. An earlier date would be greatly appreciated.

Let everybody help to make the Anniversary Gazette (the home paper) a paper of which they will be proud. All yearly subscribers will receive the Gazette at the usual rate, but all sales by news agents and newsboys will be at ten cents each. As the edition will be limited advance orders should be placed for the Anniversary Gazette.

DOROTHEA DIX TENT, D. OF V.

There was a large number of sisters present at the service held at the Old South Union church, South Weymouth, Sunday, May 27, and the exercises were enjoyed by all.

On Memorial Day, as is our custom, we presented each comrade of Post 58 with a buttonhole bouquet before they left to decorate their departed comrades graves. Our president, Nellie G. Loud, was a guest of Post 58 on that day enjoying the privilege of being with them in one of their autos for the entire day.

S. OF V. AUXILIARY

S. of V. Auxiliary, No. 31, held memorial services for their departed sister, Susie H. Hawes, Monday evening, May 28. Rev. E. E. Story paid a very fitting tribute to our late sister. Sister Evelyn Philbrook rendered two selections with sister Mary Flint at the piano. Master Robert Pratt spoke a piece on Memorial Day in a pleasing manner.

There will be a whist party held in G. A. R. hall Monday afternoon, June 11, at 2.30 o'clock.

The sisters were all pleased to have with them at the meeting Commander Hawes of S. of V. and Counsellor Arthur Robinson; also to know that Sister Robinson is improving.

THE GINGER BREAD CLUB

The Ginger Bread club consists of eleven girls of the Shaw school. These girls under the direction of Miss Sarah Brasil, local leader of Weymouth, and their teacher, Miss Mae Lettany, organized a bread-making class to meet once each week for instruction and practice. This class began its work in the early fall.

Wednesday night last the club conducted its last business meeting, gave an exhibition in Citizens hall, Nash's Corner, and eleven smooth, brown loaves of bread were there to be examined, tasted and scored. Miss Hayes of the Norfolk county extension school rated the loaves as to external appearance, crust, crumbs, flavor, etc., and the first reward of merit went to Miss Phyllis Price with a 97 percent score, second to Miss Jane Whitten 91½ and third to Miss Doris Adams 90 percent.

This club is indeed a bona fide one, organized with a president, Miss Lydia Monroe, a vice-president, Miss Eva Blenis, a secretary, Miss Alma Roche and a treasurer, Miss Doris Adams. Its entertainment committee is Miss Phyllis Price and the refreshment committee Miss Alice Tirrell. The other members are the Misses Marjorie Monroe, Rose Courtney, Dorothy Leach, Dorothy Smith, and Jane Whitten. Their motto is "Bear and forbear"; the name "Ginger Bread" has a double significance, the first part serving as the inspiration, the second the purpose and were they to put their bread on the market the trade mark chosen would be a little bear.

Not only did they learn to make bread, biscuits, and muffins, but cake and pie and each girl had to put in her fifty hours of housework and hand in an essay on what the club had accomplished—these essays for the government files.

The mothers and friends of these 12 and 13-year-old girls were given the benefit of being present at the final business meeting of the club, conducted in a most approved business-like way by their president. We were also entertained by their own talent—music, readings and a kitchen orchestra. Refreshments made by the group were served. During the evening Miss Brasil was presented with a token of appreciation, friendship and good-will—a gold piece which she immediately decided to keep for good luck.

During the season these girls have by means of food sales earned the money to send their delegate to the Norfolk school convention, presented to the Citizens Association of Precinct Four $5 and covered all their running expenses. They are indeed to be congratulated.

CHAUTAUQUA NOTES

A very representative meeting of the guarantors of the 1923 Chautauqua was held at the Clapp Memorial building Monday evening. A splendid spirit of co-operation prevailed while enthusiasm for Chautauqua marked every action. Nearly everyone expressed satisfaction of August 15—21 as the Chautauqua dates for this summer. It was pleasing as well as encouraging to hear reports of interest concerning the coming program from all parts of the town. Such interest and co-operation will assure a successful Chautauqua for 1923.

The following officers were elected: J. Caleb Justice, chairman; George A. Dunning, vice chairman; Earl E. Story, secretary; William A. Hodges, treasurer; directors, P. J. Derrig, Frank Bryant, Bowdoin B. Smith, Arthur Cunningham, Louise E. Alexander. Two more directors are to be elected at the next meeting of the guarantors. The officers and directors constitute the executive committee.

Monday, June 25, was set as the next meeting of the guarantors.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The program at the High school for Memorial Day included salute to flag led by President Shields; "America" by school; song by Muriel Hanson, reading by Ruth Dunning; cornet solo by George Puopolo; vocal solo by Stephanie Price; cello solo by Auralie Melville, reading by Alice Ashton; instrumental trio by Miss Melville, M. Bates and R. Bates; Star Spangled Banner by school. All the above numbers were encored, but the program by the veterans surprised all. Commander Bicknell was first introduced and he was told to introduce his comrades. Adjutant Turner recited a gem; Oliver Burrell told how he lived to be 88; Mrs. Carrie F. Loring brought the greetings of the Department W. R. C. and Mrs. Abrams of the local W. R. C.; Chaplain Hawes recited the "Seige of Waterloo" and Officer of the Day Dunbar said the people seemed to be making the last days of the G. A. R. the best days. Other veterans were present, but begged to be excused. All were thanked by Mr. Hilton for their presence.

Last Friday the senior class held a meeting. The chairmen of various committees were chosen, chairman of dance committee, Marjorie Stetson; chairman of picture committee, Lesley Lovell; chairman of banquet committee, Irving Keene. The president, William Shields, was chosen class marshal.

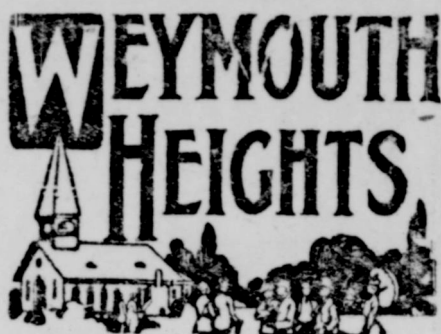

The Misses Lesley Lovell and Elizabeth Curtin spent the week-end at Bridgewater Normal school, the guests of Miss Mary Fallon.

WILBUR THEATRE, BOSTON

If one enjoys good singing, melodies of the whistling kind that haunt one, snappy dancing of the whirlwind kind that fairly makes you gasp and wonder how so many different steps can be set to music, comedy of the clean and wholesome type that keeps you laughing; if these are the things you want in theatrical endeavor, then wend your way to the Wilbur theatre Boston, at any of the performances beginning Monday (May 28) either Wednesday or Saturday matinee, or any of the night shows, or one of the midnight performances on Thursday nights for a lot of good laughs and a good time.

"Liza" is the musical comedy and it had a run for the past six months in New York, opening at Daly's theater, formerly the 63rd Street Musical Hall, and later moving to the Nora Bayes theater. You cannot go wrong on "Liza" for it is the fastest dancing show ever staged; it is the show that won't let your feet behave, and better known as the dark hued princess of musical comedy thrills.

—The new Quincy theatre at Quincy will close for the season after the performance Saturday night.

Lively Meeting of Committee

A well attended meeting of the Celebration Committee was held at the Town Offices Tuesday night. Col. Bauer went over with the committee the plans to date of the parade.

A committee to provide transportation, both auto and horses had been appointed, consisting of Fred O. Stevens of the Water Department, chairman, with Henry K. Brown of South Weymouth, Carl F. Prescott of East Weymouth, Edward A. Hunt of Weymouth, and Sidney Dunbar of North Weymouth. If you have auto conveyances, trucks, or touring cars that can be used, or saddle horses, please notify any of the committee at once.

William J. Holbrook read a letter from Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, saying orders had been issued for participation of sailors and use of boats for the occasion. The sailors will be from the U. S. Battleship Utah.

The officials of the city of Gloucester have accepted the invitation to be present.

Captain Phelan, U. S. A., had gone over the route of the parade with Col. Bauer and was much pleased with arrangements for his men that were being made.

Mr. Bradley, it was reported by Commander Stein, A. L., would return today or tomorrow, and subject of permission to use his land adjoining Great Hill Park would be renewed.

It was announced that the Nevin School Pageant could be repeated. Col. Bauer reported the flags and guidons for the schools had been ordered.

Col. Bauer reported on the line of march as printed elsewhere in the Gazette.

Chief Pratt reported how travel would be handled; the streets that would remain open for travel, so as not to interfere with the parade.

Ed. Mulligan reported on the amplifier for the speaking at Clapp Memorial Field.

The question of meals was discussed for those in the parade. Col. Bauer reported that it would be necessary for the soldiers to have two meals here. Horses must be provided for. It was voted to feed these men, if necessary, also the sailors, and that the school children receive light refreshments. Voted to reconsider the vote to feed everyone in the parade passed at the last meeting.

The motion prevailed, that with his other duties, Col. Bauer act as chief caterer.

To make the expenditure of the town appropriation legal in every way, on motion of W. J. Holbrook, H. H. Joy was elected chairman of the Celebration Committee; that all bills bear the "O. K." of Col. Bauer before they go to the Selectmen for payment.

Ed. Mulligan was willing his land bordering on Whitman's Pond be used for watering the horses, and the soldiers might bathe if they wish.

The members of the Collation Committee authorized at the last meeting were announced by Chairman Joy as follows: Mrs. Fred H. Alden of East Weymouth, Mrs. I. E. Johnson of South Weymouth, Mrs. Charles Sturtevant of South Weymouth, Mrs. Joshua Holbrook of North Weymouth, Mrs. Drusilla Davis of Weymouth.

Howard Clark spoke of the Boy Scout celebration at Fort Revere, but said the Boy Scouts would return for the parade. Their position in the parade was left to the chief marshal.

Representatives of Crescent lodge asked what was expected of them, and expressed willingness to take active part.

The chief of staff or representative will be at the Town Offices on Thursday, June 14, from 7.30 to 9, to meet the representative of any organization to discuss the parade. Be there! Have your organization present. Help the staff perfect all the parade plans.

It was reported by Howard Clark that a band concert would be given in Washington Square from 8 to 10 P. M. Friday night by Milo Burke's band, under auspices of the Merchants Association.

ALL ORGANIZATIONS SHOULD REPORT IMMEDIATELY to Major Swan at the Weymouth Trust Co. what part they are to take in the parade. It was voted to ask the School Department for use of the Franklin School grounds for the use of the families of the men who will gladly give the use of their services and autos in the parade, that their families can have a meeting place and see the parade to good advantage.

Adjourned to June 12.

"That the town raise and appropriate a sum not exceeding $3750 for the purpose of meeting one half the actual deficit incurred by the Eastern Mass. St. Railway Co. during the nine months period ending February 29, 1924, for maintaining passenger transportation on the streets of this town, provided that the Transportation Committee are able to arrange with the Trustees of the Eastern Mass. Prizes to be Awarded to Schools and Organizations

Undoubtedly the schools of Weymouth and the pupils will take increased interest in the parade of the Weymouth Tercentenary because of the fact that prizes will be given. The committee authorize the following:

1.—For the best school participation—A first and second prize. These prizes will be framed pictures for the schoolroom, suitably marked.
2.—For the best appearing organization of Boy or Girl Scouts or Campfire Girls, number, appearance, and marching to be considered. A first prize
3.—For the best appearing marching club or society from Weymouth, not included under No. 2, a first prize
4.—For the best floats or features, not included under No. 1, a first and a second prize

No participant will receive more than one prize. The number of prizes will be increased if the number of entries warrant it.

Ribbons indicating the prizes won will be placed on the winning features and the guidons of the winning organizations before passing in review.

The Sacred Heart school are to enter the "Liberty Bell," the committee being Francis Doucette and Wilbur Haskins.

Referendum Wanted on Street Railway Appropriation

A petition has been filed with the Selectmen for a referendum vote on the Street Railway article at recent representative town meeting.

Relative to a referendum, the Town Meeting Act reads: "The questions submitted at said town meeting shall be determined by vote of a majority of the voters at large voting thereon. The questions so submitted shall be stated upon the ballot in the same language and form in which they were stated when presented to said representative town meeting by the Moderator, as they appear upon the records of said representative town meeting."

Suppose the vote was "Yes" on the above question, would it be satisfactory to the petitioners? Who were the town officials who said that "there should be a law compelling signatories to a referendum petition to be liable for the expense if the referendum fails to change the original vote?"

Under the law the Selectmen are required to call a special town election if the petition is in due form signed by one hundred voters with their addresses.

Rumor has it that the trustees of the Street Railway Company may discontinue the Weymouth service unless the appropriation is voted.

At the special town meeting the motion submitted by the Moderator read as follows: "I move that the town raise and appropriate a sum not exceeding $3750 for the purpose of meeting one-half of the actual deficit incurred by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company during the nine months ending Feb. 29, 1924, for maintaining passenger transportation on the streets of this town, provided that the Transportation Committee are able to arrange with the Trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. that this town shall receive an equitable credit for its share of the revenue received on the East Weymouth-Quincy line."

300 Anniversary of Weymouth

DAN, THE DRIVER, SAYS:

Summer isn't far off, unless the weather prophets are. We have a lot of big things in our town: for instance, the taxes. I often wonder who pays for the cigar that the salesman hands you. Most merchants have succeeded by giving the public what it wants, not what it needs. We used to pass our Sundays in church; now it is the church we pass on Sunday. The world may not be getting much better; but we are not getting much better ourselves. In these times a man's days are numbered; and generally it is an automobile license number.

RESIGNATION OF PASTOR

It was with surprise and regret that the Pilgrim church at North Weymouth received on Sunday the resignation of their pastor, Rev. T. B. Bitler, who has accepted a call to a Somerville church. Rev. J. Caleb Justice of the Union church occupied the pulpit Sunday morning in exchange with the pastor, and read the following letter:

"To the members of Pilgrim church and parish: For some little time it has seemed evident that a change in pastoral relations would be of advantage both to Pilgrim church and its minister. Accordingly I have felt free to consider any opportunity which might lead to that end. Such opportunity has now arisen. Prospect Hill Congregational church of Somerville having extended me a call to become its minister which I have accepted.

"I therefore tender my resignation as pastor of Pilgrim church, to take effect Sept. 1. This date will complete four years of service with you.
The time spent among you has meant very much both to Mrs. Bitler and myself. Many delightful friendships and pleasant associations have been formed and we have received many kindnesses at your hands. We have found North Weymouth a happy community in which to live, and contemplate leaving with genuine regret.
We leave feeling that we remain much in your debt.

"With deep appreciation for the cordial co-operation afforded on the part of so many and for the charity and forbearance of those who have not seen their way clear to cooperate with gratitude for what measure of success, has attended our united efforts and with earnest wishes for God's blessing on Pilgrim church and all it concerns, I am sincerely and affectionately your pastor, Thomas B.
Bitler."

STATE FEDERATION

Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, Mrs. Annie
J. Libby, and Mrs. Alice P. Jewell attended the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's clubs held at the New Ocean House, Swampscott. There were from 1000 to 1500 present at each meeting.
Nearly all were guests at the hotel and remained during the three days.
The hotel management have built a mammoth garage, one-half of which is partitioned off and is called "Convention hall." It was decorated with flags and bunting. The aisles were covered with yard-wide hemp matting and there were 2500 chairs and they were well filled during the sessions, many coming from Lynn and Swampscott and nearby towns. At the reception given Friday night at the hotel 1050 women were counted as having passed the reception line. It was a wonderful meeting, reports from the different committees showing the immense amount of work having been accomplished during the past year.
It was reported that $183,000 had been raised and spent in public and charitable work during this last year.
Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of State Federation, presided and is certainly a wonderful woman, always ready with the right word at the right time, a fine parliamentarian and equal to any occasion. The meetings were much enjoyed by all.

Democracy Keynote of Memorial Day Address

Many favorable comments have been heard of the Memorial Day address of Rev. Earl E. Story before the Grand Army of the Republic. An abstract is printed:

We meet today to honor our dead heroes, to talk about our country, and to teach and learn lessons of loyalty and patriotism.

When God called Abraham to leave his home and friends and go out into a land which He would show him, He encouraged his servant by making this promise, "I will make of thee a great nation." These words addressed to Abraham can be as truthfully used to describe our own fair land as it ever could be to the valleys of Judea on the plains of Asdralon.

In every essential respect God has made of us a great nation. Dr. Edward C. Locke says, "We are a child of Providence as truly as was the destruction of the Armada a work of Divine intervention." Farrar once said that "America was God's destined heritage—not for aristocracy, not for tyranny, not for privilege—but for liberty, for progress, and for the development of a great and noble type of righteous, fearless, and independent manhood—Democracy."

If ours is a great democracy then it has cost much to make it so. And you men who wore in time of war the uniform of your country know the cost for you have paid the price.

As I see your depleted ranks I cannot but think of that classic of Joseph Addison. He represents humanity as a great throng passing over a bridge of four and twenty arches. The bridge was set with numerous secret trap doors, which unexpectedly opened ever and anon letting the unwary passengers drop through, until toward the farther end of the last span none remained to pass. So year by year as you gather in these services your ranks grow thinner and thinner. It will not be long until you come to the last arch and none of your number will be there.

We cannot help but ask, what then?
Let us never forget that this is a Christian nation. It was consecrated by Columbus when he landed upon the shores of San Salvador.
Christian men at the helm of government: Harding, Coolidge, Cox, Fuller etc. Thank God for them!
Tomorrow may be a trying time for the soul of America—but we are to be patient, knowing that God doeth all things well.

WE'D LIKE TO, BUT WE CAN'T

Once in a while some reader thinks it is a personal dig because we stopped his paper when his subscription expired. We should be only too glad to carry our subscribers on forever without them having to pay anything; we find we cannot do it.
Printers have a habit—surely they never need the cash—of wanting their money when Saturday comes.
They earn and should have it. The paper houses that supply newspaper offices with paper also want their money at the end of every thirty days. Linotype factories do not give typesetting machines away. So there you are. The publisher of a newspaper must pay bills or the sheriff will tack a notice on his door. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that the reader pay for his paper.

Our policy is to try to make the paper worth the selling price. If the printers would agree to work for glory, the paper houses to furnish paper without cost, and the type founders make shipments of material then it would be possible for us to without money and without price, carry subscribers from year to year without money.

You can always tell when your subscription expires by looking at date appearing immediately after your name on your paper, and help the bookkeeper by paying at expiration date.

The VETERAN MOTORIST gives a few rules of the road

"On approaching an intersecting highway, corner or curve, where his view is obstructed, the driver of a motor-vehicle shall sound his horn and slow up enough to enable him to stop readily if necessary."

(The Veteran Motorist)

ONE afternoon last summer, I was looking out of a store window on the Post Road. A heavily loaded truck happened to be coming along. Maybe a hundred and fifty yards or so up a side street, a low-hung touring car pulled out of a yard and the driver hit it up for the Post Road as though he had to make a train in thirty seconds. Matter of fact, he was just taking 'the sweetest, dearest, etc.' out for an afternoon spin.

"The truck and sport car got to the corner at the same time. No horns, no slowing up. Then a last minute struggle to avoid colliding. I think one of them must have had a horse-shoe under his seat, for it was just about as close as I'd ever seen, or want to. As it was, one of the steering knuckles on the car was snapped in the shuffle.

"Not a reason under the sun for it, just plain carelessness. And that's what causes three-fourths of all motoring accidents today. Take it from me, it pays to stick to the rules of the road nowadays—all of them—all the time."

SUMMER ST. 4, WALTONS 4

The game Sunday between Summer St. and Walton's of Quincy was one of the best ever played at Raymond's field and after eleven innings of brilliant playing resulted in a tie of four each. The day was threatening and it looked as if the rain would come any minute, but the crowd would not be denied and rather than disappoint so many that came from a distance it was decided to start the game. Warburton, Summer Street pitching ace, held the visitors to four hits in ten innings, after the first inning, and this was some feat. It was his first game of the present season and outside the first inning it was a remarkable performance.

FIRST INNING

Waltons—Connelley singled, Bradley singled, Jerine sacrificed, Patterson singled, scoring Connelley and Bradley. Patterson went to second on the throw home to get Bradley. Kelley safe on error, Patterson reaching third. Warbridge long fly to center permitted Patterson to score. Kelley struck out. Three runs.

Summer St.—McCarthy out at first. Ed Lukeman out at first. Sandwyn tripled; it was one of the longest hits ever made at Summer St. Humphrey safe, Wambridge, Quincy third baseman not throwing the ball to first as Humphrey is fleet-footed and knowing Lefty would probably score. W. Lukeman doubled, scoring Lefty. Loneragan out at first.

SECOND INNING

Waltons—Willett struck out. Crawford and Erickson out at first. Summer St.—Dalto singled, Rosetti, Warburton, and McCarthy out at first.

THIRD INNING

Walton—Connelley struck out, Bradley filed to center, Jerine fouled to McCarthy, Jimmie making a fine running catch. Summer St.—J. Lukeman out at first, Sandwyn got a base on balls, Humphrey and W. Lukeman out at first.

FOURTH INNING

Walton—Patterson singled, Kelley fanned, Wambridge out at first, Patterson going to second, Millett filed to J. Lukeman.

Summer St.—Dalto singled for second time, Loneragan out at first, Rosetti singled, Warburton and McCarthy out at first.

FIFTH INNING

Waltons—Crawford base on balls, out stealing second, Erickson fanned. Connelley out at first.

Summer St.—J. Lukeman out at first, Lefty singled, Humphrey doubled and Bill Lukeman up. The fans gave him a good hand and called for a hit. He pounded the ball savagely into the sandpit for two bases, scoring Sandwyn and Humphrey. This tied the score and greatly pleased the crowd. Dalto and Loneragan out at first. Space will not permit any further detail.

Waltons went out in order in the sixth, seventh and eighth. Summer St. did likewise in the sixth and seventh, but in the eighth Humphrey led off with a hit, stole second, went to third on Bill Lukeman's out at first and scored on Loneragan's fly to left field on the throw.

Waltons got this run back in the ninth and neither side scored in the tenth or eleventh. It was then two minutes of 6 and as the law only permits the games between 2 and 6 it had to be stopped.

The features were, for Walton's, the battery work was excellent and fine fielding by Wambridge and Crawford.

For Summer St. most difficult running catch by Dalto, Loneragan's fielding, McCarthy's and Sandwyn's fielding, Humphrey's batting, getting three hits, Sandwyn's batting, and Bill Lukeman's two two-base hits at a critical time.

Next Sunday the same clubs play again at 3 o'clock and Loneragan will play with Summer St.

—Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin White (Katherine Belmont) of Rochester, N. Y., who were married Tuesday, are here on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Delorey of Common street.

—Frederick Carroll, a well known young man, and Miss Frances Judas of Randolph, were married in that town last evening. The groom's brother, William Carroll was best man.

—The alarm from box 38, Washington Square, and box 23, East Braintree at 10.30 Sunday night, brought a big crowd of people to the square, for an automobile fire. The auto which belonged to a Worcester party was badly burned. The driver, who was smoking a cigarette while looking for engine trouble, it is said caused the fire. The cigarette ignited the fumes of the gas.

—The Bellevue A. C. defeated the Zion Hill team of Hingham at the Hunt school grounds Sunday by a score of 13 to 1.

Investors --- Certificates of Deposit

The maturity, redemption, or sale of securities may place an investor in possession of funds at a time when he regards conditions unfavorable for their permanent re-investment. Or surplus income may accumulate which may be needed within a few weeks or months to meet some large payment.

We recommend, under either of these conditions, a certificate of deposit which will not only provide safety and a good income for every day that it is held, but will give its holder assurance of the immediate availability of funds when needed.

PA ASKITT "HELPS" TOMMYDoubtful, However, if He Added Much to the Youngster's Store of Useful Knowledge."Pa, there's an airplane," he announced.
"Yes, Thomas," said Pa Askitt, absently. "Don't touch it!"

When he picked up the novel from beneath the geography book where he had hidden it, ma chanced to look up.

"What are you reading, Thomas?" she asked quickly.

"My geog—I mean er—this." There was nothing to do but show it.

"Give it to me!" said ma, sternly. Pa looked up.

"So, that's what you read instead of doing your lessons, eh?" he said frowningly. "Boy, get on your lesson this instant, or I'll give you a taste of the strap!"

"You can help him, William," suggested ma.

"I can't—I got—"

"O, yes, you can, too. Just help him with his lessons. Somebody must do it, and I'm too busy," said ma, with finality.

"O, darn it, come along then and be mighty quick about it!" said pa crossly. "Now, what the deuce do you spell bank with a big B for?"

"Well, don't you always say that a bank is no good unless it has a large capital?" reminded Tommy.

Pa said nothing but ma snickered.

"Say, pa, what are three articles containing starch?"

"Why, er, a collar and two cuffs," answered pa.

Tommy looked doubtful about writing it down and took the safest course. He didn't.

"Why have words roots, pa?"

"Words have roots because how else could they grow?" and pa smiled the smile of the wiselheimer.—Detroit Free Press.

ABODE OF "THUNDER BIRD"Indian Legend Concerning Tract in the "Bad Lands" Never Visited by White Man.

Half a dozen miles southwest of scenic, S. D., in the very heart of the Bad lands, is an area of approximately four square miles. No white man's foot has ever rested there so far as can be learned, the Detroit News says. The Indians call the plot "sichi makoche," meaning "bad place." Deep canyons and gorges lead up to spire-like pinnacles, and every attempt to follow their tortuous paths thus far has ended in failure.

Chief Flaming Arrow, a veteran of the frontier days, gives what probably is the Sioux belief. Many years ago, the chief said, before the pale face came, here was the place where dwelt the "Thunder Bird" high in the pinnacles of stone. This wall of rock kept out unwelcome visitors, the chief contended, and added that the protected area is rich in food, sunlight and warmth, and has pure, cold streams of running water.

Artistic Ancient Earrings.

Within the last decade has occurred the return of the earring, so long laid aside. Few seen today, however, surpass in taste and delicate finish the earrings of Biote, the daughter of Aristotle, which were found in Chalci, where the young woman was buried.

These ornaments represented doves swinging in golden hoops. The miniature birds were marvelously wrought, the feathers of granulated gold, the wings and breasts enriched with bands of color supplied by inserted gems. Precious stones gleamed like tiny sparks for the eyes. Daintiest of all, the tall feathers were so finely made and curiously adjusted as to move at the slightest motion of the pendant loop, so that whenever the proud wearer should toss or shake her head two attendant doves would seem to balance themselves upon their perches as live birds do in swinging on a bough.

Ancient.

Temple of the Moon, believed to be the oldest building on earth, is uncovered by scientific diggers at Ur on the lower Euphrates river. It was erected about 7,000 years ago, and was used continuously as a church for 4,000 years.

King Tut seems very ancient to us, yet here's a building that was about 40 centuries old when he was born. Discovery of the Temple of the Moon is important. It helps confirm the scientific belief that the first civilization was along the Euphrates. Somewhere in that vicinity probably was the cradle of the human race—though Chinese claim that their authentic history dates back at least 22,000 years.

Couldn't See the Joke.

I was nine and he was ten. I was deeply in love with him. When my birthday arrived, a heavy package also arrived, from him. I took off the first wrapping and there was another following and several more. Then came a shoe box. I opened it, and my heart was beating with excitement. But, lo, and behold! there lay a brick, with "greetings" printed on it. This was the beginning and also the end of my first love affair.—Exchange.

Machine Weighs, Counts Hay Bales.

After a day's work in baling hay, the owner of a hay press need only look at the recorder of a new automatic weighing and counting machine which Popular Mechanics Magazine describes and illustrates, to know how many bales his machine has turned out and their weight. As the bales come out of the press, they fall upon the device, weigh and count themselves.

FREE SERVICE

At an expense of $150 per year the Gazette-Transcript is offering advertisers a free service of "Ready-to-set-ads" and "Ready-to-use-cuts" that are both artistic and up-to-date. Every month there will be sixteen large pages and one hundred cuts from which selections may be made, the work of some of the best advertising writers and artists in the United States.

With this service the Gazette-Transcript is always ready to supply advertisers with copy for their ads—and attractive illustrations, too. Come in look over the proof sheets; or our advertising man will call upon request Phone Weymouth 0145.

One full feature-page every month is devoted to collective or community advertising,—that for June being "Trades Day—the Day of Big Opportunity", when all automobiles will be headed toward the stores of the Weymouths to trade. There is an attractive layout for local advertising.

The new Gazette-Transcript service includes:

- A June Wedding Page
- A Bank Page
- A Dry Goods Page
- A Millinery Page
- A Furniture Page
- A Clothing Page
- A Electric Page
- A Jewelry Page
- A Hardware Page
- An Ice Cream Page
- A Real Estate Page
- A Grocery Page
- A Shoe Page
- A Builders Page
- A Bakery Page
- A Sporting Page
- A Tailoring Page
- An Automobile Page
- Time-to-screen Page
- Restaurant Page
- Summer Home Needs

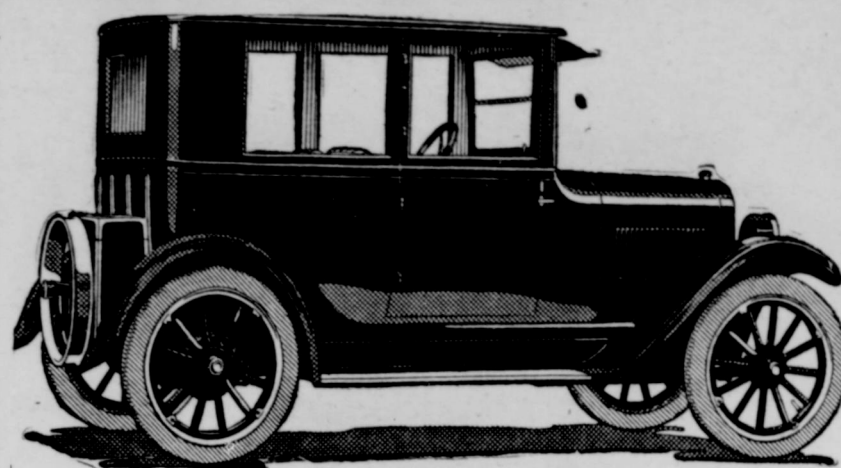

On each of these pages are several new cuts for illustrations, and write-ups for advertisements which may be copied or modified to suit individual needs.

With these illustrations merchants may have "Challenge Sales", "Money Saving Sales", "Dollar Days", and other sales. Something new every month, or every week if you wish. Something worth investigating.

Ready-to-set ads and ready-to-use cuts are heartily recommended by the Gazette-Transcript, and the service is free.

STUDEBAKER
TOURING CAR
$975More Cars Shake Themselves to Pieces Than Ever Wear Out

Charge that up to vibration.

Vibration causes cars to grow old prematurely by racking their chassis, destroying the "metal life" of vital parts, loosening up their bodies and causing squeaks and rattles. Frequent, costly repairs are the result.

The Studebaker Light-Six is freer from vibration than any car of its approximate size or weight yet produced.

This has been accomplished largely by a complete machining of the crankshaft and connecting rods on all surfaces—a practice used by Studebaker exclusively on cars at this price and found only on a very few other cars whose selling prices are from three to ten times as high as the Light-Six.

There are 61 precision operations in the manufacture of the crankshaft alone, 40 of which range in accuracy from one-quarter thousandth to one thousandth of an inch.

The Light-Six motor embodies the most advanced design known to automobile construction. And no chassis at any price is built to more exacting standards of materials and workmanship.

Aside from its mechanical excellence and its consequent long life, the Light-Six is handsome in design, extremely comfortable, sturdy, and we believe the most economical car to buy and operate ever offered at $975 or anywhere near this figure.

Its substantial all-steel body, one-piece, rain-proof windshield, ten-inch cushions upholstered in genuine leather, cowl lamps—these are among many features heretofore to be had only in higher-priced cars.

For 71 years the name Studebaker has stood for integrity, quality and value.

IS YOUR CREDIT GOOD?

IF IT IS, KEEP IT GOOD—IF IT ISN'T, MAKE IT GOOD

Pay all your bills by the 10th of the month

WHAT IS A CREDIT BUREAU?

A credit bureau, adequately organized and efficiently handled, is an institution of value in improving the tone of a community's credit. It educates the community in the meaning of credit by orienting for its credit-givers the standing of its credit seekers. It translates thrift, sobriety, prompt meeting of obligations, right living into very real and concrete terms for each individual. Performance is recorded and made to count in his credit relations. A credit record can be established which will insure accommodation during a period of misfortune, or a reputation may be acquired which will cut off every credit avenue. Bad bills reduced and slow accounts eliminated lessen business costs and hence decrease living expenses for consumers. People who know these things are given incentive to make their actions measure to the credit standard. A credit bureau which realizes its possibilities quickens and invigorates the ethics of business relations in its community.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

Post 79, American Legion, held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening in G. A. R. hall. There was a very large attendance and it was the liveliest meeting that the Post ever held.

A vast amount of business was transacted and one of the important things discussed was the Weymouth celebration which is to be held June 16.

The town has secured a band for us and the committee desire to have every ex-Service man in line that day, whether he has a uniform or not. As this celebration is the largest that Weymouth ever had or probably ever will have in our time, it is up to the Legion to make a mighty fine showing. So fall in boys and help make this affair a huge success.

Everything is progressing smoothly for the field day which is to be held July 14 and the committee report that it is going to be even bigger and better than last year.

Next Sunday afternoon the members of the Post are invited to attend the Norfolk County council meeting which is to be held at Medfield. No doubt you have all heard of the wonderful time we had at Needham a few weeks ago, and our comrades from Medfield have assured us just as good a time, if not better than we had at Needham, so it would be well as far as possible to attend this meeting.

There will be a meeting in G. A. R. hall next Tuesday evening at 8.30 for the Legion members, and all ex-Service men of the town are invited to attend and make arrangements for the Tercentenary parade. So get together boys and dig up every man that was in the service and have him at this meeting.

There will be a social meeting of the Post some time the last of the month, the date to be given out later.

WEYMOUTH POST, A. L.

Dear Comrade:
The townspeople of Weymouth have called on Weymouth Post, No. 79, A. L., to join with them in their celebration of Weymouth's 300th birthday. This celebration, as you no doubt know, is to take place on June 16th,—part of the ceremony to be held in North Weymouth on Great Hill, and the remainder to be held on Clapp Memorial Field, East Weymouth. From Great Hill to East Weymouth we will parade, and it is in this parade that I want Weymouth Post to make a creditable showing.

At our regular monthly business meeting held Monday evening, June 4, it was voted that every ex-service man, whether a legionnaire or not, be asked to turn out and parade with Weymouth Post. As commander of Weymouth Post I wish to take this opportunity of cordially inviting every ex-service man in Weymouth, not affiliated with any other military organization, to turn out with the boys of Post No. 79 and be a soldier for a day as we were not long ago. Again as commander of Weymouth Post and being deeply interested in its welfare and as one interested in civic affairs I sincerely hope that every legionnaire as well as every ex-service man will consider it his duty to help make June 16 a memorable occasion.

We owe to our townspeople, on occasions like this, our loyal support, and for that reason I am making this urgent appeal for the Tercentenary celebration. Don't let the uniform keep you out of the line. If you have a uniform, wear it. If not, come in civies. But be sure to be there. We want a 100 percent turnout of ex-service men. We have a special committee appointed to take care of our representation, and the Post voted to hold a special meeting next Tuesday night, June 12, at G. A. R. hall East Weymouth, to give this committee an opportunity to arrange the line.

Don't cast this appeal aside, but let's get serious and right here and now pledge yourself, whether legionnaire or ex-service man to attend the meeting next week, receive your instructions, and be on deck June 16. Yours for a 100 percent turnout. R. E. STEIN
Commander Weymouth Post, No. 79, American Legion

SERVICE STAR LEGION

The State president of the Service Star Legion, Mrs. William Irving of West Roxbury, has extended a cordial invitation to the Old Colony chapter, Service Star Legion, to attend the council meeting to be held at her home on Wednesday, June 13, at 10.45 A. M. The members who have attended previous meetings at Mrs. Irving's home are anticipating a most enjoyable day. All who intend to avail themselves of this pleasure should notify our president, Mrs. A. E. Avery on or before Saturday, June 9, in order that she may report to the hosts.

The regular monthly meeting of the Old Colony chapter will be held on the grounds of Mrs. F. A. Bower, 414 Elm street, Braintree, on Monday, June 11, at 11 o'clock A. M. The members are requested to bring a box lunch and remain for the card party which will begin at 2 P. M. The afternoon session is an open one and all the whist-loving ladies are invited to be present. The proceeds from this party will go to reimburse the treasury for money expended on Memorial Day work. The chapter thru its appointed committee placed potted plants on the graves of all the World War veterans in all the cemeteries in Weymouth and Braintree and also provided plants for the graves of our boys who are buried in Quincy, Hingham, Rockland, and Scituate. A pretty floral gold star was placed at the Memorial tablet on the Legion home grounds, Braintree.

Should the weather prove unfavorable for an out-of-doors gathering on Monday the business meeting and card party will be postponed until the following Monday, June 18.

ULTRA-CHIC KNITTED FROCKS LEAD SUMMER'S STYLE REVUE

IT WOULD seem as if the geni of knitted arts were tapping a fount of perpetual inspiration, from whence ideas flow which cause even the most sophisticated stylist to marvel. Under the magic of knitted industry, beauty, style and color are finding an interpretation, the scope of which seems limitless. On and on in endless array pass before our admiring eyes frocks, suits, capes, sweaters, such as some few years ago would not have been deemed among the possibilities of knitting machines and human skill.

Interest in two-piece knitted frocks is indicative of the season's trend.
These are more or less elaborate and embody novelties in every detail. The two-piece knitted suit of fiber silk shown herewith bespeaks a style aristocracy, such as appeals to those who seek the highest art in dress.
It is of the Russian mode, navy blue its foundational color, the blouse featured with red, blue, tan and orange design. It accents the vogue for long sleeves. The skirt is self-striped in four horizontal rows.

Knitted tailcoats, in the way of two-piece suits, are unquestionably smart this season. Such, for instance, as one finds displayed in the better shops, simple of skirt and classic in coat lines. Frequently these Jacquette suits are knitted of mohair and fiber combined. An added attraction is a binding or border of solid color fiber silk, the same outlining coat and skirt.

It is noticed that suits adhere to jacquard ornamentation, while embroidery and hand-painting find repeated placement on knitted one-piece frocks.

Knitted three-piece costumes, dressy and not a sports type, consist of frocks with unique capes some of which are fancifully embroidered.
Charming is a knitted straightline frock all white save in the bodice part, which is lavender striped. The cape reaches to the bottom of the dress and is also white; the collar being of angora.

LACE AT ITS LOVELIEST IN AFTERNOON FROCKS

IF CASTING about for inspiration in the way of an afternoon frock, let quandary cease, for in that one word
"lace" is the quest rewarded. Summer costume collections are largely made up of lace frocks, ranging from black to white, with exquisite tones and tints inclusive.

At first glance one would think that the gown in the picture was all of lace, bordered and sashed with fabric. In reality, the frock is made of black satin-back crepe, interworked with insets and broad expanses of lace. However, its general effect entitles it to be listed as a lace frock. The artistic drapery of the wide satin fabric sash is unique in that it starts at the shoulder, serving both as a sash and a side panel effect.

A bisque-colored lace frock which is most charming opens over a petticoat of like-colored georgette, which is inset with lace motifs.
Among the most interesting interpretations of the lace frock are those in light brown and cocoa shades, which trend also into the lighter browns.
These brownish lace frocks are accompanied with hats of malines and straw, trimmed in corresponding colored velvet ribbon or flowers, or they admit of colorful chapeaux to offset their neutral tints.

Just from Paris are the new beaded lace gowns. These are either designed with beads of identical shade or they show an oriental profusion of color in their beading.

Georgette and organdie gowns, trimmed with dyed lace accurately matched are noted in advance summer showings.

Large plaited lace-edging rosettes trim canteen crepe frocks effectively.

Counting Her Children

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(Copyright, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Leota ran down the orchard path, lifting, and timing her steps to her chant:

"Mister Bluster he loves sugar and tea, Mister Bluster he loves candy; Mister Bluster he can wheel and turn And bow to the ladies hand-dy!"

Coffee grows on sugar trees, Rivers run with brand-dee! The rocks and the hills are washed in gold,

And the gals are—as sweet as—can-dy!" Stop! That thing is indelible in this prohibition era!" Major Lee said, rising upon his one elbow to frown at his young cousin. "Wonder could re-incarnation be made to work backward?" he went on. "If it could I'd try it—sure and certain."

"Whereabout would you get off in Time's backward flight?" Leota asked. He sighed, "You're quite too sudden. The fault of extreme youth. But—let me see! I think about seventy years back, when great granddad had his own orchard, own still, own bees, and made every year lashin' of peach and honey—if he was a preacher."

"P! Don't be such a piker!" Leota reprimanded, "why not go to court—drink with the regent—or even King Charles! Every noble dandy had a still-room all her own in those brave days."

"But somehow, I don't fancy mead and metheglin and such, by report. Give me 'brown October ale,' a cellarful, laid down when I was born, to be broached when I came of age," the major said, sighing reflectively. Leota smiled at him—but somehow her lips quivered the least as she quoted:

"When it came her slaughter, You will do your work on water, An' you'll like the bloom'n' boots of 'im that got it."

"Stop!" the major cried imperatively, springing half upright. "You—you make me remember—and I must forget."

"I'm sorry—so sorry," Leota whispered tremulously. "Do forgive me; I didn't think—"

"I need to be forgiven—for cowardice," her cousin interrupted. "I am ashamed of myself—"

"You mustn't be. I know," the girl said soothingly, rising and holding a hand to help him to his feet. He was vain—she had chosen a younger, fitter mate; he must never let her guess what the choice meant to him. Henceforth his sole concern was her happiness, the fulfilling of her every wish.

At her soft call, "Come here, little Dan," he wheeled and strode to her. She caught his one hand and laid her cheek against it, saying dreamily, "You shan't ever have any Uncle Sam money—no bonus, no pension, while there's Lee land and Lee blood."

"That would be wicked; think of—the children," the major said, his breath coming quick. "I am thinking of them," Leota whispered still dreamily, "because they will be yours, as well as mine."

Jonathan Carver, son of a British officer, set out from Boston in 1766 to explore the wilderness north of Albany and lying along the southern shore of the Great Lakes. He conceived the bold plan of then traveling up a branch of the Missouri (or "Messorie"), till, having discovered the traditional "Oregon, or River of the West," on the western side of the lands that divide the continent, "he would have sailed down the river to the place where it is said to empty itself, near the Straits of Anian."

By the Straits of Anian, it is supposed, were meant some part of Behring straits, separating Asia from the American continent. Carver's fertile imagination, stimulated by what he knew of the remote Northwest, pictured that wild region where, according to a modern poet, "rolls the Oregon and bears no sound save his own dashing." But Carver died without the sight. In his latter years he said of those who should follow his lead: "While their spirits are elated by their success, perhaps they may bestow some commendations and blessings on the person who first pointed out to them the way."

Experts declare that a cypress in Louisiana is 2,500 years old. At the birth of Christ that tree had been standing two centuries longer than the time that has elapsed since the first voyage of Columbus. Rome was a town of mud huts when that tree sprouted from the seed, and Nineveh, of which the prophet Jonah tells, was just destroyed.

Yet it is far from being the oldest known tree. The Santa Maria del Tule cypress in Mexico is estimated to be between 5,000 and 6,000 years of age, and some redwoods in California are placed at 4,000 years. The Mexican cypress antedates the birth of Abraham as the Louisiana tree does that of Christ, and the redwoods probably were taller than any tree in Cook county when King Tut was laid in his tomb.—Chicago Journal.

"Your boys!" the major exploded. "How dare you name such things? Don't you know all your grandmothers for generations are blushing for you? Girls are not supposed to know anything about such subjects—till they go and happen."

But kindly twinkles of deep brown eyes belied his words. Leota twinkled back at him, saying demurely: "The grannies all happened—and you and me and all the rest of the world. I don't talk such stuff outside the family—but I have a heap of good times thinking over my children—what they will be, what I'll do for them—and how proud we'll be of each other."

"Settled on their names yet?" the major asked, not quite steadily. Leota laughed softly, "Not quite," she said. "But what I'm sure of is—wanting—twins for the oldest—so I can name them both for you. The eldest, of course, will be Carroll—but I'm a bit afraid I shall love little Dan best—"

"Mother used to call me little Dan," the major interrupted, breathing hard. Leota nodded. "Mammy Nicey does still," she said. "She tells us all she's most a hundred, but ain't gwine die untill she sees erunner little Dan."

"Have you told Nelson Dabney your family plans?" the major asked, trying hard to smile.

Leota shook her head. "I told you this didn't get outside the family: Nelson is a joy and a blessing—but he'll know—soon enough."

"He is a fine lad—I'm glad he was born just a year late for—the massacrings," Major Lee said, his lips shutting hard.

"He doesn't agree with you; it's his big grief—he rails at Fate and the guardians who kept him out of things—and he a man of fourteen."

"He will want his sons to be soldiers," the major said almost in a whisper. Leota answered, "Perhaps" in the same key, then fell silent. The major turned from her to stride up and down the long rows of trees, set by a joint great-grandfather, cherished by the seed of him until the present day. He had fought unbelievable odds in battle—nothing compared to what he now faced. He loved his blood, his name, his land—he had come back to its healing all but hopeless, counting himself a wreck in Time's tide. Then love and sunshine and—yes—hope had brought the beginning of healing. But for his maiming he stood a full man, Leota's father had been like an elder brother to him—he had played with her mother. Now he was rising thirty, actually; counting by war wear, nearer fifty, perhaps. Naturally Leota had seen in him no more than a playmate kinsman, though the blood tie was distant. But insensibly he had let himself love her with all a strong man's late-come passion. And now he knew it was vain—she had chosen a younger, fitter mate; he must never let her guess what the choice meant to him. Henceforth his sole concern was her happiness, the fulfilling of her every wish.

At her soft call, "Come here, little Dan," he wheeled and strode to her. She caught his one hand and laid her cheek against it, saying dreamily, "You shan't ever have any Uncle Sam money—no bonus, no pension, while there's Lee land and Lee blood."

HOW

BLOOD CORPUSCLES ARE AFFECTED BY ALTITUDE. —Continued examinations of the blood of mountain climbers show that when a man by slow and gradual ascent attains an altitude of 8,000 feet, the red blood corpuscles have rapidly multiplied from about 5,000,000 to 6,000,000, and that when a height of 13,000 feet has been reached the number of these corpuscles has risen further to 7,000,000.

The facts observed by Capt. R. W. G. Hingston confirm the observation, well known in lesser degree in the European Alps, that an ascent from a low to a high altitude is associated with a definite and continuous change in the constitution of the blood, the result of the stimulus which rarefied air exerts on the blood-forming mechanism of the human body. By this means the individual can adapt himself to the higher levels if the ascent be made slowly and gradually, thus allowing the production of a sufficient number of oxygen-carrying corpuscles. This manufacture of red corpuscles is by no means slow; for instance, in one observation a short stay of two days at an altitude of 13,000 feet showed an increase of about 725,000 in the number of these corpuscles per cubic millimeter of the blood. It is possible that there may be a limit to this power of the body to compensate for great altitudes, but it will be noted that the process was in active operation in Captain Hingston's case at a height of 18,200 feet above sea-level.

The blood of the natives of the Pamir Plateau, habitually living at an average height of 13,500 feet, was carefully examined, and it was found that the number of red corpuscles in the blood of the average adult native was 7,500,000 per cubic millimeter, as compared with 7,402,000 in Captain Hingston's own blood at that level.

It is further of interest to learn that during descent from high to low altitudes, when the stimulus of the rarefied air was withdrawn, there was a gradual reduction in the number of the red corpuscles, though the rate of decrease was not so rapid as the rate of increase had been during the ascent. After a short residence at sea level the number of red corpuscles had fallen to normal—namely a little under 5,000,000.

DETECTS ERROR IN SCREWS

How Specially Designed Machine Makes Certain That the Finished Product Is Perfect.

Everyone who owns a bicycle, sewing machine, motor car, or phonograph has come across that worst of all nuisances, the screw that won't go in or won't come out.

Although machines are able to cut screws with remarkable accuracy, occasionally they turn out odd ones, or even whole batches, perhaps a couple of thousandths of an inch too big, or with threads that are not quite regular.

It was thought impossible to test each screw until an inventor came along with a device which enables one man to examine 500 in an hour, and to detect errors as small as one ten-thousandth of an inch.

The screws are passed automatically through a specially designed magic lantern. Each stops for a moment before the lens, and while it does so its shadow, magnified a hundred times, is thrown on to a screen. On this screen is drawn an enlarged representation of a perfect thread, which the screw should fit exactly. The screw's shadow falls upon this drawing, and the tiniest imperfections can be detected instantly.

The Websters.

Daniel Webster was born January 18, 1782; died October 24, 1852. Noah Webster was born October 16, 1758; died May 28, 1843. These two were not related. Noah was a descendant, in the fourth generation, of John Webster, English dramatist and author, and Daniel's father was Ezekiel Webster, judge and farmer of New Hampshire.

Merely a Slight Difference.

"Bill met his death just as his father did years ago," said the oldest inhabitant to the returning visitor. "The old gentleman was seated in his rocking chair when he was struck by lightning." "How strange! You say young Bill died the same way?" persisted the visitor. "Exactly—an electric chair."

What a Girl Likes.

"I don't see how you can stand Fred as an escort. He doesn't dance." "Oh, you're mistaken. He dances attendance better than any other man I know."

The Practical Side of It.

"If we name the baby after your rich uncle he may leave us something when he dies." "Yes, but if we don't he may give us something now."

HOMINY IS GOOD TO USE FOR BREAKFAST

One of Many Varieties May Be Used Occasionally in Place of Vegetable or Cereal.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Coarsely broken, degermed and de-oiled corn is known usually as samp or pearl hominy. When ground to a very coarse meal, it is called hominy grits. Any kind of hominy may, like rice, be used occasionally in place of a vegetable, or for a breakfast cereal. The hominy grits may also be used in puddings and cakes.

The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following recipes:

Boiled Pearl Hominy or Samp.

This coarse kind of hominy requires long cooking. It may be prepared in a fireless cooker or in a double boiler on the back of the stove. It is wise to cook a large quantity at once, as it does not spoil easily if kept in a cool place.

Soak 1 cupful pearl hominy in 2 cupfuls water for 6 hours, or overnight. If a fireless cooker with a radiator is used, add 6 cupfuls boiling water and 3 teaspoonfuls salt to the soaked hominy and boil over the fire for 10 minutes, then put in the cooker and let it remain there for 8 or 12 hours. If there is no radiator it may be necessary to reheat the hominy and put it back in the cooker a second time.

If the hominy is cooked in a double boiler more water may be needed, or a cupful of milk may be stirred in about 15 minutes before removing from the fire. It takes 5 or 6 hours to cook the coarse hominy in a double boiler and about 2 hours directly over the fire.

When used in place of a vegetable the coarse hominy may be served plain or browned in a little fat.

Hominy Turnover.

1 pint cooked 1 teaspoonful salt coarse hominy 2 well-beaten eggs
1 cup milk 1 tablespoon fat
Mix all together. Turn into a frying pan in which the fat has been melted. Stir until hot throughout. Let it cook until golden brown on the bottom, then fold like an omelet and serve on a hot platter. This is suitable for the main dish at supper or luncheon.

Scalloped Hominy.

Arrange in a baking dish alternate layers of boiled coarse hominy and minced meat or fish or grated cheese. Pour over all a cupful of white sauce and bake for 30 minutes. This may be used as the principal part of the meat course.

Hominy and Bean Cakes.

1 cup boiled coarse ½ cup cornstarch hominy 1 cup milk
1 cup cooked red ½ cup of milk kidney beans 1 tablespoon fat ½ teaspoon cay- 1 teaspoon salt, enne pepper

Make a white sauce from the last five ingredients by melting the fat, blending it with the cornstarch, salt and pepper, adding the milk, and cooking until thickened. Grind the hominy and beans through a food chopper, mix with the white sauce, form into cakes, and brown in a little fat. Such cakes may take the place of meat occasionally.

Hominy Fruit Scallops.

½ cup cooked ½ cup apricot juice hominy grits 1 tablespoon sugar 1 cup stewed apri- ½ teaspoon butter cots

Into a greased baking dish place first a layer of the hominy grits which have been mixed with the fruit juice, then a layer of the fruit. Repeat until dish is nearly full. Dot over with the butter and sprinkle with 1 tablespoonful of sugar mixed with cinnamon. Bake until brown. Serve hot or cold with sauce or top milk.

Peaches, pears, prunes, and other fruits may be used instead of apricots.

Paste cut-out pictures for kiddies on stiff pasteboard before cutting and they will last longer and look better.

Soap chips that are left from word cakes may be melted in a little hot water and bottled. For general cleaning this soap solution is excellent.

Spanish combs for evening wear are being offered now at after-holiday prices. They are scheduled to remain in vogue some time.

Hamburg steak is more appetizing when formed into one large, compact, flattened cake, and broiled, than when fried in small cakes.

When polishing furniture with cedar oil do not neglect the other household appliances. Oil the sewing machine, vacuum cleaner, etc., at this time and they will be in good condition when needed.

If your home has frosted white globes over the electric lights you may cover these with a ruffle of soft, pale yellow silk and add a delightful glow to the room.

If hard-boiled eggs are plunged into cold water the instant they are taken from the saucepan, it will prevent that discolored line between the white and the yolk.

Wash your windows with plain water and rub them dry with crumpled newspaper. They will be bright and clear.

HOW EARTH BECAME PEOPLE

American Ethnologist Believes Southwestern Europe Was the Cradle of the Human Race.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, the American ethnologist, contributes to the proceedings of the American Philosophical society an important paper on the peopling of Asia, which "constitutes one of the greatest problems of anthropology." He concludes, says the Scientific American, that the cradle of humanity was essentially southwestern Europe, with later the Mediterranean basin, western Asia and Africa. It is primarily from Europe and secondarily from these regions that the earth was peopled, and this peopling was comparatively recent. Early man was unable to people the globe owing to his insufficient effectiveness and until the end of glacial times and his old stone culture he had evidently all he could do to preserve mere existence. Only an advance in culture could enable him to control his environment and secure a steady surplus of births over deaths. The cause of man's peopling of the world was not a mere wish to do so, but the necessity arising from growing numbers and correspondingly decreasing supply of food. It was this which eventually led to agriculture. This spreading over the globe was conditioned by three great laws—movement in the direction of least resistance; movement in the direction of the greatest prospects; movement due to a force from behind, or compulsion.

CAUSED LAUGHTER IN CHURCH

Small Donald's Remark Too Much for Sense of Humor of Those Who Heard It

This is printed for the benefit of a certain Los Angeles minister who is probably still wondering how it happened that a certain portion of his erstwhile decorous congregation laughed out loud in the middle of the offertory the other Sunday. This is what happened:

It was Donald's first experience in grown-up church though the little chap had attended Sunday school.

When the collection was being taken, his father placed the weekly family offering in the plate. The pew was a short one, and no other contribution was received from it.

Evidently this aroused Donald's curiosity, for he blurted out, with all the eagerness of childhood trying to understand:

"Pa, did you have to pay for the whole row?"

Champion Wolf Trapper.

E. F. Pope, predatory animal inspector for the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, is recognized as the "champion wolf catcher of the United States," and has the reputation of always "getting his wolf." He has given his life to the work.

Mr. Pope began the work of destroying predatory animals when he was twelve years old. He was raised on a ranch in western Texas and devoted his time to the work when conditions reached the point where it was impossible to let cattle graze without a guard being placed over them to protect them from the wolves, coyotes and bobcats. A few years later he started living with an old trapper who was famed all over Texas for his success in trapping wolves. During this period Mr. Pope said he got his most valuable experience and learned the superiority of scientific trapping over unsentimental methods.

The Nightie and Nine

My most embarrassing moment occurred one day when my employer, a merchandise man who often writes advertisements for newspapers, asked me to spell the word "ninety."

There is a glass partition between his desk and mine, and I was busily engaged writing some letters. I misunderstood him and spelled the word "nightie," thinking he was engaged in writing an ad advertising infants' wear. What he really was doing was writing out a check for ninety dollars.

It was indeed a most embarrassing moment, but I must say my boss enjoyed a good hearty laugh at my expense.—Exchange.

Can Bite Through Steel.

That a Jewish athlete named Breibart, thirty-four years old, six feet three inches in height, and weighing 210 pounds, can bite through steel is vouched for by a medical correspondent of the London Lancet. Breibart's performances astounded a committee of physicians, engineers, smiths and presidents of athletic corporations who saw him sever with his teeth several iron and steel chains one-fifth of an inch thick; bend into a circle iron rods half an inch square, using his mouth as a fulcrum, and bend over his head a rail four inches thick by two and a half inches.

Use for Marbles.

"I owe my latest idea in home beautifying to the marble contest," says a Detroit housewife, who is not unwilling to pass her idea along. Marbles that blend with the coloring of a room make an artistic base for flowers that grow from bulbs planted in bowls. Unsightly pebbles, roots and bulbs themselves may be concealed so that the flowers seem to spring from a colorful bed of marbles.—Detroit News.

ACCOUNTS GREAT AID TO ECONOMY

Keeping Track of Expenses of Household Supplements Records of Farm Business.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Household accounts are valuable on the farm as elsewhere, even though farm household expenses are very intimately associated with the business of the farm itself. The farm normally supplies much material which otherwise would become a household expense. The household, in turn, very often furnishes board for farm labor, which would otherwise be a farm expense. Keeping track of household expenses therefore supplements the records of the farm business, points out the United States Department of Agriculture.

More than this, household accounts are an important aid to economy. The first step toward saving lies usually in finding out where unnecessary expenses are incurred. It is important, therefore, to analyze or classify the expenditures and go over them carefully at the end of regular periods. One way of doing this is to record all purchases when money is paid out and then make up a monthly statement for each kind or class of expenditure.

Another method is to enter everything in a column at one side of a broad page, and at the same time enter the amounts again in the columns for each class. This system makes it possible to find out at any time the amount being spent for any given kind of purchase, and the monthly totals are easy to add up.

Book Not Important.

The kind of a book to use is not important. Each family will have a different way of classifying its expenses. An ordinary ruled, square blank book bound at the left side is usually satisfactory for dividing off into columns according to the needs of the individual family. To avoid the work of writing the heading over and over, a number of pages may be cut off at the tops so that permanent column heads may be read above them. A large page is usually easier to record on and to study when the record is complete.

Foods may be classed as "animal foods," "fruits and vegetables," "cereal products," "groceries." Many farms furnish a large part of the first three items. The totals for these groups should offer suggestions as to how the expenses for them may be reduced by greater home production. It has been found that on the average farm 80 per cent of the animal products and 70 per cent of the fruits and vegetables consumed by the family are taken out of the farm.

Clothing, household furnishings, running expenses, advancement, incidentals, and savings are other general classes of expenditures for which separate accounts may be kept according to the second method. Under each of these heads many subdivisions may be made, but for the most purposes this general classification will be found sufficient.

Analyze Totals Yearly.

Recording the expenditures, however, is but half the task. If the totals are not analyzed at least once a year with the idea of making a spending plan for the coming year, little is gained from merely writing down the daily expenditures. This spending plan may be made for a month or even a week ahead, if the future is uncertain. The aim should then be, if possible, to spend less actual cash than the proposed plan allows. On the farm it is often possible to accomplish this by enlarging the vegetable garden, so that the family eats more vegetables and desires less of foods which must be bought, and also so that there is a good surplus to can for winter use. More well-managed poultry may be needed to provide eggs for the table and chickens to eat or can. The amount of milk, butter and cheese furnished by the farm cows may be insufficient. Possibly investigation will show that this is because of a low grade of farm animals which could be improved by better farm practice.

It has been found that, in general, over 60 per cent of the food and over 50 per cent of the fuel consumed by farm families are produced on the farm. Some records showing what farm products have actually been used in the household is of interest and value. One might not be able to write down each bunch of beets, each head of lettuce, each quart of berries, and each quart of milk taken from the products raised for sale, but the estimated quantity of the different kinds of vegetables, the number of eggs, quarts of milk and other products used by the housekeeper during a week would furnish a sufficiently accurate guide for all purposes.

An easy way to keep closer track of the farm products used would be to hang a list of them up in the kitchen, with space for checks or strokes opposite each item, such marks indicating the normal amount of that article used or taken out at one time. To determine the value of these products per month or year, the checks can be translated into pounds or quarts and multiplied by the average price the article sold for during the period being estimated.

SOME ITEMS OF FOOD WASTED IN KITCHEN

Serve Butter in Individual Pats and Cut Off Bread as Needed; Save Cereals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Ask yourself occasionally if any of the following foods are wasted needlessly in your kitchen or on your table, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture:

Butter—Using individual butter plates, bread and butter plates, or even individual saucers for butter keeps all unused butter clean and usable in cooking. The saving is worth the additional dishwashing. Serving butter in individual pats rather than putting a whole piece on the table prevents waste and, if the pats are made small, it is easier for each person to take as much as he wishes, and no more.

Slices of Cut Bread—Use a bread board and sharp knife at the table, and cut off just what is needed. Pieces of bread left over for any reason have many uses. They can be toasted or oven-dried and eaten like toast, rolled out for the bread-crumbs jar, used for scalloped dishes, bread pudding, stuffing, thickening for soups, sauces, or gravies, in place of part of the flour in muffins, pancakes or breads, or boiled in hot milk to serve in place of cereal.

Small Amounts of Cooked Cereal—Put them into bread, muffins or griddle-cakes in place of part of the flour and liquid. Use them to thicken soups, stews or gravies. Fry them for use like a starchy dinner vegetable, or serve with a syrup for a dessert.

Skim Milk—Except for the butter fat and vitamins, skim milk is as valuable as other milk. It enriches soups, sauces or puddings, and may be given to the children if butter is used elsewhere in the diet to make good the loss of the cream. Each child should have its regular allotment of whole milk, but leftover skim milk may be given to them in addition.

Sour Milk—Cottage cheese can always be made from it, but there are also biscuits, gingerbread, pancakes, muffins and cakes, for which many cooks prefer sour milk.

Stale Cake—Make it into cabinet pudding, with a custard mixture and a few raisins or prunes; or dry it, roll it into crumbs and sprinkle them through or over ice cream, whipped cream or custard desserts.

Meat—If you know the tail-ends of steaks or chops will not be eaten, why not cut them off before serving and reserve them for a stew, hash, meat balls or other "made" dish at another meal? Cutting meat into individual portions before serving and keeping the part not needed at the meal out of sight in the kitchen, where it will not tempt the appetite unnecessarily, is economical. Meat leftovers kept too long and allowed to spoil are a total loss. Remember also that overcooked meat is often wasted meat. Fuel saving is often food saving.

Fish—Use any fish not eaten at a meal in some such way as creamed fish, scalloped fish, or fish chowder. With potatoes and other vegetables any of these constitutes an appetizing lunch dish.

Gravy—Make a good deal of gravy after cooking a roast, as many of the good meat extractives are in the roasting pan. Save what gravy is not served at table to warm up the leftover slices for use in a "shepherd's pie," to thicken croquettes or to combine with vegetables, macaroni or noodles.

Fats—Most fats can be used for frying, baking or other cooking, when cleanly rendered. Many housekeepers who have the time find it economy to save fat and make it into soap.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued. —21—

"He was a pretty cool hand," Black interrupted.

"Yes, he was cool enough. He went downstairs into the room where the dog was—"

"But—" Roche commenced.

Bartley did not let him finish. "Yes, I know. The dog should have barked. The reason he did not was because the man was no stranger to him."

The doctor spoke once more, "But you have not proved any of these things are so; you are just supposing."

"No," came the answer, "I have not, but let us consider some of the points that have been proved. Slyke tried to telephone several times during the evening and failed to get his party each time."

Roche and Black were astonished. This was the first time they had heard anything about the telephone calls.

"When he failed again and again to get the person he wanted," Bartley continued, "he asked central to try and locate him for him. All calls from here go through the Saratoga exchange, and it was very easy to find out whom he wanted. But that is not all. On a magazine found on the table beside the whisky glasses were a number of little circles drawn with a pencil, circles that ran into each other."

"What has that to do with it?" asked Black, voicing his wonder.

"A great deal. Those same circles were on the handle of the knife with which Briffleur was killed. I have also a little piece of paper with similar circles drawn on it, and I know the person who drew them. It has been proved scientifically that if a person is playing with a pencil and begins to make figures unthinkingly on anything, his subconscious mind will trick him into always drawing the same design. I found the circles on the magazine in Slyke's room, on the knife that killed Briffleur, and again on the piece of paper. I know to whom Slyke telephoned, and I know also a person who saw the murderer enter the house to call on Slyke the night he was killed."

We leaned forward breathlessly to catch his words, which came with a cold, cutting edge, as he added crisply, "Now, knowing all this, don't you think the person that drew the circles, that was telephoned to, that was seen going into Slyke's, has something to explain? Don't you think so, Doctor King?"

There was no answer, and Bartley demanded sternly, "Doctor King, you are not going to deny, are you, that you killed those two men?"

The question was so unexpected that I sat stunned. He was the last man I should have suspected. Currie cried, "My G—d, John," and fell silent. The doctor's face had gone a dead white, and he sank limply back in his chair. Without raising his eyes he stammered, scarcely above a whisper, the words drawn from him against his will, "No—no—I killed them both."

The next instant he realized what he had said and half rose from his chair, then fell back, clasping his head in his hands. I could not believe my ears. That Bartley should suspect the doctor of the murders seemed incredible enough; but that the doctor himself should admit that it was true was beyond belief. Roche looked first at the doctor, then at Bartley, his eyes bulging with astonishment. Black alone seemed to realize all that the doctor's admission entailed. Currie was still too dazed to understand, for King had been a good friend of his.

Bartley broke the silence with, "We have proved that the doctor is the guilty party. He himself has admitted it. I have suspected him for some time, but when he gave that cry as Slyke's figure appeared, I knew that I was right."

The doctor was still sitting with his head in his hands, and Bartley glanced down at him pityingly before he continued to the rest of us, "From the first, I suspected that whoever had killed Slyke had some knowledge of medicine. The average layman would not have known how to place the revolver in Slyke's hand in such a way that it would appear to be suicide. The point that puzzled me was that the eyes were almost closed. If the guilty person knew enough to place the revolver in Slyke's hand before it stiffened, he should have known that the eyes ought to be open. Miss Potter explained this discrepancy by saying that she had closed the eyes herself, frightened by their stare. Then I was baffled. True, there were the circles on the magazine, but I did not know who made them and there seemed no way of finding out. Then one day, while I was in the doctor's office, he kept drawing little figures on a pad before him as he talked. When he was called to the phone, I took out the piece of paper on which he had been drawing and had carelessly thrown it into a waste-paper basket as he passed. On it were the same figures that I had found on the magazine cover. Even then I was slow to believe he could be the murderer, though science had proved that a person always draws the same design. I found the same symbols on the knife handle. There was but one way he could have been killed."

"My G—d, how?" Roche gasped out.

"The knife blow came from the front. You who sat next to the chauffeur heard nothing. No one could have crept up on him without making some sound. Therefore the knife had to be thrown."

"Thrown?" we gasped.

"Yes. That was the only way it could have reached him. The blow came from directly in front of Briffleur. It could only be thrown. Upon the knife handle were the circles such as I had found elsewhere. Someone had scratched them on it in a moment of idleness. It was a trench knife. Doctor King had been to the front; he was the only one directly in front of Briffleur, and the only one who could have thrown it. We had all agreed that Briffleur was killed because he knew who had murdered Slyke, and that the same man murdered them both. There is another proof, also. The only person, outside of the family, that the dog liked was Doctor King. The day we found Slyke dead the dog came in, growled at the rest of us but let King pat him."

The doctor raised his head, his face white save for two red spots in either cheek. His eyes were pools of blazing light. He looked at us wildly for a second, then threw out his hands and in a voice, low at first but growing louder as he continued, he admitted, "Yes, I killed them. I never intended to do so, God knows! It all goes back some time—"

Bartley interrupted him. "To the time when you got mixed up with Slyke and Briffleur, selling whisky?"

"Yes—yes, that was it. It goes back to that." His voice faltered, then he recovered. "I came back from the war, broke. Slyke suggested that I go in with him on running whisky. I had a camp and fast motorboat on Lake Champlain; it was all I did have. He suggested we run the whisky down the lake from Canada to my camp, then bring it on here and hide it in the vault. He never played fair with us; he cheated us again and again. That's why Briffleur suggested we break into the house and see if he had told the truth about the amount of money he said he got for it. He kept the records of all our sales in his safe. We tried to—you know the rest about the robbery."

His voice trailed off into a whisper. I recalled that he had been shell-shocked, and wondered if he could stand the strain he was undergoing.

"The night I was at Currie's to dinner and met Mr. Bartley it was Slyke who called me up on the phone."

His voice was shrill now, and I thought he would break down at any moment.

"He said he wished to see me, and I started over here. I ran into Briffleur, who told me that Slyke had sold the rest of the whisky for $23,000. Well—where was I? He stopped, confused, and passed his hand over his face."

"Oh, yes—the whisky. I went up to the tower, and he suggested we go out on the balcony—why, I don't know. I asked him what he got for the whisky, and he said $10,000. I knew he lied, and I told him so. We quarreled, quarreled—All at once, he flashed a revolver on me and said he had a good mind to kill me—he had been drinking—"

Again his voice trailed away into silence and his eyes closed. Then he recovered himself with an effort and continued, "Just what happened then, I don't know—don't know! My nerves have been in pieces since I was shell-shocked. We struggled, and I know I shot him. I did as you say. Took him downstairs, undressed him, and put the revolver in his hand. I knew—knew—that most people would think he had killed himself. I was desperately sorry—but I am hardly to blame for his death. My big mistake was calling in Mr. Bartley the next morning. I knew, if I could fool him, I could fool everyone."

He paused; his head sank again into his hands. I saw that Bartley pitied him deeply and his voice was soft and his face grave as he asked, "And Briffleur?"

With an effort the doctor raised his head.

"I was always afraid of that man. He was cruel and treacherous. When I saw him at the inquest I knew that all was over; that he would give me away. And when the lights went out, in a wild rage I threw that knife. I don't know why. Then he almost yelled, 'I wanted peace.'"

"But how did you happen to have the knife with you?" Bartley asked.

He thought for a moment. It seemed hard for him to gather himself together enough to answer, "I don't know—oh, yes, I had used it to cut a strap on my car. When I arrived here the day of the inquest, I found I had left it on the floor and I put it in my bag. There was a bag on the table all the time, you remember."

It was easy to see that the doctor was in such a nervous collapse that he could say no more; he slumped down in his chair and closed his eyes. There was some whispered conversation between Roche and Bartley; and then, as if not liking the task, Roche went over and placed his hand on the doctor's shoulder. At his touch the doctor stiffened. He knew too well what it meant. Shaking off the hand, he slowly rose and walked, with an effort, to where Bartley stood.

"Mr. Bartley," he said, his voice trembling, "will you shake hands with me? I bear you no ill will. It's a long journey before me."

Into Bartley's eyes came a look of comprehending pity, and even admiration. He grasped his hand and silently the two men, one a murderer, the other the detective that had apprehended him, looked into each other's eyes. Then slowly their hands fell apart and Roche led Doctor King from the room.

None of us spoke until Bartley broke the silence by saying, almost in a whisper, "Poor chap! God alone knows what he has gone through."

Suddenly Currie demanded, "John, what about those slates and that awful ghost? I never was so scared in my life."

For the first time a smile crossed Bartley's face.

"The slates? Why I wrote the messages."

"You! But we washed them," Currie exclaimed.

"Surely, you washed them. That was the whole trick. I wrote those messages with a camel's hair brush in hydrochloric acid with a bit of zinc in it. When that mixture is washed with water, the writing is blotted out until the slate dries again. You remember I always washed one side first; that was the side with the writing on it. Then I let you wash the other; and, of course, that made you sure that there was nothing on the slate. Had you not seen it washed with your own eyes? When the slate dried, the writing simply reappeared."

Miss Potter had been sitting, overcome by what had taken place. But as Bartley's explanation ceased she cried, "Then I did not receive a message from Mr. Slyke?"

"No, Miss Potter," Bartley said apologetically, "you did not. You must forgive me. I knew that King was guilty, and I had to make him confess by frightening or startling him. He half believed in spiritualism, and I thought that if I could stage a séance I might make him confess. There was a medium in New York I had once saved from jail and I brought him here with two assistants."

"But the raps?" she questioned.

"Oh, I produced the raps. Almost all of that sort of thing is a fake, you know. You remember that I had you place your hand on the table. Then I rose and turned out the lights. When I came back I slipped you the thumb and little finger of my right hand. You thought, of course, that both my hands were being held. They were not. You only held one, while the other was free to give the raps. The medium was tied and gagged, but you can't tie one of those chaps so surely that they cannot speak and move when they want to."

Currie gave a long sigh of disappointment. "Then I never saw a ghost at all?"

"No, Bob," came the answer, "you did not. Everything was staged to lead up to the words you heard that figure say. What you saw was one of the medium's assistants painted with phosphorus so that he would glow in the dark. He was covered with a black velvet bag, made in sections; and another man, wearing black gloves and a mask to make him invisible, removed the sections of the bag one by one. This gave him the appearance of materializing suddenly out of the air. The head was a mask modeled from a photograph of Slyke. When the figure vanished, the second man had simply covered him from head to foot with a black cloth, thus blotting him from your sight. The whole trick has been used again and again by so-called mediums."

Black rose to his feet saying, "Mr. Bartley, you have solved three problems by one solution—the two murders and the robbery."

As Bartley was about to answer the telephone rang and he left the room as if he had anticipated the message. We could hear his cool, low voice say, "Yes, this is Mr. Bartley. Yes, Roche. No, I am not surprised. It's the best thing, after all, that could have happened."

When he returned to us his face was very grave and sad, yet with something of relief in it.

"Roche tells me," he said slowly, "that when he reached the station King was dead. Suicide."

The news did not startle me. I, too, felt relieved. Bartley was silent a moment, playing with the bag before him on the table. Suddenly he raised his head.

"You know he wished to say good-bye to me. I knew then what he was going to do. I could have had him searched and have prevented it, but it is better so. He has not been himself for months; we will never know all that he has suffered. I am sorry for him. What a great darkness must have covered his life for the last few days! Now it is over."

He was silent again for a moment, and then added, "He took the best way out of the affair."

[THE END.]

Causes of Mental Decay.

The failure of the mind in old age is often less the result of natural decay, than of disuse. Ambition has ceased to operate; contentment brings indolence, and indolence decay of mental power, enfeeblement, and sometimes death. Men have been known to die, literally speaking, of disuse induced by intellectual vacancy.—Sir E. Brodie.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE

TWO OCCUPATIONS FOR MAN

One to Work With and the Other for His Diversion, Is Opinion of Philosopher.

A philosopher said every man should have two occupations, one to work with, the other to play with, writes "Girard" in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Dr. John H. Jopson's other occupation is fishing. When this eminent surgeon was slashing around the other day with a new trout rod it reminded J. Stodgell Stokes of a story to prove that the biggest fish is not always hooked by the most expensive tackle.

Stokes and other Haverford collegians thought it would be nice when the late President Sharpless was about to retire to give him the finest bass rod, reel and line that could be bought. The old scholar was duly grateful and accompanied by Mr. Stokes elected to christen his gift in a Jersey water where bass are almost as plentiful as the mosquitoes on shore.

A barefoot native had watching open-eyed at the unfolding of the beautiful rod, whispered to Mr. Stokes: "The butcher won't sell much meat tomorrow."

Nothing, however, that Dr. Sharpless could do would coax a fish to take the hook. Then the dad, waiting in silence for an hour, gravely cut a switch from a tree, rigged up a line, took a rusty hook from his pocket, dug an angie worm and without comment proceeded to fish.

You have already guessed the sequel. The boy soon had a string of bass while the scholar and his friend, a man of high business qualities, caught not one.

HAVE HIGH NUTRITIVE VALUE

According to Bureau of Fisheries, Sea-Mussels Are Not Appreciated as They Should Be.

Officials of the bureau of fisheries declare that sea-mussels are, in a high degree, both palatable and nutritious. The bureau goes farther and says that in view of the abundance of the mussels and the ease with which they can be obtained, the neglect of them for table use is wasteful. It points out that sea-mussels are found along the coasts of nearly all the northern half of the northern hemisphere, and that there are beds on the New England coast so extensive that the mussels could be collected daily by the ton.

It adds that many persons consider the flavor of the mussel superior to that of the oyster; that, moreover, mussels are in season when the oyster is out of season, and that they are more easily cultivated than the oyster. It admits that fresh mussels are most difficult to market, for they spoil if kept more than 24 hours, but asserts that if canned or pickled they retain their natural flavor for months. The bureau recommends that such cheap and nutritious food be placed on the market.

Studies Ancient Graves.

Prof. J. J. Horner, archeologist of the University of Oregon, who has visited what is believed to be the burial ground of an ancient tribe of mound builders, near Albany, Ore., has pronounced the place one of the wonders of primitive Oregon. He said the finds made by Claude Peacock, a farmer, represented a higher type of civilization than previous discoveries in that section.

Professor Horner said the carvings on mortars, the stone pipe and other objects were examples of the highest type of stone workings found in graves of mound builders. He said the discoveries indicated that these mound builders, who antedate the Indians, had the same religion as the sun worshippers of Mexico.

Improved Water Wheel.

A floating water wheel has been patented by an inventor in Prieska, South Africa. This invention is a great revelation, and promises to revolutionize methods of raising water for irrigation purposes, generating electricity, etc. A large model is undergoing its trial in the Orange river, and it is expected that its final adjustments will shortly be complete, when the wheel will be given an exhaustive trial. The invention is so constructed that it can rise or fall with the level of the stream, delivering water through hose-pipes or through a revolving universal rod structure. It can float in the water or rest on firm soil, according to the depth of the stream, and automatically disposes of all obstacles drifting against it.

Slap at Modern "Education."

During the ordinary medical college course the average student is "educated" in a way to deprive him of his native common sense, and to unfit him for study along natural lines, that it requires half a lifetime of busy practice to undo the mischief of it.—Dr. John Kirk.

Ruby Valued at $60,000.

The largest perfect ruby in the world has just arrived in England from India, consigned to the head of a firm of Indian brokers, which values the gem at $60,000. The stone, absolutely flawless, was mined at Mogok, Burma, four years ago. It is oval, quarter of an inch long, and weighs 22 carats.

NOT MUCH CHANGE IN WORLD

Recent Finds in England Show That Ancients Had Knowledge of Things We Call Modern.

When the Romans were in Britain they drove one of their firm, well-paved, lasting roads diagonally right across England from the Kentish coast to the Dee, taking in London on its way.

That sea-to-sea thoroughfare was a busy scene 1,800 years ago. Civilization gathered along it. Now the road is being excavated and widened or remade as one of the great motor roads, and the digging that is going on, as nearly 2,000 men labor to give the old route a new life, reveals some curious proofs of how little change has taken place in some of the habits of the people.

In that far-off time, for instance, near Southfleet in Kent, a little Roman or British girl became the proud possessor of a cup on which her name was scratched, AMADA. How it came to be buried whole nobody can say, but buried it was, for it has been unearthed by the workers who are widening old Watling street.

Many other relics are being brought to light. Fragments of pottery, whole vessels like Amada's cup, some with the potter's name impressed on them, querns, or hand mills, for grinding corn, terra-cotta lamps, bronze pins, and coins.

At Bafford a bronze brooch has been found in such a perfect state of preservation that after 1,800 years it could be used today for its original purpose. The point of the pin falls into a socket, as with a modern safety-pin, and shows that our ways and those of our forefathers are very near.

HEAD WORK THAT COUNTED

Indian's Brand Would Seem to Have Been Superior to the White Man's.

A chief of a tribe of Canadian Indians was looking idly on while some Englishmen were hard at work improving property newly acquired from the tribe. "Why don't you work?" said the supervisor to the chief. "Why you no work yourself?" "I work head work," replied the white man, touching his forehead. "But come here and kill this calf for me, and I'll pay you." The Indian stood still for a moment, apparently deep in thought, and then he went off to kill the calf. "Why don't you finish the job?" presently asked the supervisor, seeing the man stand with folded arms over the unskinned, undressed carcass. "You say you pay me to kill calf," was the reply. "Calf dead, me want money." The white man smiled, and handed the Indian an extra coin to go on with the work. "How is it," asked the Englishman one day, after a series of such one-sided dealings, "that you so often get the better of me?" "I work head work!" solemnly replied the man of the woods.—Exchange.

Glass Thunderbolts.

An exhibition of "petrified thunderbolts" may be viewed by visitors to the American Museum of Natural History in New York. Technically they are known as fulgurites, and the officials of the museum have decided that there are several million persons in the United States that have worried along for years without knowledge of fulgurites.

Dr. O. E. Hovey of the museum's department of geology explained that a fulgurite is a glass which is often produced when lightning strikes a mass of rock or a bed of dry sand and melts the material beneath the impact. In other words, it is glass made by nature in very much the same way that men make glass in glass foundries. The fulgurites in the museum come from all sorts of places—Mt. Ararat, the desert of Sahara, Michigan, Illinois and Mehemamehibaka.

Antimacassar Coming Back.

The news that antimacassars are coming in again will stir memories of those once ubiquitous parlor chair embellishments. Antimacassars were annoying wisps of lace or beribboned fancy work of washable character annexed to the tops of the backs of chairs to protect them from the oily and perfumed locks of the Victorian beaux.

And it is because men are again greasing their hair that antimacassars are coming back. In Victorian times the favorite anointment for masculine curls was macassar oil, whence the name "antimacassar."

Tourists Cause Forest Fires.

According to the annual report of the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, a large part of the danger to the national forests from man-caused fires is due to the seasonal influx of tourists, campers, hunters and fishermen, and other visitors from the cities and from distant parts of the country. A national campaign of public education on the subject of forest fires is demanded if the task of protection of the vast area of the national forests from Maine and Florida and California and Washington is to be successfully performed.

It Must Have Been Terrible.

One morning when I returned to school after an illness I was told to go to the principal for an excuse. I went to his office, taking my report card. Entering the office, I walked to the principal's desk.

He held out his hand and, supposing he wished to shake hands, I put my hand in his and shook it.

Imagine my embarrassment when he said: "I did not mean to shake hands. I wanted your report card."—Exchange.

HOWE & FRENCH INC.

Filling a quiet and inconspicuous niche sometimes right in our very neighborhood are concerns of many years standing. Such is true of the Howe & French Inc., who besides owning some twenty acres of land at the junction of Middle and Washington streets, also have several modern up-to-date buildings and employ the year around many Weymouth people.

Established in 1834 by John C. Howe and John J. French in buildings even now referred to as the ising glass factory, the concern has all these years gone quietly and steadily at their labors, which has meant that the products of Howe & French, Incorporated, who are importers and manufacturing dealers of drugs and chemicals are known the world over as goods of merit.

In 1906 the then three-story building about 60x100 feet was burned. The company soon replaced it by a modern concrete building and others have been added. The company uses water, electric, and even steam power. It employs some fifty Weymouth people the year around, and among these we find the two in charge, Marshall R. Wright and T. Albert Brennock, who are old and trusted employees of many years standing. The concern speaks highly of their long service.

The company has bought and now owns all the land around the pond near their factory, some twenty acres, that will enable them to expand and build as the business grows.

The present firm members are Clarence P. Severance, who was in the employ of Howe & French many years, and his associates who are Milton S. Thompson and William D. Rockwood.

The members of the concern, while their visits here are brief, are interested in Weymouth and all that goes to make the town successful and prosperous.

THE ODD SHOP

Perhaps the most unique business in Weymouth is the "Odd Shop" of Mrs. Kate Pierce Thayer.

A lover of antiques inevitably acquires more treasures than is necessary for "home consumption", and in this case it led to the idea of establishing a business that is neither entirely antiques nor a gift shop, but a combination which is quite interesting. From the very modest start of a couple of years ago, the Odd Shop has now assumed the proportions of a real business and this year has a branch shop at 14 Quincy Avenue, East Braintree, where the eye of the passing tourist is caught by a fine display of old spinning wheels, quaint chairs and tables, lovely Sandwich glass and early English china.

Mrs. Thayer does most of her buying in Weymouth and neighboring towns and the contents of many attics has yielded hitherto unsuspected treasures under her inspection.

One man's trash is another man's treasure and many odd old things that have no interest in one person's home, seem different when placed in a new environment.

Old furniture and glassware are most in demand, also old pictures, dishes, rugs, and silverware, even old embroideries, quaint cross-stitch work, books, and valentines. In fact anything that is old and quaint and that speaks of former times and of other generations and methods of living has its interest to the antique hunter.

The Odd Shop furnishes an outlet for the people of Weymouth and nearby towns who wish to realize something on heirlooms or household belongings for which they have no further use.

Such a shop is interesting from the points of view of both buyer and seller, and so serves a unique purpose in any community.

THE STORK COMPANY

When young you may not have known what you wore, or if told could not comprehend. But the clothing of an infant is uniform, and few of us get away from such important articles as bibs, stork baby shoes and moccasins, and other little specialties for infants like talcum powder etc. It will be news to many here in Weymouth, the famous Stork Company (a company appropriately named) the makers of the famous stork sheeting and catch-all bibs, make their products here within the town boundaries.

Using a two and one-half story building they rent on Middle street their products, while little known here in Weymouth, are sold all over the world. In fact one of the firm says they receive regularly orders from Iceland. A lady in England told one of the firm how dependable the products were to her.

C. P. Severance is president of the company and M. S. Thompson is treasurer, and Mr. MacDougall is assistant treasurer and local manager.

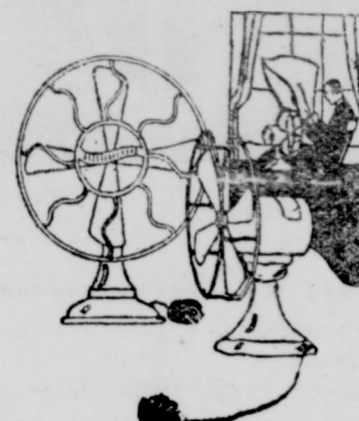

The concern furnishes good employment for many in Weymouth, and they are making products that are good, the very best of their kind, known the world over.

Perhaps the next attractive product to the widely known Stork sheeting, is the Catch-all bib, an unique patented article so constructed and arranged that it does all its name indicates and perhaps saves many things that would otherwise fall to the floor, requiring constant exertion on the part of attendant to pick up.

For other comforts to the little tots the stork shoes and moccasins have been exceedingly popular from the first.

Four Prosperous Catholic Churches in Weymouth

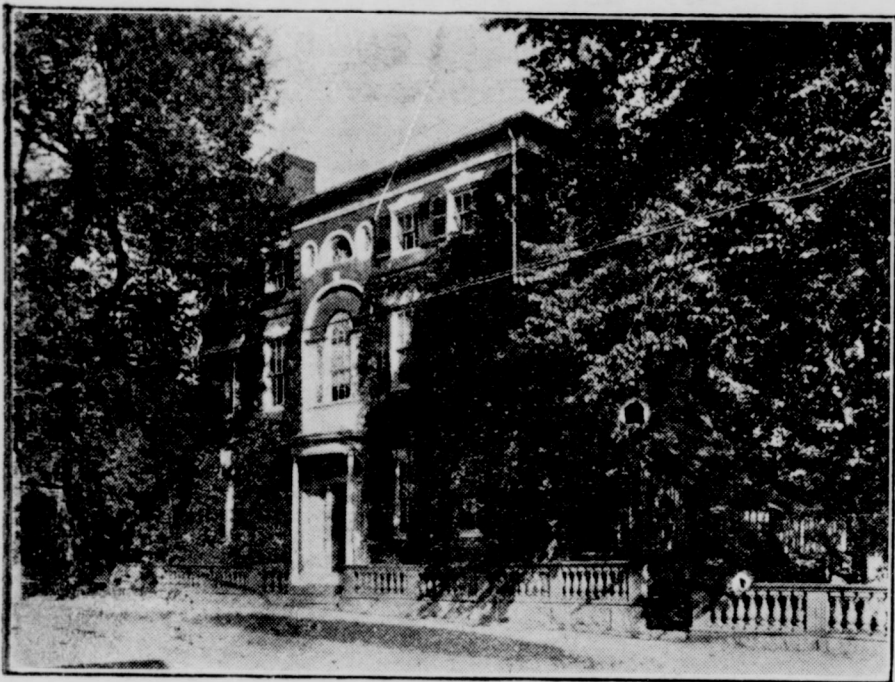

ST. JEROME'S CHURCH
North Weymouth

All the large wards of the town have prosperous Catholic churches, and organizations which are doing a good work.

The oldest parish is at Weymouth Landing where the Reverend John B. Holland has been the beloved pastor for many years. Recently the church purchased the historic Cowing house which is occupied as a rectory; the Colonial architecture attracts attention from tourists.

Connected with the church is a convent and also a parochial school, the latter recently enlarged to accommodate all grades, including High school.

Rev. C. I. Riordon is pastor of both the Church of the Immaculate Conception at East Weymouth and St. Jerome's Church at North Weymouth. Fr. Riordon is assisted by Rev. Patrick J. Dawson. The parish has considerable real estate at East Weymouth and North Weymouth, including a rectory, and has commenced the erection of a parochial school at the corner of Commercial and Madison streets.

The pastor of the St. Francis Xavier Church at South Weymouth is Rev. D. P. Crimmins, and the parish has a commodious church and rectory, and is flourishing.

A Success Which Has Endured and Grown Steadily Greater

A year ago the wonderful welcome accorded the new Single-Six was characterized as the most dramatic moment in Packard history.

The high respect in which Packard has always been held culminated upon the appearance of this car in a much larger public and widespread warmth of appreciation surpassing all previous accomplishments.

If this success of the Single-Six was impressive a year ago, it is infinitely more so today, now that it has endured without abatement for more than twelve months.

It is worth while to point out, we believe, that the confident hopes and expectations which the Packard Motor Car Company centered in the production of this car have been realized in the character as well as the volume of its success.

The Single-Six was designed to demonstrate that Packard facilities for the finest possible manufacture, supplemented by greater volume, would result in value unprecedented in a car of the finest type.

Certainly there can be no question of the attainment of this aim, in view of the comparative status of the Single-Six today and the results it is giving in the hands of many thousand of owners.

It has naturally attracted the most rigorous competition from ambitious aspirants for a share of Packard reputation—and grown steadily stronger month after month as that process of comparison has proceeded.

It has proven itself a Packard in the fullest and the best sense of the word, verifying that right to unquestioned leadership which has always attached to the name.

Furthermore, the Single-Six has fulfilled its early promise of easily recognized greater value and of daily economies in operation so marked as to be without precedent among cars seeking comparison with the Packard.

These facts can be corroborated in any community in the country, by inquiry of any Single-Six owner.

They are mentioned in order that Packard may register its appreciation and give assurance again of its devotion to the high principles of manufacture which have governed Packard production for twenty-three years.

ALVIN HOLLIS & CO.

Among the important mercantile industries of the town is the old and reliable Alvin Hollis Co. at South Weymouth, which has been doing business for many years, supplying not only the town but surrounding territory with Coal Hay, Grain, Flour, Feed, Paints, and Fertilizers.

This business was established many years ago by Austin Dean. At that time the coal shed stood on the site occupied by the freight house of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R., as many of our older people will remember.

In 1890 the business was purchased by Mr. Alvin Hollis who, previous to that time had conducted an ice business, which he had purchased from Mr. Israel Fearing. Mr. Hollis made many improvements; adding a new trestle, corn grinder, subway and conveyor for unloading grain and installed a new engine. Mr. Hollis was a good manager as well as a man of strict integrity, and such a reputation could have but one result, and that was prosperity.

Mrs. Hollis died June 19, 1920, and two years later, July 5, 1922, Mr. Hollis passed away to join her in the Great Beyond, leaving three daughters, one of whom married Mr. J. L. Bicknell, who in 1913 was taken into partnership with Mr. Hollis, after which the business was successfully conducted under the name of Alvin Hollis & Co.

Mr. Hollis' eldest daughter, Mary, married George W. Sargent, a native of Holbrook, but a resident of South Weymouth from boyhood. The youngest daughter, Adelaide, married Charles Bicknell, a cousin of the present manager of the Alvin Hollis Co.

The company employs ten men constantly, besides a lady stenographer, and is serving a district that includes Weymouth Landing, East Weymouth, South Weymouth, South Hingham, South Braintree, North Abington, Holbrook, and Rockland.

J. E. LUDDEN PLUMBING AND HEATING

The J. E. Ludden plumbing and heating business was founded on December 19, 1898, by J. E. Ludden of 226 Shaw street, East Braintree, and emanated from an apprenticeship served with Fred Powers, who conducted a plumbing business in Washington Square in the building now occupied by the Sunshine Lunch and Rogers' Pool Room.

The business was started with a shop at the home of Mr. Ludden with an order box in Cornell's Drug Store, which is the present location of Harlow's Drug Store in Washington Square, and the first year employed one man.

In the year 1900 an office and shop was established on Washington street, Weymouth, sharing the building with King's Undertaking Rooms, being the building now occupied by John Fisher's Pool Room.

About a year later Mr. Ludden purchased the experimental shop of Henry Gardner located at the corner of Allen and Shaw streets, East Braintree, and moved it to his home, at that time giving up his office with Mr. King. In 1905, Mr. Ludden purchased the Baker Hardware Co. on Commercial street, Washington Square, where he maintained an office for the plumbing and heating business. One year later the hardware store moved to new building, the present location of Frank W. Stewart's Hardware Store, and the plumbing business was conducted from there for two years. In 1908 the Hardware Store was sold to Frank W. Stewart and desk room for the business was hired in the office on Commercial street, then occupied by William P. Kelley, attorney; The Weymouth Times, and Russell B. Worster, real estate agent. This building has since been remodeled, and is now occupied by the South Shore Co-operative Bank.

In 1916, Mr. Ludden moved to new office building built by Russell B. Worster on Commercial street, Washington Square, there being two offices in the building occupied by Mr. Worster and Mr. Ludden, which has since been remodeled, and is now Marshall's ice cream parlor. The plumbing and heating business was conducted from this office until the year 1919, when Mr. Ludden purchased the Pratt building, 36-38 Commercial street, Washington Square, which was remodeled to meet the needs of the plumbing and heating business.

The rear of the building was built up one story and made into a sheet metal shop, a complete line of sheet metal machinery being installed, this again bringing to life the sheet metal business, once carried on by Nathan Pratt, former owner of the building, who for years conducted a sheet metal business at this location.

With the addition of sheet metal work to the plumbing and heating business, Washington Square could again boast of a complete plumbing, heating, and ventilating business, which at the present time employs nine men and one lady and is still located at No. 38 Commercial street, Weymouth.

AMERICAN CREDIT-INDemnITY COMPANY

The American Credit-Indemnity Company of New York, Henry A. Day of North Weymouth manager, with offices at 99 Bedford street, Boston, has an enviable record in the fact that it has been "able to meet and discharge the excessive losses of the past two years without affecting its financial stability." It has ample reserves for all liability items, and its treatment of policyholders and claimants is fair and equitable. All claims are promptly paid, and it affords efficient service at minimum cost, and assures prompt recovery to the policyholder. Collections are immediately remitted to the policyholders, without waiting for adjustment at the end of policy period. Such is the record.

THE SOUTH WEYMOUTH CUSTOM LAUNDRY

The South Weymouth Custom Laundry was established in South Weymouth in April, 1896, making it the oldest laundry in Norfolk County. It was started with but five employees on the inside and one outside. It soon grew and new quarters were necessary and was replaced by a much larger building to which have also been added several pieces, also a separate brick boiler house.

We have endeavored to keep up with the times by adding the new, efficient machinery as it was needed and have found that we are able to produce more work as well as being able to do it better.

We now have more than fifty employees, and have added an up-to-date dry-cleaning and pressing department which is steadily growing. In this plant we cleanse all kinds of wearing apparel by the most modern and approved methods. We not only cleanse clothing, but also carpets, rugs, portieres, and all things that cannot be washed in water.

It is our ambition to relieve the house-wife of all the drudgery of wash-day, by having different service fitted to the needs of every family. We can do your wetwash, semi-finished or finished family work, as well as all kinds of curtains, silk shirt-waists and women's finery.

We are always glad to have anyone who desires, come to the laundry, where we will show them just how their clothes are handled, and try to show them why it is to their advantage to send their work to a laundry rather than do it themselves.

MARTIN E. HAWES

His prominence in town affairs, in newspaper work, in the Republican party, in Orphans Hope lodge of Masons, in the East Weymouth Congregational Church and in other activities made Martin E. Hawes one of Weymouth's best known and respected citizens.

He was born in Weymouth October 25, 1834, received his education in the common schools of that day and was a resident of Weymouth until his death in September, 1920.

From his early manhood he was a member of the Congregational Church of East Weymouth, was closely identified with all its interests, serving as superintendent of the Sunday School for many years.

He was Past Master of Orphans Hope lodge of Masons, and at the time of his death was chaplain, a position which he had held for a long period.

Mr. Hawes represented the town of Weymouth in the Legislatures of 1898 and 1899.

For 25 years he was connected with Weymouth Gazette and Transcript, most of that time as its editor, retiring on account of failing health.

As a member of the Weymouth Historical Society the last work he performed was the writing up of the "Town Highways" for the history of the town.

WEYMOUTH LIGHT & POWER COMPANY

The Weymouth Light & Power Company, the central station that supplies electric light, heat and power to the Weymouths, has been serving the community for 34 years.

It is interesting at this time to look back at some of the earlier history of the station, and the condition of the electric industry then, in comparison with the advancement of the industry to the present time. The Weymouth Light & Power Company's steam generating station on Wharf street, East Weymouth, was built in 1889 by the Thompson-Huston Electric Co. The original construction work was done by the John Post Engineering Co. for Thompson-Huston Electric Co. This original plant included a 250 horse power cross compound engine, and two steam boilers. The generating equipment consisted of two alternators, and machines to operate street arc lights.

At the beginning electricity was supplied only during limited hours, the plant being started one half hour before dark and shut down twenty minutes after the last train arrived. This was usually about 12.15 A. M. This plan of operation continued for about three years after the start, and then the plant was run on an all-night schedule.

The first president of the company was Mr. Peter French. Mr. William Davis was superintendent, and Mr. Kent Bridges first manager. Mr. M. A. Carter then became manager, about 1892 or 1893.

Seventy-five customers were served at this time, and the first employees included the late Mr. Tim White, and Mr. Ellis Gay.

LAKEWOOD GROVE AND BIRCHES

—Quite a good many families wintered at the Grove, and none of them seem the worse for it. In fact they had less trouble getting coal and keeping warm than many in the city.

—W. D. Allen is having a couple more doors cut in the front, or maybe it is the back of his house.

—It would not seem as if Friend Hardy should be in the list of those entitled to prize for best looking place. With the addition to the house and many changes to the grounds he should be in a class by himself. His neighbor, Mr. Noonan, keeps an eye on the place when Mr. Hardy is away so that the weeds do not even get a chance.

—The shrubs by the tennis court are in bloom. They are a pleasant sight when you go into the Grove by the Red Farm route. The entrance this way has been improved. This will be a saving of tires.

—Fred Moulton, down on the lake front, has raked off the few dozen leaves that stuck on the side hill, planted a variety of flowers and is now ready to enjoy the summer with his new Chevrolet sedan.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moody are making daily trips to the city in a Chevrolet touring car. Charlie says it is hard to get out of the habit of driving a "fiv" but the first hundred years are the worst.

—Architect Dixie has taken a wife during the winter and his many camp friends wish him happiness.

—Electric lights look promising.

—There are some of the Weymouth merchants that are very popular with the summer residents and I notice they are all of the progressive sort that advertise in the Gazette.

—Past President Smith's lawn is coming. It was sure a struggle.

—Mr. Burford has added a garage to his place and in it has put a Chevrolet touring car. With a pleasant bungalow, a car and an airedale what more could this couple want?

—Earl Fowler is driving a new car and incidentally showing prospective residents around.

—Did you ever see Mr. Wingate without the dog when he is in the Grove with his car?

—Harold Brodner has purchased the Knowlton cottage, one of the most complete ones in the Grove. He took it "as is" with all furnishings.

SERVICE STAR LEGION

The Old Colony Chapter, Service Star Legion, spent a most enjoyable day at the home of Mrs. F. A. Bower, 414 Elm street, Braintree, Monday. At the close of the business meeting which was scheduled for 11 A. M., the members adjourned to the veranda to partake of a box luncheon after which a card party took place on the lawn during which fruit punch and cake were served. The prize winners were Mrs. Walter Thompson in bridge whist and Mrs. Joseph Fern and Mrs. Herbert Goodspeed in plain whist.

Aside from the Memorial Day work the chief welfare work of the month was the sending of some checker boards and several packs of playing cards to the West Roxbury Hospital and the visit of the president and vice-president to the Norfolk County Hospital, Braintree, where they brought a large amount of reading matter. Several members attended a council meeting and social hour at the home of Mrs. William Irving, West Roxbury, State president of S. S. L.

The Old Colony Chapter will take a modest part in the Tercentenary parade in Weymouth on Saturday, June 16. Watch out for the touring car, bearing the S. S. L. Banner, in which our three Gold Star Mother members will ride. Mrs. Mary Talbot the chaplain, will represent the chapter at the exercises. The chapter will not meet during July and August, but the chairman of the various committees will keep their eyes open for any duties that need their attention, and the finance committee may throw something on the screen of festivities. There must be plenty of financial gas to keep the "Welfare machine" in motion.

CHURCHES OF WEYMOUTH ACTIVE AND DOING GOOD WORK

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The First Methodist Episcopal Church was the first religious society organized in that part of the town now known as East Weymouth. Early Circuit Riders had conducted religious services in the town at various times but no attempt was made to organize a church until the year 1823. In May of that year a class of eleven members was organized with Joseph Dunbar as leader. The other members of the class were: Urban Rice, William Rice, and his wife Nancy, Alvah Raymond, Nathaniel Ford, Sarah Jordan, Rachel Cowin, Sally Rice, Mary Rice, and Betsey Wilder.

A building lot was secured early in the year 1825, and a chapel erected. In 1828 the building was enlarged to adequately care for the growing congregation. A division in the society caused some to withdraw, who later obtained possession of the property and organized the Evangelical Methodist Church. The remaining members of the original church held their meeting in the village school house, until 1844, when their second house of worship was erected. This building was burned in 1851, and another house of worship was dedicated in 1852. Fire again visited this people, and the new building was destroyed in 1870. After a meeting of the members it was voted to rebuild, but on a new site. The present site on Broad street was selected as the place for the new edifice, and work was started at once. The building was completed in the following fall, and dedicatory services were held on Dec. 23, 1870. The cost, including organ, was about $23,000. Extensive repairs and additions have been made since that time and the organ rebuilt.

There is a long list of noble, consecrated men who have served as pastors of this church, one of them being Lewis B. Bates, grandfather of ex-Governor Bates of Massachusetts. With such men as leaders the church was assured of a sure and steady growth.

Since its organization the church has had among its members men and women who were prominent in the affairs of the town as well as the church. Among its present membership there are a large number of men and women who are actively identified with town affairs. Always has the church sought to serve rather than to be served.

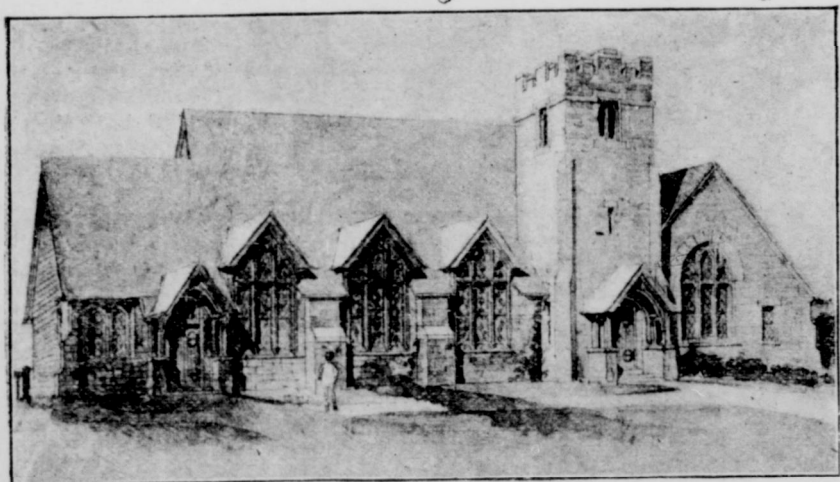

The present pastor of the church is the Rev. Earl E. Story, who is in the third year of his pastorate.

Mr. J. Quincy Spear, a member of the local Post of the G. A. R., is the oldest living member of the church, having united with the society in August, 1849. Always active in the church since uniting with it, he is still a loyal contributor and supporter and is interested in every department of its work.

The present officers of the church consists of the following: trustees,—B. B. Sylvester, F. W. Preston, W. A. Hodges, M. P. Ford, C. R. Denbroeder, G. A. Lincoln, S. C. Burgoyne, G. L. Bates, C. H. Chubbuck.

Stewards,—F. W. Preston, treasurer: C. H. Chubbuck, M. P. Ford, B. B. Sylvester, J. Q. B. Goodspeed, G. L. Bates, S. C. Burgoyne, G. A. Lincoln, H. A. Mattson, Norman Walker, Frank Channels, S. W. HISTORY OF THE EAST WEYMOUTH CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

For nearly two hundred years after the first settlement of the town, the people of East Weymouth worshipped at the Old North Church. In 1822, however, there was an awakening in which one Urban Rice was the prime mover. He gathered together a few people at his home near what is now Pleasant and Water streets, and held the first services which had been held separately from the neighborhood prayer meetings held occasionally under the auspices of the Old North Church; and the David Rice house thus comes an historic spot, and may some day be marked as such.

This movement of Urban Rice's culminated in the organization of a Methodist Episcopal Society which bought a lot and erected thereon a small house of worship on the hill near where the first meeting was held.

The early church continued to thrive under itinerant Methodist preaching until 1842, when there came a division, and in 1843 a second society was formed and became known as the Evangelical Methodist Society. The new organization bought the property of the old, and enlarged and improved the edifice, and the Episcopal Methodist Society built a new church near the Bela French estate.

There were three organizations under the one roof of the new church,—a church, a society, and a proprietorship. The members of the church at its organization were Noah Gardner, Henry Gardner, James Ames, Albert Joyce, Mary A. Lovell, Urban Rice, Joseph Ross, Silence Tilton, and Joseph Totman.

The first pastor called to the church was Rev. Stephen Lovell, and in later succession there have been Rev. Joshua Horton, Rev. Edmund S. Story, (under whose pastorate the church joined the Norfolk Conference in 1860).

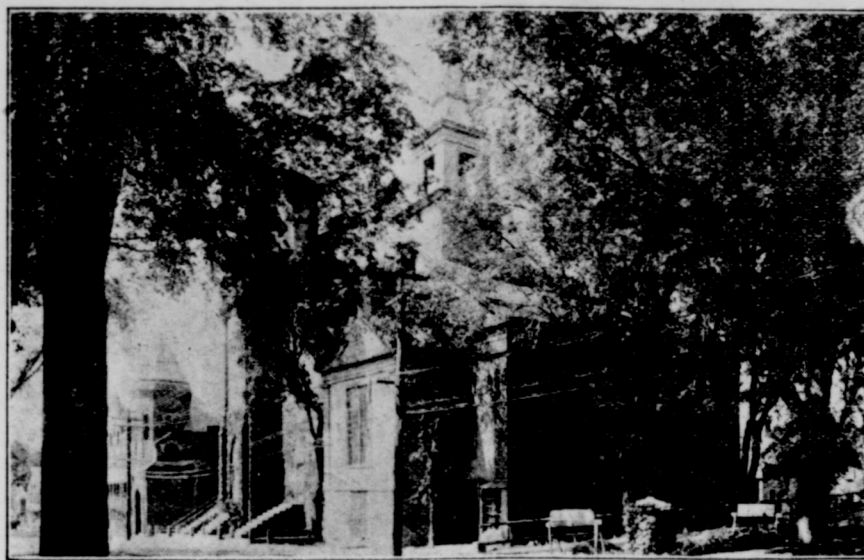

Rev. James P. Lane followed Mr. Potter and under his administration extensive improvements were begun on the house of worship, the front and spire were a part of these improvements and it soon became known far and near as the White Church. Mr. Lane did not stay to see work completed and was succeeded by Rev. Daniel W. Waldron who, full of the vigor of young manhood, and which vigor never waned, began his pastorate there.

The White Church which had been admired so much for its beautiful exterior was materially improved in 1890 and 1891 by an entire renovation of the interior. The individual proprietorship was wiped out and it was a free church and thus it stood until the 9th of February, 1903, when building with nearly all its equipment was tendered the society as a house of worship during the building of the new edifice. The society leased the estate of Albert Humphrey near Jackson Square, selling the parsonage and renovating the late home of Mr. Humphrey to supply place. C. Howard Walker of Boston was the architect and Herbert

H. Hale, the well known contractor and builder of East Weymouth, was the builder.

Following Rev. Daniel W. Waldron, the pastors of the church were as follows: Rev. John A. Cruzan, Rev. Henry W. Eldridge, Rev. John W. Macolm, Rev. Frank J. Mundy, Rev. William A. Depew, Rev. THIRD UNIVERSALIST SOCIETY

Preamble:—There being a good opportunity to purchase a piece of land on which to erect a meeting house, the friends of the Doctrine of Universal Salvation thought it best to form a society to purchase and hold said land and also to make such arrangements as they think practicable for having said doctrine preached in North Weymouth.

The undersigned with sundry other persons, not named, on September 30, 1853, made application to E. S. Beals, J. P., requesting him to issue a warrant to a subscriber for the purpose of organization: Henry Cleverly, E. M. Manson, Alvan Pratt, T. F. Cleverly, Noble Morse, William Dyer, Abiza Pratt, John W. Bartlett, William Pratt, John G. Redman, Seth Pratt, L. Q. Spear, Amos L. Newton, James I. Blanchard, Samuel Cleverly, Charles Pratt, B. F. Pierce, G. W. Cleverly, Elisha Pratt, Amos L. Pergo, Robert Lougee, Wilnot Cleverly.

Of the twenty-two men who signed the application the last remaining was Wilnot Cleverly, who died August 13, 1907. A warrant was issued to Henry Cleverly, signed by E. S. Beals, J. P. November 1, 1853, directing him to post a copy of warrant on the principal door of the first District School House in Weymouth; in the store of John W. Bartlett and at the Union store. Meeting held and society organized in school house November 19, 1853, and called "Third Universalist Society, in Weymouth". John W. Bartlett chosen clerk. G. W. Cleverly chosen moderator. L. Q. Spear, Seth Pratt, E. M. Manson, T. F. Cleverly and Elisha Pratt chosen to draft a constitution and bylaws.

On December 6 at an adjourned meeting the constitution presented (after various amendments) was adopted and opened for signing. The following officers were chosen: William Pratt, treasurer; Henry Cleverly, collector; E. S. Beals, auditor; E. M. Manson, Wilnot Cleverly, John W. Bartlett, parish committee.

The next parish meeting was held in March, 1854, in Harmonial Hall, now the office of Russell H. Whiting. Officers were chosen and it was voted to have weekly lectures if sufficient money could be obtained. Also that the society hold a meeting "Fast Day" to form a Sabbath School.

Pastors since 1873 have been: Rev. Anson Titus Jr., Rev. E. A. Perry, Rev. R. T. Sawyer, Rev. B. F. Eaton, Rev. I. D. Morrison, Rev. Edward Morris, Rev. Judson F. Marvin, Rev. Melvin S. Nash, Rev. Rufus H. Dix, Rev. Arthur Mercer, Dr. Charles C. Earle, and Roger L. Marble.

The golden anniversary of the dedication of the chapel was celebrated in January, 1923.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Historical sketch by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Allen

Benedict's "History of the Baptists" narrates that in the year 1639 an attempt was made in Weymouth to gather a small company of Baptist believers; but these promoters of the cause of religious liberty were scattered by the secular authority, fines being imposed, with disfranchisement and banishment threatened unless they "reformed". For more than 200 years no further effort was made in Weymouth to secure a foothold for the dissemination of Baptist views; and it was not until the year 1861 that resident brethren connected with the Braintree church establish a weekly prayer meeting, which was soon followed by the organization of a sewing circle with the object of hiring a hall for the occasional Sabbath meetings.

The success of this endeavor induced the small company of believers to enlarge their work by securing stated Sabbath services, for which the neighboring pastors gave their aid, as far as was possible. March 13, 1853, a Sabbath school was started, and the interest continued to increase, until it culminated in the formation of the First Baptist Church of Weymouth, which was organized February 7, 1854, with twenty constituent members. March 13, 1854, a committee was chosen to erect a house of worship, and the lot on the southeast corner of Washington and Broad streets was purchased as a site for the building. August 10, 1854, the church was publicly recognized with appropriate religious services in the Union Congregational Society, of which Rev. Jonas Perkins was then pastor, the sermon being preached by Rev. Baron Stow of Boston, text: John 3:30.

Sept. 21, 1854, the church was admitted to the Boston South Baptist Association, and a committee of that body recommended that aid to the amount of $1500 be extended for the erection of a chapel, Rev. Andrew Dunn being appointed to collect money for the new house. A religious awakening in the community soon followed, and large accession was made to the church, which induced the body to take steps for the settlement of a regular pastor, and on April 1, 1855, Rev. Andrew Dunn entered upon this duty. The work of chapel erection was completed, and July 12, 1855, the house was dedicated to the worship of God, Rev. Rollin H. Neale of Boston, delivering the sermon, and Rev. Jonas Perkins of the Union Congregational Church, participating in the exercises.

Rev. Mr. Dunn completed his work in 1858. Rev. L. Abbott was called to the vacant pulpit in May, 1858, and continued as pastor until May 24, 1863. Rev. Gideon Cole became pastor on November 1, 1863, and the demand for seats in the chapel, having reached its capacity, steps were taken for the erection of a new edifice, for which a building committee was chosen June 20, 1863, and on June 1, 1865, ground was broken on the site of the present house of worship for its erection, the building being completed January 31, 1866, and dedicated with appropriate services February 1 following, the sermon being delivered by the pastor, who had labored strenuously in the work of procuring the funds for the structure.

October 13, 1870, Rev. G. Cole tendered his resignation of the pastorate and removed to Red Wing, Minnesota. March 2, 1871, Rev. C. H. Rowe was called as pastor, and continued his service until April, 1874. Rev. William C. Wright accepted the call of the church August 29, 1874, continuing as pastor until November 1, 1877. Rev. P. A. Nordell was called to the pastorate February 7, 1878, and resigned November 11, 1882. Rev. S. J.

Axtell became the pastor December 25, 1882, and tendered his resignation June 1, 1888. Rev. Wesley L. Smith received a call August 12, 1888, entering upon his duties the following month.

October 14, 1889, a special meeting of the church was called to consider the subject of incorporation of the church as a legal body, and at an adjourned meeting October 27, the church unanimously voted to become incorporated, adopted Constitution and bylaws in agreement with statutes, and elected the proper officers. The certificate of incorporation, signed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, was duly received and placed on record.

April 30, 1894, Pastor Smith closed his labors with the church, during his pastorate Mr. Smith welcomed seventy members into the fellowship of the church. The pastorate of Rev. C. F. Clark of Swansey, N. H., began February 1, 1895, and continued two years and three months, closing April 30, 1897. During Mr. Clark's pastorate, three were added to the church, and many more became interested. He afterwards served the Baptist Church in North Reading, Mass., where he remained over seventeen years. Two weeks after the close of Mr. Clark's labors, Rev. Frank B. Cressey of Tremont Temple, Boston, (formerly of San Francisco) began supplying the pulpit May 15, 1897, and accepted a call to the pastorate in the following August, and continued to serve the church, acceptably, for more than eleven years, resigning in 1909, making the longest pastorate in the history of the church, during which he welcomed sixty-six members into the church. Upon leaving Weymouth, Mr. Cressey retired from the active pastorate, moving to Cambridge. Both he and Mrs. Cressey still retain their membership and interest in this church, and also in the G. A. R. and the Women's Relief Corps of Weymouth.

After Mr. Cressey retired, the church called Rev. Robert H. Carey to the pastorate. After serving two years, and adding twenty-eight members to the church, Mr. Carey resigned. At this time Rev. P. H. Nordell supplied the pulpit for one year, adding six members to the list. The church then called a young man to lead them in the person of Rev. Chester J. Underhill. He remained with them four years, and welcomed forty-five members into the church. Mr. Underhill worked along new lines, and did much for the church and community in a social way, being well liked by many.

In 1916, Rev. J. W. Tingley accepted a call to the church and for two years served with zeal and ability. Like Mr. Cressey, Mr. Tingley never took another charge, but served as stated supply for a short time, in one of these churches he was suddenly called up higher, to be with his Lord and "he rests from his labors." Twenty-eight members were added to the church during his short pastorate.

In September, 1919, the present pastor, Rev. C. W. Allen, by invitation, began to supply the pulpit, accepting a call to the pastorate a few months later, but did not move to Weymouth until the following spring, as he was engaged in welfare work in the U. S. Navy at Hingham and Charlestown. During the present pastorate the church property has been repaired and improved, sixty-seven persons have united with the church, and the missionary offering of the church has been greatly enlarged.

During all of these years the church has enjoyed the fellowship of many faithful and talented members, who have served the cause with ability and distinction. Several leaders, both men and women, have gone out from the church to take their places in the world and have served with great acceptance.

Many of the prominent members have gone to their reward, but several still remain with us, among them are Deacon M. R. Wright, Deacon Bradford Hawes, Seth Arthur Pratt, Miss Cora Graves, Mrs. Viola King, Deacon Nathan Crane, and Miss Lucy Crane. The Sunday School has been a strong arm of the church from the beginning, and under the leadership of Mr. R. L. Stone, is still holding to its standard.

The young people are well organized in the Christian Endeavor and Juniors, the Young Men's Club, the Young Ladies Auxiliary, and the Boy Scouts. The Ladies Sisterhood has proven itself to be a real help and inspiration to the church and community.

The church has one of the finest organs this side of Boston, and the present organist, Mr. Irving N. Hayden, is keeping up the fine record of many distinguished musicians who have served in that capacity. The church has an unusually large number of talented singers, and entertainers who have and are at the present time giving freely of their time and effort. The public is always cordially invited to all the services of the church.

TRINITY CHURCH, WEYMOUTH

Weymouth in 1866, as a mission from Christ Church, Quincy. In 1867 services were held in Williams Hall, corner of Washington and Front streets by Rev. Henry Burroughs, rector of Christ Church, Quincy, and Rev. David G. Haskings. The Tilden place on Front street was bought in 1867 and in September of that year work was begun in altering the house over for a church and it was opened for service on December 8, 1867. Rev. Henry Burroughs was the preacher. Among the clergy who officiated in the early days were Revs. F. Gardner, D. G. Haskings, E. M. P. Wells, and Revs. Huntington, Collidge, Mills, Converse, and Gifford.

Rev. Henry Burroughs was called as rector and served in that position till July, 1868, when he became rector of Christ Church, Boston. The rectors who succeeded him were Rev. Samuel R. Slack, Rev. Thomas W. Street, Rev. F. O. Barstow, Rev. W. F. Lhoye, Rev. W. C. Winslow, Rev. John H. Jerome, Rev. Charles L. Wells, and Rev. William Hyde, been spent in that way. It is now necessary to make repairs again, officiated N. Hasson, W. D. Nicholson, G. W. Dirrell, Jubal, Hodges, and Samuel Cutler of Hanover.

The building was very old when it was bought and consequently was often in need of repairs, and the records show that every few years repairs had to be made. During the rectorship of Mr. Hyde $2000 has been spent in that way. It is now necessary to make repairs again, but it is felt that a new church should be built and Rev. William Hyde brought the matter before the Archdeaconry and a committee was chosen by the Archdeaconry to assist the people in raising money to build a new church in a better location. The work of this committee has been delayed by the raising of $1,000,000 for the Theological School in Cambridge, but the committee has at last got to work and put forth the following which will no doubt produce results:

There are about 6000 people within a radius of two miles of the site of the proposed new church; Weymouth has 15,000 population. Three hundred years ago there was a church in Weymouth; it was closed by order of the Puritans.

Present church begun as a mission in 1866. A house 200 years old was bought; converted into present church on a side street, a poor location; building today is in bad repair; not worth spending one cent on it. Committee of the Archdeaconry of New Bedford to help Trinity church get a new church: Rev. H. K. Bartow, chairman, Quincy; Rev. D. B. Matthews, S. T. D., Brockton; C. C. Payson, Brookline.

The Rev. William Hyde is chairman of the Parish Committee for raising funds.

Home Town Bakery

The Home-Town Bakery opened a wholesale bakery business on March 7, 1921, starting with one employee and one delivery truck to deliver to the grocery stores; the bread and rolls being sold through the grocery stores. The business grew rapidly and now after the business has been running two years, four trucks are needed to make the deliveries to the grocers in all the Weymouths, and the South Shore to Greenbush and Nantasket, also Quincy and the Braintrees. Eleven employees are needed to take care of this growing business, and all of them reside in either the Weymouths or Braintree and the payroll of these eleven employees amounts to around $1500 monthly.

Over half a million loaves of bread and thousands of dozens of rolls, cakes, pies etc. have been manufactured and sold during the two years of business.

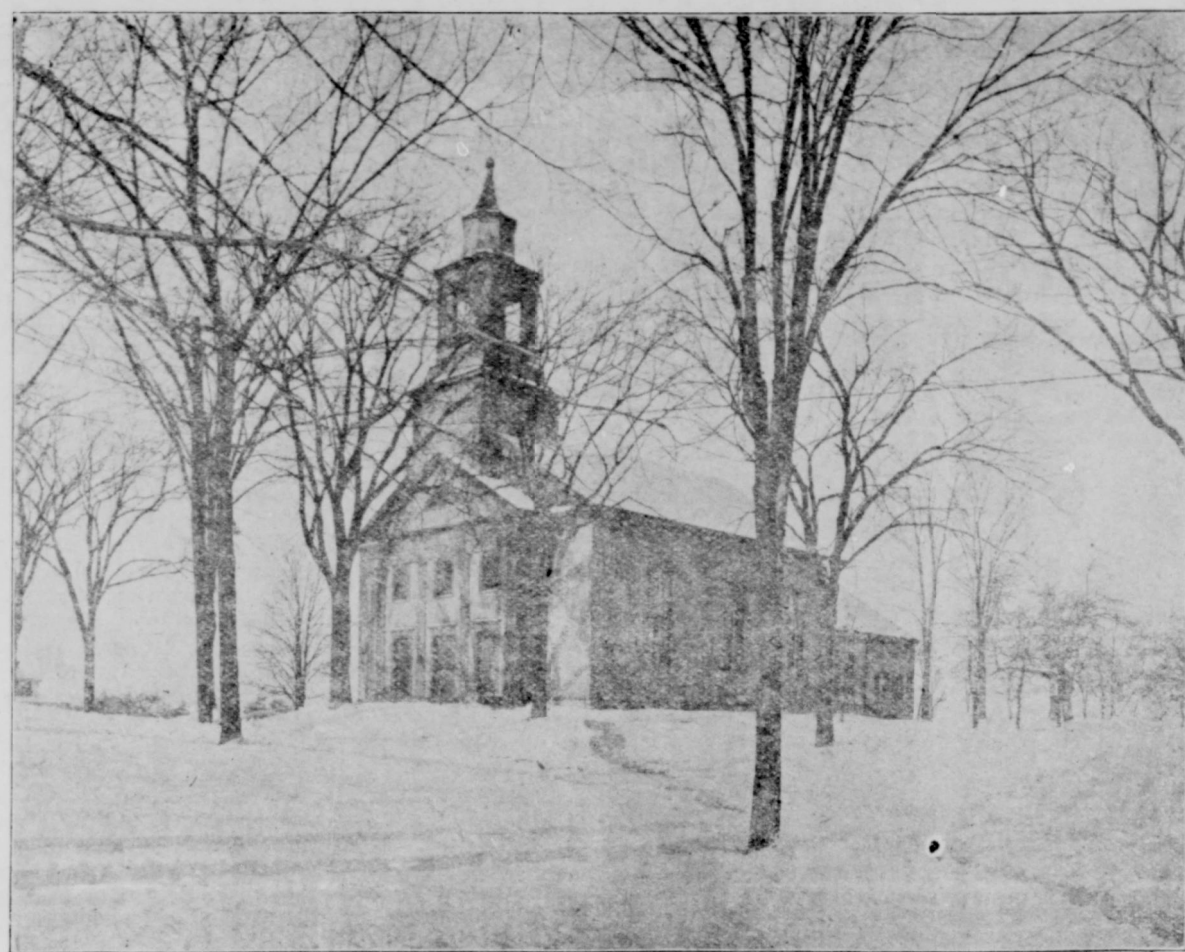

Weymouth is big enough to support a much larger baking institution, if the public would ask for, and insist upon getting Home-Town products, thereby adding more prosperity to their own town.

We believe that Weymouth has a splendid future before it and hope that we shall be here a goodly number of years to help to make her a bigger and better Weymouth.

Yours for the future,

J. H. PFLAUMER

Religious Life of Weymouth Dates Back to Early Settlement

THE FIRST CHURCH

The First Church in Weymouth is, as its name implies, the historic church of the town. Rev. Mr. Morrill, a rector of the Church of England, came with the Robert Gorges colony who made the first permanent settlement in the town. Although little is known of the religious history of the settlers for the first dozen years, it seems altogether probable that during that time there was always religious worship in the colony.

In 1635 began the more authentic history of this ancient church. The old Town Records contain the votes passed regarding the First Parish up to 1723, as until that date the Town and Parish were one body. The Great and General Court in that year set off the South Parish and the North Parish became a separate body. In 1724 the North Parish voted to buy a church record book and also a Parish Record Book. Parish Warrants exist from 1774 to date with some omissions and recently a still earlier warrant has been found. The covenant of the church is the same that was adopted May 12, 1795, and was found written on a fly-leaf of the pulpit hymn-book. The committee appointed to draw up this creed consisted of Rev. Jacob Norton, Deacon Cotton Tufts and Brother Elisha Bates.

THE CREED

"You believe in God as the only living and true God, in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world, and in the Holy Spirit as the enlightener, sanctifier and guide of God's people. You believe also in the holy scriptures as a revelation from God—as such you embrace them, promising you will make it your careful, conscientious, and persevering endeavor to regulate your conduct agreeably to their requirements.

"These things, as in the presence of God and these witnesses, you solemnly and religiously profess to believe, and promise, by Divine aid, faithfully to perform."

The following ministers have been associated with this church in these three hundred years: Revs. William Morrill 1623, Mr. Barnard 1624, Joseph Hull 1635, Thomas Jenner 1636, Robert Lenthal 1638, Samuel Newman 1639, Thomas Thacher Jan. 2, 1644; Samuel Torrey 1694; Peter Thacher 1707, Thomas Paine Aug. 19, 1719; William Smith Dec. 1, 1734; Jacob Norton Oct. 10, 1787; Josiah Bent Jr. Oct. 13, 1824; John C. Phillips Dec. 18, 1833; Joshua Emery Jr. Jan. 25, 1838; Franklin P. Chapin Oct. 22, 1873; Frank H. Palmer Oct. 28, 1886; Robert R. Kendall Oct. 1, 1891; Ralph J. Haughton Sept. 1, 1901; (Rev. Edward Norton was acting pastor from April 16, 1905, to May 27, 1906.); Edward J. Yeager Sept. 15, 1906 to Dec. 23, 1920; William Sharrott March 30, 1921, to Nov. 10, 1921; Leland D. Smith Dec. 27, 1921 to July 1, 1922.

Of these Rev. Samuel Torrey was the son of Capt. William Torrey, who with the 8-year-old Samuel came to Weymouth in 1640. He was pastor of the First Church for 41 years. He was a very able man and well known, having been twice asked to become president of Harvard College, and three times chosen to preach the General Election sermon by the Great and General Court. These sermons were each printed. Rev. Thomas Paine was an ancestor of the Robert Treat Paine family of Boston and was buried with his children in the North Weymouth cemetery.

A worthy descendant of today is Rev. George Lyman Paine, the recently elected Secretary of the Federated Churches of Greater Boston; Rev. William Smith was pastor of the church for 49 years. He was the father of Abigail Smith, who became the wife of President John Adams. In those early days the ministers usually kept the records of the church and in Mr. Smith's handwriting are found the entries of his celebrated daughter's baptism, admission to the church and her marriage to John Adams. Rev. John C. Phillips was the grandfather of William Phillips, Ambassador to the Netherlands.

The first church building is referred to in the records of the Massachusetts General Court, but its site is unknown. Earliest reference to the second building is found in the town records 1641. This was opposite the Soldiers Monument on the westerly side of the present North street. In 1862 it was decided to have a new meeting-house and it was built near the schoolhouse. This building burned in April, 1751. Rev. William Smith records that "The meeting house in Weymouth took fire and was consumed to ashes in a very short time. There were three barrels of gun powder (the town stock) in a sort of loft in the house, which made a surprising noise when it blew up." A fourth edifice was soon constructed which was used until the building of the present structure in 1832-33. This fifth building is now undergoing a thorough renovation and in the early fall it is hoped to re-dedicate it and to have a tercentenary celebration of the beginnings of the First Church in the town when old friends and new will be welcomed.

This ancient church possesses a pulpit Bible printed by Thomas Baskett, MDCCLII, presented in 1770. Its silver service was presented in the years 1753 to 1764. Most of this has been on exhibition at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The Sunday School was organized in 1815 with about 100 scholars and ten teachers.

The First Church in Weymouth may be said to be the "Mother Church" of the town. After a long period of life she began to lose many of her members through the forming of churches in other parts of the town. After a hundred years the Second Church was organized in South Weymouth 1723; in 1811 the Union Church of Weymouth and Braintree; in 1822 the first Methodist society of East Weymouth, and in 1852, 52 members withdrew to form the Pilgrim church at North Weymouth. In spite of these depletions the church has kept its lights burning and has a present membership of 116, 29 of whom reside out of the town. The church was incorporated Sept. 27, 1911.

In the language of one of its members, "The First Church in Weymouth looks back upon a life approaching three centuries full of historic interest. She sees about her other churches of her own and kindred communions, which have sprung up as the growth of the town has made their organization expedient. While the formation of these churches has taken away much of her strength, she continues in vigor and faithfulness to serve the cause of Christ. She repeats the words of Paul:—"I have fought a good fight; I have kept the faith."—From Church Memorial, page eight.

The present pastor is Rev. Stanley Marple who has been serving the church since Nov. 1, 1922. The other officers of the church are: moderator—John B. Merrill, clerk—Mercy M. Hunt, treasurer—Rufus Bates, auditors—Charles M. Taylor and Walter J. Sladen, superintendent of Sunday School—Fred E. Lunt, prudential committee—Louisa E. Humphrey, Edna L. Sladen, John B. Merrill, Rufus Bates, John H. Freeman, deacons—Allan C. Emery, John B. Merrill, Rufus Bates, James L. Wildes, church committee—pastor, deacons, clerk, Sunday School superintendent, Mrs. Mabel B. Jones, and Mrs. Edith K. Pearson.

CHURCH OF GOOD TIDINGS, UNIVERSALIST, NORTH WEYMOUTH

On June 28, 1874, 21 years after the Third Universalist Society of Weymouth was organized at Harmonial Hall, the church organization was formed. The chapel had been built the year previous. The list of members who formed the church were as follows, and numbered 22: Daniel Cram, Sophia E. Cram, Henry Cleverly, Margaretta M. Cleverly, William D. Thayer, Caroline L. Thayer, Wilnot Cleverly, Elizabeth H. Cleverly, Thomas F. Cleverly, S. Louisa Cleverly, Augustus Beals, Abbie F. Beals, Sarah P. Patch, Susan M. Rogers, Eliza Lovell, Narrissa Hersey, Sophia Lovell, Deborah B. Harding, Amelia S. Rouchman, G. W. Cleverly, R. F. Cleverly, Harriet J. Cleverly; all of these have passed away. The next member French to join was Mrs. Lizzie French—on Dec. 27 of the same year. Mrs. French is at the time of writing the oldest living member of the church. On Jan. 2, 1876, Amanda J. Wilder, Lydia A. Manuel, and Flora G. Gardner joined. Of these three Mrs. Manuel is the only living member. From this time on the church membership has steadily increased until at the present time there are 74 members.

The earliest records have not been found with the exception of the list of members. The constitution and bylaws were revised by a committee and adopted Oct. 27, 1894. Article I of the constitution reads, "This church shall be known as the church of Good Tidings."

Later on this name was lost sight of, until looking over the records some two years ago, it was again brought to light and the church now is recognized as the earlier members named it, Church of Good Tidings, Universalist.

Before the organized church was formed in 1857, preaching service on Sundays, was held in Harmonial Hall with Rev. Robert L. Killam, commonly known as Father Killam, of Assinippi, as regular pastor. Up to the year 1862 he preached along with various supplies. After that the pulpit was supplied by ministers around Boston. Some of them later became great leaders of the Universalist faith.

In 1875, Rev. G. W. Whitney of Quincy was engaged as regular pastor and remained as pastor through 1876 and part of 1877. From then until 1879, the pulpit was supplied. In 1879, Rev. Anson Titus of Weymouth was engaged as pastor and remained until July, 1880. He was preaching at the Weymouth church also, and lived in Weymouth.

The next two years the church joined with the Quincy church in the services of Rev. E. A. Perry. From September, 1882, to April, 1885, Rev. Mr. Sawyer filled the pulpit together with the Quincy church. Rev. B. F. Eaton was the next pastor and from April, 1885, to August, 1893, preached in both this church and the Weymouth church. From September, 1893, to July, 1895, Rev. Mr. Morrison preached. From September, 1895, to March, 1898, Rev. Mr. Morris preached. From 1900 to 1909 Rev. Melvin S. Nash was the pastor. March, 1910, to September, 1914, Rev. Rufus H. Dix was pastor. The next pastor was Rev. Arthur Mercer, from February, 1915, to April, 1916. December 1, 1916, Dr. Charles E. Earle was engaged as pastor and preached until March, 1918. Rev. Elbert W. Whipple was the next pastor April, 1918, to February, 1920.

From the time of Rev. B. F. Eaton in 1885 to this time, this church and the Weymouth church shared the same minister, the service at Weymouth being in the morning and at North Weymouth in the afternoon.

From 1920 to 1921 Rev. Roger L. Marble was pastor of both churches, but in June, 1921, this church with Rev. Mr. Marble as pastor started its new career by itself with morning service on Sunday—the first since its existence. Rev. Mr. Marble remained pastor to the time of his sudden death Sunday morning, Nov. 26, 1922. Under his guidance and with the extra ambition of making its way alone the church has increased its valuation in many ways. New life, new energy, new ideas, all were added at this time. Since the death of Mr. Marble the pulpit has been supplied with candidates and others and a new pastor, Mr. John R. Brush, engaged, who when he comes to the church in September, 1923, will be Rev. John R. Brush. During all these years the church has been blessed with fine preaching and much is expected of both minister and church in the future. For a minister without the backing of the members of the church can add little to a community. As has been said by authority,—"Universalism is the biggest word in the English language. It has meant much in the past. It can be made to mean much more in the future."

PILGRIM CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Shortly after the year 1850, the First Church in Weymouth, finding itself straightened for room, decided to establish a colony in some other portion of the town. There being a considerable increase of population in North Weymouth, it was decided to establish the new church in that section.

Accordingly on May 14, 1851, an ecclesiastical Society was formed, the raising of necessary funds was undertaken, and on August 27 the work of building the new meeting-house was begun. Fifty-one members came with letters from the First Church, and on March 11, 1852, a Council of Churches was convened for the two-fold purpose of constituting Pilgrim Church, and dedicating the new edifice. Rev. Calvin Terry was chosen first minister, serving till the year 1857.

The church has been served by eleven ministers in the seventy-one years of its existence. They are: Rev. Calvin Terry 1852-57; Rev. Samuel L. Rockwood 1858-71; Rev. Louis B. Voorhees 1871-76; Rev. George Dodson 1876-79; Rev. Amory H. Tyler 1880-84; Rev. Willis D. Leland 1884-91; Rev. Alan B. Hudson 1892-96; Rev. Thomas H. Vincent 1897-07; Rev. Frederick G. Merrill 1908-12; Rev. Charles Clark 1912-13; Rev. Thomas Bruce Bitter 1919-.

It is impossible in this brief sketch to enumerate all that these men, each in his own way, have contributed to Pilgrim's progress, nor is there opportunity to mention the many laymen and women through whose devotion Pilgrim Church has been able through the years to wield a potent influence for good in the community of North Weymouth. The church has always stood upon the right side in great social and national questions, and during the war for the Union in '61, and the War for Democracy in '18 contributed substantially according to her numbers for the defence of these great causes. Mention should be made of the service of Rev. Charles Clark, pastor from 1912-18, who was given leave of absence to do Y. M. C. A. work in France during the Great War.

Pilgrim Church under its present pastor has made substantial advances both in resources and personnel. A new and attractive parsonage has been built. The church has been equipped with a modern motion picture plant. An active Men's Class has been established, which is doing much community service. The Church School and other organizations are flourishing. All indications point to years of increasing fruitfulness in service of Christian concerns to Weymouth as the town enters upon the fourth century of its history.

PILGRIM CIRCLE OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

According to the old records the Pilgrim Circle would seem to have originated in 1848 among a group of 32 women who called themselves, "The Female Charitable Society." The purchase of a Bible, Hymn Book and chairs is recorded as placed in the vestry of Pilgrim church.

On May 3, 1851, in compliance with a general invitation 22 women met at the first district hall and organized the Pilgrim Sewing Circle of North Weymouth, the object of the society being "To promote either directly or indirectly the cause of Evangelical Religion"; seventy-six working members joined, three of whom are Mrs. Ann M. Burgess, Miss Sarah J. Robbins, and Mrs. Lucena Torrey. Others unable to work donated a small sum and were called donors; these included men and women and numbered about 185. The officers were Mrs. Nathaniel Ford, directress; Miss Sarah Leach, assistant directress; Miss Ann Shaw, secretary, and Mrs. James Torrey, treasurer. There were also seven managers, and eight soliciting agents. The meetings were held at private houses in the afternoon. Fines were collected for non-attendance and for tardiness. The following votes, were passed at the first meeting "Voted to work on shoes and to spend the money in purchasing a carpet for the contemplated meeting-house."

"Voted to have no refreshments." Voted to dress in common apparel. The report of the first annual meeting held in the vestry (1852) states "That the work accomplished was the fitting of 1895 pairs of shoes, twelve pairs of Oxford ties, and the binding of 135 pairs of shoes. The amount of the receipts for the first year was $29.44. During this year a carpet was purchased for the church, not long after the laying of the carpet it was stolen and never recovered.

In 1852 a vote was taken to purchase trees to ornament the ground around the meeting-house.

In 1854 the meetings were held afternoon and evening, a certain portion of the time was devoted to scripture reading, and the services closed with prayer. Refreshments were served. During this year church shoes were built and rented by the Circle.

In 1855 it was voted to meet at private houses "Lady of the house" to provide two kinds of refreshments with tea. In the early days it was not considered proper to eat and drink in the vestry of the church and was not finally allowed without much discussion. Among the early members are found the names of Mrs. Helen Barnes and Mrs. Priscilla Holbrook.

On September 8, 1857, it was voted to paint the meeting-house white. At this time men and women were among the members as the record reads "Eight gentlemen have made themselves members of the circle."

As the years passed the Circle continued meeting in the church vestry and ever working to support the church.

In 1910 its constitution was changed to meet the changed manner of work and the needs of the society. Its name was changed to "Pilgrim Circle" of the Pilgrim Congregational church; its object first, to promote the social life of the church, second to aid the church financially. Much work has been done to promote the social life—receptions have been given, suppers served, and the sick visited to aid the parish financially. Entertainment, sales, supper, sewing, and the annual fair have brought in many dollars. Throughout its long existence the Circle has been a substantial support to the church and parish. It has also stood ready to aid the charitable work of the church and community. It is still today in a thriving condition with a membership of over fifty and doing an important work in the parish. The officers are:

President, Mrs. Abbie E. Beals; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Marcus I. Keene; 2d vice-president, Mrs. W. O. Collyer; secretary, Mrs. A. R. Gladwin; treasurer, Mrs. John W. Thomas; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Laura Libbey; assistant secretary, Mrs. Albert H. McKenney. The executive board also includes eight work committees, a flower and notifying committee.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY

The Young People's Christian Union of the Third Universalist Church North Weymouth, was organized in the spring of 1887. It was first called the "Young People's Society & Religious Improvement", under the leadership of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Pratt. A few years later when the State society was organized the name was changed to the Young People's Christian Union. This union has been in continuous existence ever since. The meetings are held every Sunday evening. Once a month a business meeting is held with a social hour following.

In the year 1921 a league was formed, under the direction of Rev. Roger L. Marble, which was called the South Shore League. This league consists of the unions in Brockton, Abington, Braintree, Quincy, North Weymouth, Weymouth, and Assinippi.

In 1922 a very successful operetta was conducted by the members of the Union, under the direction of Mr. Marble. The principle parts were taken by Mary Ford, Roger Marble, and Addison Dingwall. This was such a success that it was repeated two weeks later and was again very successful. In November of 1922 a great loss was sustained by the death of Mr. Marble. He was a very enthusiastic member of our own Union and was president of the South Shore League. The present officers of the Union are: President, Mary Ford; vice-president, Elwyn Husey; secretary, Marjorie Torrey; treasurer, Herbert Keene; collector, Dorothy Blackwell; auditor, Percy Ames; devotional superintendent, Elinor Menchin; onward superintendent, John Thomson; Legion of the Cross superintendent, Raymond Nash.

LAKEVIEW CEMETERY CORPORATION

Before 1850, land belonging to Samuel Blanchard and Esther Chessman on the westerly side of Pond street was used as a burying ground. Early in the fifties they gave this land to the Samuel Blanchard Cemetery Association was formed.

In 1884 it became known as the Samuel Blanchard Cemetery Corporation with the following officers: president and superintendent, Edward P. Paine; treasurer, George B. Chessman; directors, Alvin Hollis, Martin Derby, E. P. Paine, G. B. Chessman, George O. Paine.

In 1895 the name was changed to the Lakeview Cemetery Corporation. Since that time a large piece of land directly back of the cemetery has been purchased.

Alvin Hollis became president in 1900 and served 22 years. The officers elected for 1923 are as follows: president, J. Leona Bicknell; secretary, Evelyn I. Burrell; treasurer, T. F. Kelley; superintendent, Willie B. Loud; directors, Charles Mowry; Robert Polson, Charles Load, Mrs. Edward Tisdale, Frank Proctor, Alvin Thayer, Edward Zerega, H. C. Bridges, Charles S. Bicknell.

AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

Weymouth has an unique place in history, as will be seen from the following letter from Clarence W. Fearing, printed in the Gazette Nov. 11, 1921. As he clearly shows, Weymouth was the FIRST town in America with a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people." The FIRST town with an American democracy.

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

In connection with the Tercentenary of the settlement of Weymouth, it seems to me particular attention should be given to the position of the town in the history of local self-government. UNLIKE Plymouth and Boston, Weymouth never really had a local governor.

Capt. Robert Gorges came with authority to be governor, but gave it up in a very few months, and he had no successor.

The settlement practically had the entire management of its own affairs from the start.

The first civil officers appear to have been the so-called "townsmen"—the original selectmen.

I feel that it can be fairly maintained that American democracy had its FIRST development in Weymouth. Plymouth was settled first and the Pilgrims gave us the basis of American government in the Mayflower Compact; but it was the second town, WEYMOUTH, THAT INSTITUTED "government of the people, by the people, for the people".

Hingham on one side and Braintree on the other, quickly FOLLOWED her example and the resulting form of pure democracy, commonly called "town government" has spread all over the United States.

Why not raise as our slogan: "Weymouth the first town with an American government" and shout it from Maine to California.

Sincerely yours,

CLARENCE W. FEARING

CLARK C. E. UNION

About 200 Christian Endeavorers from the Weymouths, Scituates, Cohasset, Rockland, and North Abington gathered at the Rockland Congregational church last Friday evening, where the annual meeting of Clark C. E. Union was held. The program opened with a stirring song service under the direction of Song Master Mr. Bates of Cohasset. The Endeavorers were given a hearty welcome by the president of the entertaining society. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Batchelder of the Rockland Congregational church. Special selections were rendered by the church orchestra. The presiding officer of the occasion was President Walter Gaffney of North Abington.

The feature of the evening was an installation service. It was a very impressive one, and the message of the installing officer, Rev. John A. McClelland of the Fourth Presbyterian church, South Boston, was a most worth-while and helpful one. The officers installed for the ensuing year were:

President, Walter Gaffney of North Abington
Vice President, Warren Bates of Cohasset

Treasurer, Harry Fekkes, Hingham
Secretary, Alice Hyland of Rockland Lookout committee, Miss Ruth A. Nash, Weymouth Heights
Social committee, Carlton Litchfield of Scituate, Ruth Tobin of North Scituate, Irene Goetchnus of Abington Press committee, A. Clark Spaulding North Scituate
Missionary committee, Amy Clark of Rockland

Counselor, Rev. K. A. Handanian of East Weymouth
Alumni Supt., Herbert Rockwood of East Weymouth

Quiet hour supt., Doris Monroe of South Weymouth
Junior Supt., Helen Robertson of North Abington

Following the installation service the rollcall of societies was taken and the Clark Union banner was awarded to the Rockland Congregational C. E. for having the highest percentage. Rev. K. A. Handanian made the presentation speech and the banner was accepted by the winning society.

The annual secretary's report was a part of this meeting, and the records show Clark C. E. Union has had a very successful year. Many accomplishments have been made and President Gaffney has worked untiringly to keep the standard of the Union up to the high mark. The newly-elected officers show enthusiasm for the coming year and continued success is looked forward to by all. The meeting closed with song and prayer, after which a social hour was enjoyed.

Clark C. E. Union holds a picnic at Minot Saturday afternoon and evening, June 30.

A THOUSAND PARDONS

After the Grand Army page of this issue was printed, it was discovered that a serious error had been made. A few half-tones of deceased members had been inserted, and somehow the word "late" was inadvertently placed beneath the picture of Comrade Oliver Burrell. We all know that Comrade Burrell is very much alive; that he meets almost every day with "the Senate"; that he was out with the Grand Army on Memorial Day, and will on July 2 entertain comrades and friends at G. A. R. hall at his 88th Birthday Party.

GEM THEATRE

A large enthusiastic crowd enjoyed "The Third Alarm" at the Gem theater Tuesday night. A picture full of joy and sadness, but exciting all the way thru. Thursday, Walter Hiers will be featured in "60 cents an hour" You always get a good laugh in seeing one of these pictures. "One Wonderful Night" with Herbert Rawlinson and Irene Rich is a picture full of action and excitement from the time John Curtis (Herbert Rawlinson) picks up the overcoat belonging to the man he saw assaulted until the bogus "Count" is exposed. It is one thrill after another. Saturday brings Tom Mix in "Catch My Smoke", a picture you want to see.

WEYMOUTH MOTOR SALES CO., INC.

The Weymouth Motor Sales Co., Inc., the only Authorized Ford and Lincoln Dealer in the town of Weymouth, was incorporated July 7, 1921, and now occupies the old B. & B. Garage at Washington Square, Weymouth Landing. Since its start it has been very successful, thanks to the people of Weymouth and vicinity, who believe in patronizing home industries, and at present writing it is giving up-to-date service to the 1100 Ford owners of Weymouth.

At this Service Station may be found up-to-date Ford equipment and special machinery, also honest and capable Ford mechanics who know the Ford product thoroughly. This station is also in keeping with the policy of the Ford Motor Company in serving only Ford cars. Any Ford Owner driving into this garage does not have to put up with that impatient wait until a mechanic is through working on a car of another make.

Only genuine Ford Parts are carried, and the usual guarantee that goes along with the Ford Policy is at all times lived up to.

During the first year the sales of Cars, Trucks, and Tractors greatly exceeded our contract, and in 1922 this contract was increased, and again in 1923. This year we expect to retail three hundred Ford cars and trucks. Our field is constantly growing larger, and we are now making many deliveries in the surrounding towns, at the same time taking care of the people of Weymouth.

Our two service trucks, one a one-ton model for heavy work, the other a lighter model, are at all times ready to respond to any Ford car in trouble on the road. This latest edition to our Service Department was built in our own factory. It at all times carries a stock of parts that are most apt to give out on the road. It also carries gasoline and water emergency tanks, and a complete stock of tools for road work, including spare tires, tubes, and is ready to respond at a moment's notice.

The personnel of the company at the present time consists of Mr. L. A. Dill, President and Manager.

The Service Department is in charge of Mr. E. L. Fearing, who has under him the following mechanics: Mr. Walter Holmes, Mr. Robert Putnam, Mr. William Dwyer.

The stock room is in charge of Mr. Roy Unangst.

The salesmen are Mr. Dennis Toohar and Mr. August Hamel.

The mechanics on new cars are Mr. Howard Bennett and Mr. William Hughes.

Mr. Winslow Burr has charge of instructions and lessons.

The night watchman is Mr. John Lutton, while the office is in charge of Miss Nina Starr.

With the above personnel and the organization well departmentized, we feel sure that the Ford Motor Company is getting the best representation it possibly can get in the Town of Weymouth, and Ford owners of Weymouth are getting the very best service that the organization can give them.

PRAY & KELLEY

The Box Factory of Pray & Kelley, near Lincoln Square, is one of the busy places in Weymouth, turning out thousands upon thousands of boxes, such as are used by almost every industry in packing its finished products. This plant runs the year round manufacturing cartons for the local shoe factories and all other industries that need and use paper boxes, plain or printed; for they not only make boxes, but they run an extensive printing plant besides.

This business was established in Weymouth a quarter of a century ago by Messrs William E. Pray and Joseph Kelley, and has been a success, giving employment to many who would otherwise have to find labor outside of the town.

William E. Pray and Joseph Kelley, who have been associated together for 25 years in the manufacture of paper boxes and in printing, established the business on Front street, in a building that has since been torn down. Two years later they leased the old James Henry Clapp shoe factory, where they continued to do business for three years. That old structure has been taken down and but little remains to show where there was once a prosperous business and the hum of machinery.

Twenty years ago Pray & Kelley purchased the John W. Hart shoe factory from the Union National Bank and moved their business into it, and where they have since been located and where they have built up a successful business that has done its bit in adding to the prosperity of the town of Weymouth.

Mr. Pray was born in Weymouth, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pray, who resided on Washington street. He was educated in the public schools of Weymouth, and at the age of 25 went into business with his present partner, Mr. Kelley. He married Elizabeth Marshall Nash, daughter of William and Rebecca Nash of Weymouth. Three sons and two daughters have been born to them.

Mr. Joseph Kelley was born the son of Thomas and Mary A. Clark Kelley, and came to Weymouth when ten years of age. He attended the public schools of the town, the Y. M. C. A. school and Comer's Commercial College in Boston. He was a young man of unusual energy and ability and at the age of 20 years entered into business with his partner, Mr. Pray. In 1910 he was married to Miss Theresa Smith of Braintree.

Both Mr. Pray and Mr. Kelley are local men. Their interests are local. Mr. Kelley developed a taste for political life and in the years 1917 and 1918 was a member of the Board of Selectmen. He is now a member of the board of trustees of Tufts Library and of the Park Commission.

BRADLEY FERTILIZER WORKS

One of our important industries is the Bradley Fertilizer Works of the American Agricultural Chemical Company on Weymouth Back River. They were established by the late William L. Bradley in 1864, with a very small capacity at first, but they have been gradually expanded until they are now one of the largest in the world producing high grade complete fertilizers.

They are situated on a beautiful neck of land, nearly surrounded by water, and so free have they been rendered from objectionable odors by the consumption of gasses arising from treatment of the materials with acids chemicals, that land near the factory commands high prices and is already thickly dotted with cottages who like to enjoy a summer by the sea.

Upon near approach the magnitude of the factory buildings becomes more and more impressive. There are 1000 feet of wharf frontage and the water is of sufficient depth to accommodate steamships.

One of our honored townsmen, the late Levi B. Curtiss, occupied the position of General Superintendent of the works, from their establishment until his death, a period of over forty years. The appliances and methods of manufacture underwent great evolutions during that period.

In 1899 the Bradley Fertilizer Company was merged with the American Agricultural Chemical Company, which owns and operates a large number of fertilizer plants, also phosphate mines. In the busy season of the year nearly 500 men are employed by the Bradley Works.

While the use of commercial fertilizers was practically unknown in this country fifty years ago, the yearly consumption has reached the huge amount of over 6,000,000 tons and their use has become a necessity in successful farming.

ONE OF THE GAZETTE CORRESPONDENTS

Just why women should receive all the credit for having the virtue of patience is another of those unanswerable questions.

It is, however, our great pleasure to be able to point to the one man, at least, who has cultivated to the "nth" degree this self-same estimable quality.

Everett M. Holbrook of 19 Curtis avenue, South Weymouth, seems to be embodied the same stoicism of his early ancestors and that fight-to-the-finish determination which is permitting us today to be able to celebrate Weymouth's 300th Anniversary.

Almost everyone in South Weymouth knows Everett, but few appreciate how much he accomplishes in his day—which may range anywhere from 6 A. M. until midnight, when I have a hunch he disconnects his telephone. But, if there was still anything left that he felt he really ought to do in connection with his work, he would put in the full 24 hours.

Handicapped is a mild term to use in connection with this 29-year-old young man. Just when a boy is enjoying the full of life, infantile paralysis made its deadly stab at him and hit the mark, leaving him the full use only of one hand and arm and a prisoner in his chair. However, having a clever brain, ambition and indomitable will-power, I think he out-Coued the little French philosopher before Couéism was ever heard of and there must be written on his subconscious mind the phrase "what can't be cured must be endured."

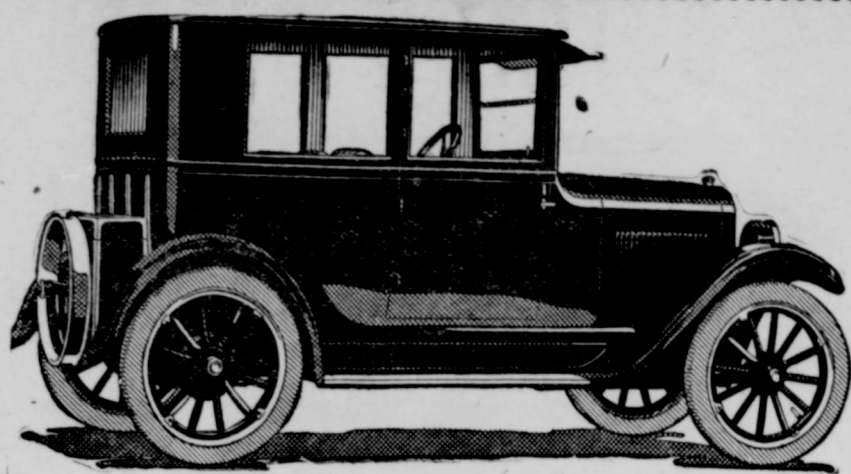

For the past six years Everett has been a correspondent for Weymouth Gazette and Transcript; for nine years he has been collector for the Old Colony Gas Company in his district. Everyone is welcome at his office. He is a bachelor and lives by himself—or, to be more explicit, he has had built for himself a large one-room domicile next to the residence of his parents and therein spends most of his waking and sleeping hours.

He is a quiet, reticent sort of a chap, hates to be interviewed, refuses to talk about himself, is perfectly independent, but is blessed with a saving sense of humor. When one wants to know something—they ask Everett. When one wants something done, they ask Everett the where and why. He loves animals, flowers, books, children and people.

During the past year, he has taken on another task which I would have believed impossible if I had not seen it done. The little portable Remington that sits on the slide of his desk has long since paid for itself copying reports, letters, anything to earn an honest dollar, and greatly facilitates his newspaper work. If you will try running a typewriter with one hand, you will see just how easy it isn't.

The days come and go and they are busy ones for Everett. The telephone vies constantly with people for his attention. While he perhaps has little to say, he hears it all, sees it all, remembers it all, and rewrites it for the Gazette. His combination of duties doubtless permits him many a quiet chuckle and just how he discriminates between his duty to his paper and his duty to his friends is beyond me, so diplomacy might well be added to other qualifications.

But that is neither here nor there the gist of my whole story would call to your attention this young man in our own neighborhood, helping himself, helping others, truly a personification of 100 percent courage.

Put On a Paint That Stays Put

Hold on a minute, and say this to yourself before you put another cent into paint. Say that it costs just as much to put on a poor paint as a good one. Generally more.

A poor paint doesn't stay put. Doesn't, because you can't get out of anything what isn't in it. We have proven to our entire satisfaction that Lowe Brothers put stay-putness in every gallon of paint they make.

Stay-put is just another way of saying it stands weather's wear and tear. Drop in and we will show you a color card and tell you some paint facts, which, have a notion you have never been told.

Many Miles of Street Railway in Weymouth

Weymouth is fortunate in having a fine system of street railways, although it has been necessary to reduce the mileage because of some unprofitable lines that have been discontinued, so far as the running of cars is concerned.

The first electric railway was laid in Weymouth 33 years ago, and the system developed from that time until it was possible to reach almost any point in New England by the trolley lines.

The Weymouth lines have suffered very little from labor troubles, and have been remarkably successful in running their cars regularly and on time, furnishing a service that has been greatly appreciated by the people of the entire community, not only of Weymouth, but adjacent and communities reached by the lines that radiate from Weymouth.

In 1920 there was a strike of the operators caused by the use of the Rook register on open cars. It was of short duration and was amicably settled by arbitration within 24 hours; the terms of settlement allowing the company six months in which to discontinue the use of the Rook register on open cars. Another strike occurred May 3d of the present year on the Lawrence Division, caused by a disagreement between leaders of the Car-men's Union and the members, who did not want to accept the conditions agreed upon between the officers of the Union and the Company. Since that time everything has been moving along pleasantly.

In 1914 conditions were such that the affairs of the Street Railway were placed in the hands of receivers and trustees were appointed to manage the operation of the system, and it was during the administration of the aforesaid receivers that it was decided that certain lines were unprofitable and their abandonment necessary.

Acting upon this decision certain lines ceased to operate, some of which are yet serviceable, with the raising and repair of the road-bed, while in other cases the rails were taken up.

In the vicinity of Weymouth the abandoned lines are: the Nantasket Beach Line—Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth to Nantasket Beach; the Pleasant Street line from East Weymouth to South Weymouth Depot; the Port Point line, Thomas' Corner to Bradley Fertilizer Works at Port Point. The reason for this act was the fact that the lines had come to a point where repairs were necessary and required so large an expenditure of money to put them in good and safe working condition that their continued operation was considered unpractical. The rails are still on Pleasant Street and a part of the Nantasket line.

The Pleasant Street line is now operated with busses, five in number—Stewart Chassis built by the Stewart Automobile Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y. The bodies were put on the chassis by the Patterson Body Company of Patterson, N. J.

There are two 21-passenger busses and three 29-passenger busses, making regular service from East Weymouth to Pond Plain over the Pleasant Street line.

Three of the busses are new and just recently been placed in service, each operated by one man.

These busses are considered the finest pieces of apparatus of their type in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, serving the people in the best possible manner, under the present circumstances and satisfactory to the public.

On Thursday evening, May 31, at a Special Town Meeting, an article in the Warrant called for an appropriation of $5000 to defray the deficit on the operation of the car service of the Braintree and East Weymouth and Rockland and Braintree lines for one year.

The Appropriation Committee recommended an appropriation of $3700 and to receive in consideration a portion of the receipts of the Quincy-East Weymouth line, of which the Weymouth line receives no part of the receipts from Central Square to Quincy Point bridge, which is in the town of Weymouth.

The town meeting members voted 37 for and 72 against the appropriation. The result is, according to a statement of Supt. Connors, that it will be necessary to increase fares and curtail service or possibly abandon the entire service; but no action has yet been taken by the trustees.

During the winter, which has been uncommonly severe, and, according to Mr. Connors, one of the toughest in his seventeen years experience in railroading, not a trip was missed either by cars or busses, and he considers the service wonderful, in the face of adverse circumstances.

Supt. D. Connors, who is at present directing the affairs of the lines, was formerly of Quincy, and is well known to our people all along the line.

He has been with the Company as Superintendent since Sept. 1, 1921. Previous to that time he had had fifteen years experience on the Old Colony and Bay State lines.

He began railroading June 8, 1906, as motorman for the Old Colony Street Railway Company. Five months later he was transferred to Quincy as a motorman and two months later was made a conductor. This position he held for five months and was transferred to the Line Department at Quincy Point. Two years and eight months later he was transferred to the Repair Department at Quincy Car House, and three or four months later was made Starter at Quincy Square. About a year later he was transferred to Inspector, covering Quincy, Braintree, East Weymouth, and Nantasket. Later he was made Instructor of Men on Equipment and Operation of Cars over a territory that included 940 miles of track, from Newport, R. I., to New Hampshire.

The lines were placed in receivers' hands in 1914 and he was transferred back to Quincy Division as inspector, where he remained eight months, and then went to the Boston office, 245 State street, as inspector for the Asst. General Manager, where he remained during the war, and was then transferred back to Quincy as Superintendent of the Quincy Division, which included Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham, and Nantasket.

Sept. 1, 1921, Weymouth was made a separate division and Mr. Connors was appointed Superintendent, a position which he now holds.

The car operators of the Weymouth lines are mostly men who have been in the service of the Company for many years, some of them having seen continuous service for nearly thirty years. Among the old men who have served faithfully and have given the best part of their lives to the service are: George Walker, who for more than 28 years has been an operator. Others who have seen service equal or near to that of Mr. Walker are: John Gannon, William Moor, James Thoms, William Fields, Albert Poulin, and David O'Connell.

Those who have been in the service 20 years are: Everett Clapp, William Wilder, Joseph Ashton, Lewis Beach, David Kearns, Charles Kimball, James Murphy, Odus Wing, and Odus Soule.

Those who have been with the road 15 years or less are: Charles Hollis, Patrick Kearns, Warren Menchin, Lester Waite, James Long, George Jones, Charles Pratt, John Coyle, Albert Tirrell and Arthur Raymond.

The bus operators are: Thomas Daley, Roy Raymond, and Minot Matherson.

The carhouse employees are: Charles Austin, operating foreman; Harry Madden, operating foreman; Henry Storm, auditor; Timothy B. Griffin, repair foreman; Napoleon Guilmette, repair man; Albert D. Estes, line foreman; John Mahoney, lineman.

The Track Department employs 31 men; Patsy Lavelley is the efficient foreman. Michael O'Toole, trackman, has been with the Company since the first rail was laid, and he at that time, had charge of a gang of men which he directed with efficiency. Mr. O'Toole also helped to lay the first rail that was laid between Holbrook and Braintree Depot and between Braintree Depot and East Weymouth. The greater number of men employed in the track department are for the summer season only.

George Walker, 190 Middle street, Weymouth Center, began service with the Street Railway Company April 18, 1895, and ran the first car over the old Braintree and Weymouth line to Braintree Depot. At that time the cars stopped in front of the waiting room at Weymouth Center. The old car barn still stands at the foot of the hill, nearby, and is now used for the storage of cars. Mr. Walker has been in continuous service ever since, and has never missed a trip on account of illness. He has been particularly fortunate in the fact that he has had but one accident in his long years of service, and that happened since the advent of one-man cars, when an automobile drove over a sandbank and collided with his car. The damage was slight, and with that one exception he has not had an accident that has cost the Company a cent.

Mr. Walker has ridden and walked over every mile of track the Company owns in the Weymouth Division, and a part of it in company with Supt. Connors, of whom he speaks in the highest terms, as a man who has worked his way up through all the branches of railway operation to the position he is so eminently qualified to fill.

John Gannon has been with the road some 27 or 28 years and has a record for efficiency that puts him in the list of the tried and true. His home is at 516 Broad street.

William C. Moor began railroading on the Hingham line about 26 years ago. When the Company consolidated with other lines about 18 years ago, and the Hingham and Braintree barns were abandoned, and the old iron foundry was made headquarters, Mr. Moor moved to Weymouth, and has since been in constant service on the Weymouth line.

James Russell Thoms, 22 Randolph street, started at Hingham 26 years ago, and like Mr. Moor, came to Weymouth 18 years ago, and during all these years has served faithfully and well a Company that has appreciated his service.

William N. Fields, 1228 Commercial street, entered the service of the Company 26 years ago, as a teamster during the construction of the Hingham line. At its completion he became an operator, in which capacity he has continued to the present time. He came to Weymouth 18 years ago and is today a Weymouth citizen.

Albert Poulin was a conductor on the old Quincy line 29 years ago, running from Quincy to Thomas' Corner. He came to Weymouth shortly after the line ran its cars from the Weymouth barn, and has continued to discharge his duties with an enviable degree of efficiency.

David O'Connell is one of the old operators, having been with the company from its first activities. In fact he was one of the first men to be employed on the line. He is a Weymouth man and a good operator.

Everett Clapp is a native of Weymouth, and one of the men who began railroading later, some twenty years ago, and is still in active and efficient service.

William Wildes is another of the four-stripe men, having been with the road more than twenty years.

Joseph Ashton is a Weymouth man who has been in the employ of the Company for twenty years and is an operator who wears his four stripes with just pride.

Lewis Beach is another native of Weymouth who wears the four stripes of honorable service with the Company for twenty years and more.

David Kearns is a native of North Weymouth, who for twenty years or more has been an operator on the Weymouth lines, and who now wears his four stripes with the honor of a veteran.

Charles Kimball is also a Weymouth man, enjoying the distinguished honor of wearing the four stripes, signifying at least 20 years of service as an operator.

James Murphy is also one of the four stripe order of veterans in the service of the Weymouth Division.

George Jones is wearing three stripes, indicating at least fifteen years of service as an operator.

Odus Wing is a Weymouth man who has been in the service of the company for twenty years.

Odus Soule has been with the Company eighteen or twenty years as an operator upon the local lines.

Charles Hollis has won his three stripes as an operator and he is also one of our home-town men in good standing.

Patrick Kearns of North Weymouth is an operator who has won his three stripes in the service of the Company.

Warren Menchin is of the younger set, wearing two stripes, indicating ten or more years of operating service.

Lester O. Waite of 82 Middle street, East Weymouth, has been an operator for at least ten years.

James Long of North Weymouth has been operating for ten or twelve years, and both he and Mr. Long are wearing the two stripes of the ten-year period of railroad activity.

Charles Pratt, a native of North Weymouth, has been with the Company for a number of years.

Albert Tirrell of East Weymouth has seen six or seven years of service.

Arthur Raymond ran on the line years ago, when two-men cars were in vogue. He returned to work on the Weymouth line within a month, after an absence of about five years.

Thomas Daley has been operating a bus for two years.

Roy Raymond, formerly a motorman, now drives a bus line. He has been with the Company for about ten years.

Minot Matherson, a bus driver, has been in the employ of the Company less than two years.

Charles Austin, operating foreman, began work for the Company some thirty years ago. He was formerly a conductor, but was made a car starter in Quincy Square, a position which he held for a number of years, noted for his efficiency. He has been in Weymouth about five years.

Harry Madden, operating foreman, was an operator, running out of South Braintree barn as a conductor for a number of years. He has been employed as operating foreman in Weymouth for about four years.

Henry Storm, auditor, formerly of East Braintree, has been at the Weymouth barn less than one year, but he is well liked by all who know him.

Timothy B. Griffin, repair foreman, and Napoleon Guilmette, repair man, have been with the Company for many years, a fact that is in itself sufficient recommendation for their ability and interest in the work they have to perform.

Albert D. Estes, line foreman, has been with the Company about four years.

John Mahoney, the lineman, has been with the Company about two years.

The long years of service of the employees of the Weymouth Division of the Massachusetts Electric Railways, is not only proof of efficiency on the part of the men, but appreciation on the part of the Company, the officials of which, knowing that they have the very best men they can find, intend to keep them as long as they are able to labor.

OLD COLONY CLUB

The following is an extract from an address delivered to the club by Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook on November 9, 1922, on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Old Colony Club, which has been brought up to date:

Early in the year 1897, Mrs. Mary Holbrook, Mrs. Tristram Newell and Mrs. George L. Wentworth met and discussed and studied ways and means to bring the women of the village (South Weymouth) together in one common ground believing if they were organized they would be a power for good.

To organize a club for women was not so easy then as now, but in February, 1897, 75 women met in the small room of the Opera House, signed by-laws and the constitution and elected the following list of officers:

President—Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook
Vice Presidents—Mrs. Jennie E. Clark, Mrs. E. Augusta Wheeler, and Mrs. L. Maria Simpson.

Treasurer—Miss Annie M. Nash
Secretary—Mrs. Elizabeth W. Newell
Directors—Mrs. Lucinda A. Cook, Mrs. Annette S. Wentworth, Mrs. Lucia A. Nash, Miss Ruth N. Tower, and Miss Alice B. Raymond.

Our first year book tells wonderful things. First was laid a firm foundation which has been built upon year by year and stood the test of time. The pioneers who planned the same knew little of woman's work outside the home and church, but to save expense they conquered their fears and read splendidly prepared papers on most interesting topics to fill the program of a most interesting year.

Our first real club day was held in the Norfolk Club rooms, and at that meeting was presented to us an historic gavel, which was used then and at every meeting since. It was a gift from Mrs. Sumner, wife of Gen. S. S. Sumner, and was made from a tree planted by Ulysses S. Grant when he was a lieutenant at West Point.

Through Mrs. Sumner's interest in our club we were enabled, by exhibiting her fine curios from the Philippines, to contribute a generous sum for the use of manual training in our schools.

What great inspiration we have received from listening to such people as Julia Ward Howe, the speaker at our second meeting; our own dearly loved Mrs. Alfred Tirrell, with whom we travelled so delightfully and comfortably to Alaska, the North Cape, and on a trip around the world; Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer; Mabel Loomis Todd; May Alden Ward; Rabbi Fleisher; Ex-Gov. Curtis Guild and many other distinguished speakers.

Music has been a special feature of our club life and we have been blessed indeed in the gifted members we call our very own. Miss Ella Clark sang the solo at our first meeting and with Mrs. Attwood, Mrs. Carroll, Miss Deane, and Mrs. Foster, has set a standard that has never been lowered.

The drama is looked forward to every year and our players have made a wide-spread reputation for themselves.

Guest night is the social event of the season, though there isn't quite the anxiety now there was on the first gentleman's night. Then the one great aim was to show the men of our families the true object of our club. Through the help of Miss Deane we had a wonderful program—Ivan Morowski, bass; Walter Loud, violinist; Miss Hussy, elocutionist, and Corthelli, accompanist. Dr. Gallagher of Thayer Academy was the speaker. It certainly would not have been considered a dressy affair. If the writer remembers rightly only two men were in dress suits, the only two in the village probably; there were no new dresses made for the occasion, but we were clothed from our necks to our feet.

In the 25 years we have not been receiving without giving. Service has been our watchword. We introduced sewing and manual training into our schools, and have given goodly sums to the Fogg Library, the Weymouth Hospital, and to many worthy causes outside our town.

Our motto is "One Mind, One Purpose, One Successful Result." We have been many minds in one, but we have had the one purpose to provide literary and social advantages for its members and to promote philanthropic and educational work in the community. With such a purpose how could we be otherwise than successful!

We have a membership of 300 with the following officers elected for 1923—1925:

President—Mrs. Nelson J. Gay
Vice Presidents—Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. John F. Robinson
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Ritchie T. Howe
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Arthur Brackett
Treasurer—Miss Minnie B. Joy
Custodian—Mrs. Herbert F. Vining

That Man Durant

Now unfolds the chronicle of W. C. Durant; the epic of the quiet, smiling man, who by the vastness of his vision and creative genius stands alone among even the most brilliant figures of America's greatest industry.

It would take two pages of the Gazette-Transcript to reprint the story by W. A. P. John which appeared in the January Motor of "That Man Durant" who forced to choose between his fortune and his friends, he sacrificed ninety millions of dollars.

In youth he worked at several jobs and came to know me. He took hold of the Flint water works, when they were not paying a profit, and made them a success. Then he established the Durant-Dort Carriage Company, doing a big business. It was Durant that made a success of the Buick. Out of the profits of the Buick he acquired control of Cadillac, and Oldsmobile, and Oakland, and in 1908 created the General Motors Corporation.

Certainly there has been in the amazing career of W. C. Durant enough of high and colorful romance to warrant—concerning the man himself—an impression almost as unreal as it is picturesque.

Indeed there is ample reason for the public at large to consider W. C. Durant as a spectacular Wall Street operator—instead of a man whose inexhaustible energy has brought huge and successful industrial enterprises into being; ample reason to believe him a financial operator whose pyrotechnic dexterity amazed the banking world—instead of an able manufacturer who almost twenty years ago sensed the future of the automobile and built against that future; ample reason to look on him as the master plunger—instead of the master builder; ample reason to look on him as a man who worships money—instead of one who worships at the shrine of achievement; ample reason for all this, and why?

The Simple Beginning

Born in Boston 61 years ago, he removed with his parents to Flint, Mich., then hardly more than a crossroads village. There in the public schools he received his education, having been always a likeable student, but never a brilliant scholar. His text-book schooling completed, he became a clerk in the grocery store that was operated in connection with his grandfather's mill.

A Ninety Million Loss

One day—it was July 27, 1920,—one hundred thousand shares of General Motors stock were suddenly dumped into the market. The market was demoralized. General Motors stock broke to 20½. Durant, caring not one whit for money, and caring everything for the thousands who believed in him—bought that stock. More came into the market, at a lower price. He bought that, too. Then more and more and more—always at decreasing prices, which made all his previously acquired holdings worth just so much less. Alone, unsupported, single-handed, and smiling—he fought the battle, purchasing the stock down to $12 a share, endeavoring to save General Motors for those who had made it possible more than ten years previous.

Finally the odds became too great, even for Durant's great courage and greater faith. His friends had been extirpated without loss. But his entire personal fortune had been sacrificed. In a few short months he had turned himself from a man worth ninety millions of dollars to one owing two millions. And after making this great sacrifice; after standing in the breach that a receivership might be avoided, protecting with his fortune the interests of every stockholder of General Motors—what then? He was forced to sell his holdings at a price that would not pay his debts, and this having been accomplished he was asked to resign.

On December 1, 1920, he appeared in his office for the last time as president of General Motors. About him his men were working with tears welling in their eyes and their throats filled with a strange thickness. He entered—quiet, unperturbed, and smiling. He signed a few papers, attended to a few details, and then put on his hat and coat.

"Well," he said, without a trace of rancor or regret, as he glanced about the room, "May 1st is usually national moving day. But we seem to be moving on December first." That was the exit line of the man who has been called the "soul of General Motors". O'Neill has never written a finer one.

And in those passing years what had he accomplished? Having begun in 1903 with nothing but vision, courage, and confidence, he left seventeen years later an institution of whose immensity cold figures give only a faint conception; an institution comprising 78 divisions, 2000 acres of land, plants in 35 cities, 1500 buildings containing 32,000,000 square feet of floor space, 100,000 employees, 40,000 stockholders, 12,000 dealers, an annual business of almost $600,000,000, and an outstanding capitalization of $350,000,000. Visualize it if you can. The world contains nothing else comparable. He had made and saved millions for his friends. And for himself a priceless name.

Durant Motors

And yet in the two short years that followed he again startled the world—this time with an achievement that even dwarfs the ones of which I have been writing. It is the most amazing story in the entire amazing history of the industry—the story of Durant Motors, Inc., to whose multiplicity of absorbing details this entire article could easily be devoted.

Having announced that he would take a vacation (and it later came out that for his eighteen hours' work a day as president of General Motors he had never drawn a salary or handed in an expense account). Mr. Durant wrote 67 letters to personal friends. He told them that he was planning to build and market "just a real good car" and invited them to invest in the company that would bear his name. Within 48 hours he had received checks and subscriptions for over $7,000,000, two million dollars of which were returned, only five million being required.

On January 12, 1921, Durant Motors was incorporated—without a car—without a plant—without a hammer—without a single piece of steel—without anything but W. C. Durant and the faith of his friends. To his banner came flocking his old loyal lieutenants—men with whom he had worked for years—men who seem to idolize him in a strangely intense and beautiful fashion. Within 47 days the first Durant car had been designed and built. I make that statement with the utmost directness, because anyone with the faintest conception of the magnitude of the task can appreciate what that means; while for those who do not understand, an involved explanation would be required. Accept my statement then, that it was a stupendous accomplishment. For, remember, the Durant is exactly what its creator said it would be—"a real good car". Four months and four days later the public saw the Durant Four for the first time. Less than ninety days thereafter the company had received orders for 30,000 cars valued at $31,000,000, at an unbelievably low total sales expense of 1.20 of 1%.

On February 15, 1922, Mr. Durant announced that the company would build a small four cylinder car of modern design and retail the various models at current Ford prices. It was the famous Star car—and a superbly chosen name it was, too! Short, easily pronounced, spelled and remembered, even by the most ignorant. Three weeks later the first Star was shown at Washington, where 27,000 people saw it the first day. In every city where it has been shown thousands have flocked to see it. Here in Detroit the show room was stormed, and after waiting for several hours to get a glimpse of W. C. Durant's famous model, I gave up in disgust. Ten thousand dealers have applied for the Star franchise; of that number 1000 have been accepted. As these words are being written—and doubtless they will be obsolete by the time they appear in print—orders for 231,000 Star cars (all that can be built with present plants up to January 1, 1924) have been accepted with deposits; and over 300,000 orders are on the books waiting to be accepted.

On December 1, 1922, Durant Motors, Inc., had through its various divisional companies, built and marketed over 46,000 Durants and over 5500 Stars, valued approximately at $50,000,000. In addition to the Durant Fours and Sixes and the Star, the company is building the Mason truck, the Locomobile, and will in a few months introduce the Flint Six, that will retail for less than $1200. Manufacturing activities are being carried on in 28 cities in the United States and Canada. Large plants either acquired by purchase or built with dizzying speed, are being operated in Elizabeth, N. J.; Long Island City, N. Y.; Muncie, Ind.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Lansing, Mich.; Oakland, Cal.; and Leaside, Ontario, while two plants costing more than $1,000,000 apiece are being rushed to completion in Flint.

Over 146,000 Stockholders

Of 86 makers of motor cars in America, only seven showed a larger production in the second quarter of 1922. Over 27,000 people are employed in Durant activities. Over 3000 dealers are selling Durant products. A balance sheet I saw today showed assets of over $62,000,000 and net profits exceeding four millions. And over 146,000 people are stockholders in Durant enterprises.

The latter statement is called to your particular attention because there is only one corporation in America having a greater number of partners—the American Telephone and Telegraph Company which was incorporated in 1885. Of the ten American corporations with the largest number of stockholders, two are Durant creations—Durant Motors, Inc., and the General Motors Corporation. The average age of the nine, exclusive of Durant, is 31 years. And Durant Motors, Inc., is less than two years old as these words are written.

Now that is the picture—full of wonderful, glorious colors. And what is behind it all? What is the character of the quiet, smiling man whose creative energy has brought it into being with such bewildering rapidity? What is the secret of his influence over men, not only those who come into contact with his personality, but those who never having seen him, still place their savings in his keeping, so that they may share the profits of his enterprises. What is he like, man to man across the table, aside from his millions and his reputation. What have been his failings.

To clarify the picture, let us consider the last proposition first. Being mortal W. C. Durant has made mistakes. Only one of them to my mind has exercised any considerable influence over his life's course. And that mistake can be attributed to a peculiarly rare, and desirable trait—modesty.

Not a Stock Manipulator

W. C. Durant's great mistake has been that he has allowed the public to believe that he is a plunger, a manipulator, a speculator, and a slashing wolf of the stock market. For many years he refused to sanction the use of his name for publicity purposes. He refused to counteract harmful propaganda with the helpful truth. And so it was only natural that the public would have this pitifully untrue conception of his character.

Instead of being by nature a plunger, he is, as you know, an exceptional conservatist. He has never speculated in the stock market for personal profit. He has, however, frequently gone into the market to protect the stock of his enterprises from ruthless attacks on the part of manipulators. Once he caught his enemies off their guard when they were endeavoring to depress the market. They had by a concerted attack, sold more General Motors than was in existence. He had "cornered the market." He could have crushed them mercilessly. But in so doing he would have ruined thousands of men, dozens of banks, and scores of brokers; and so after conferring with officers of the New York Stock Exchange he placed a nominal value on the stock—the average price which he had paid in purchasing it—and the guilty were allowed to escape because the innocent were being ruined. There are some wonderful human interest stories in that famous corner. Stories of men—old men and young, from all levels of the social strata—who had speculated and were faced with ruin and disgrace. They communicated with Durant, either by piteous letters or through their friends. He took time to see them and LOANED THEM ENOUGH OF HIS OWN STOCK WITHOUT COST TO SAVE THEM. But I must hurry on.

It was only a few years ago that he was convinced that good publicity is one of the most precious business assets. Someone pointed out to him that had his character been truthfully revealed to the public, he could have gone to the public for money—picked them for business partners, instead of a crew that carried knives in its boots. For the public, knowing a man and his record of accomplishment, will become his business partners if permitted. So it was only yesterday, so to speak, that the public began to know the real Durant—to understand the beautiful balance of his mind and appreciate him as an incomparable creator of economic wealth—a creator of goods and factories and jobs, instead of merely paper profits. And what has been the result. Wall Street is absolutely and utterly out of the picture, so far as the financing of Durant Motors, Inc., is concerned. Instead of from bankers' syndicates, the money has come from 146,000 citizens, some of whom hold only a few shares of stock, but all of whom have implicit faith in the man.

A Breeder of Loyalty

In my contact with the industry, and especially its outstanding figures, I have encountered a strange and even touching affection for the man. His old lieutenants—now heading successful concerns of their own—speak of him as Napoleon's marshals must have spoken of the Little Corporal. Their attitude is a combination of love and admiration. And in the present Durant organization which is composed largely of men who have followed him wherever he has gone, the same affection obtains. He has gripped these men tight to himself—instilled in them a faith that is utterly unshakable—fired them with a loyalty that to me is a thing utterly new—and holds them wholly willing to a standard of endeavor that is both arduous and exacting. It is a beautiful thing—that loyalty of Durant's men to Durant. And yet it lends itself to easy analysis.

To begin with, he has a personality that is singularly—I pause for the proper word—enveloping. His voice, regardless of the fever of the situation, never rises above a tone so quiet that you almost have to lean across the table to catch his words. He loves his work—literally loves it, enjoys it, finds it each day a source of wonderful fun. He cares nothing for money. He is impulsively generous in his rewards, both monetary and of praise. Durant men are notably liberally paid—perhaps the best paid executives of the industry. He himself works without a salary.

He understands men. He knows how to handle them, how to lead them, how to inspire them. He has their admiration, first on a personal basis, and second, because he has demonstrated his fitness to lead. When he wishes to institute a new policy or effect a radical departure from any adopted practice, a curt order does not go cracking out over the wires. The key man affected is called in; with the plan between them, the quiet smiling chief proceeds to sell his lieutenant on the idea, and seizes him away utterly convinced of its soundness. And W. C. Durant, according to Stettinius, the genius of the Morgan interests, is the greatest salesman in America.

In addition to his liberal salary, every Durant executive enjoys the widest latitude and freedom from interference; every man selected for a job is trusted to whip that job. He knows it. And he usually does it. He never demands more from his men than he does from himself. Six day a week and not infrequently the seventh, eighteen hours is his regular stint—eighteen hours of the most exacting and infinitely varied work. He understands every fundamental phase of marketing better than any man in his employ. He has as clear a grasp of manufacturing principles, processes, and costs as any of the men on his staff. His ability as a financier is too well known to require discussion. His bird's-eye view of the entire industry—his comprehension of the dovetailing of its contributing factors—his conception of the future and his plans to meet it—are neither equalled nor approached in breadth or balance by any man living or dead. And above it all he is wonderfully human.

W. C. Durant WAS NOT RESPONSIBLE for the fatal expansion program, either directly or indirectly, but had emphatically cautioned against it.

SUMMER ST. 6, WATONS 2

The largest crowd, with one exception, that ever witnessed a ball game at Raymond's field saw Summer St. defeat Waltons of Quincy in a thrilling game last Sunday. It was an ideal day and nearly all the business men of the square as well as the professional men also E. W. Hunt, the popular County Commissioner were on hand when the game was started. Frazier did the pitching for Summer St. while Warburton went to first base where his long reach and his sure catches make him an ideal man for the base.

FIRST INNING
Waltons—Connelly and Bradley out at first. Jennis out at first, Lyons making a fine stop.
Summer St.—Ross singled, stole second, out stealing third. E. Lukeman flied to left; Humphrey by fast running beat out an infield hit. W. Lukeman flied to center.

SECOND INNING
Waltons—Paterson singled, Bonafine sacrificed, Hoolahan struck out. Kelley flied to Humphrey; it was a hard running catch and Paul got a good hand.

Summer St.—Loneragan by fast sprinting beat out an infield hit, Warburton sacrificed, McCarthy singled to right, Loneragan scoring, Jimmy taking second on the throw-in to get Loneragan, Lyons doubled, scoring McCarthy, Frazier out at first. Two runs Summer St.—Ross out at first, Ed Lukeman singled, Humphrey tripled, Lukeman scoring, W. Lukeman's grounder to infield scored Humphrey, Loneragan singled, McCarthy out at first, Lyons out at first. Two runs

EIGHTH INNING
Waltons—Kelley out at first, Connelly singled, Bradley's double to pit scoring Connelly, Jerino out at first, Peterson out at first. One run.

Summer St.—Frazier doubled, Ross singled, J. E. Lukeman fanned, Humphrey doubled (his fourth hit), Frazier out at first. One run.

NINTH INNING
Waltons—Bonfine base on balls, Hoolahan's out at first put Bonfine on second, Millett struck out, Kelley bunted and Bonfine tried to score, but Frazier fielded the ball quickly and Bonfine was out at the plate.

CITIZENS ALLIANCE

The Women's Committee of One Hundred of the Weymouth Branch of the Citizens Alliance of Massachusetts held an organization meeting at the Baptist church at Lincoln Square on Sunday afternoon, June 3, at 3.

Rev. Earl E. Story of East Weymouth led the devotional exercises and Mrs. R. L. Stone presided at the organ and rendered some very beautiful selections.

President of the Alliance, J. F. Robinson, in stating the reason for the existence of the Alliance and the reason for organizing the two committees of One Hundred, quoted President Harding as saying, "The 18th Amendment is the will of America and must be sustained by the government and public opinion, else contempt for law will undermine our very foundation."

One of the reasons for the existence of the Citizens Alliance is to educate the public to a knowledge of what the law actually provides and to the great need and benefits of its enforcement.

A great deal of gambling, in the form of lotteries of various kinds, is being carried on by many organizations in Weymouth and Mr. Robinson said a second work of the Alliance was to get all organizations in Weymouth to follow the lead of the National Vice-Commander of the American Legion in refusing to allow money to be raised in this manner.

The third objective of the Alliance is the securing of obedience to the law, adopted by the Town of Weymouth, which prohibits and provides for severely punishing the taking of money, either as a direct charge or by collections, at Sunday games and sports.

In fact, the real objective of the Alliance is the securing of obedience to all the laws, both by individuals and organizations in order that the children of the town might have a fair chance for the right kind of living.

The address of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Eva Whiting White, president of the City Federation of Women's clubs of Boston and director of the Community Service Work of Boston.

Mrs. White told in a graphic and interesting way of the great benefits of the enforcement of prohibition laws that have come under her personal observations in her work in the west end of Boston, as well as in a great number of places in New York, New Jersey, and many other states where she has conducted personal investigations for various welfare societies and the Government.

Mrs. White said she believed organizations such as the Citizens Alliance were doing a great amount of good and were very badly needed, but that much more permanent good might be accomplished if they would, in addition to their law enforcement work, bring up the children in such a community life that they would be taught not only what was wrong, but how to live and play and work in the way that made for the best in life.

Mrs. White made a plea for adults themselves to conduct their affairs in such a way that the youth might safely follow and not go astray.

At the close of the address the committee of One Hundred was organized with Mrs. Florence R. Burgoyne of East Weymouth as chairman and Mrs. June B. Morrill of South Weymouth, Miss Louisa Humphreys of North Weymouth, Mrs. T. S. Nelson of Weymouth, Miss Janet A. Harlow of East Weymouth were elected as members of the Executive Committee of the Alliance.

It was proposed that a copy of the following digest of laws be sent to each of the organizations in Weymouth with a request for their cooperation in securing for them a full and willing obedience.

With three districts yet to report their quota of members, the Women's Committee of One Hundred is made up of the following voters: Mrs. Fred W. Hilton, Mrs. Fred C. McDowell,

THE TUFTS LIBRARY

The Tufts Library of Weymouth was founded in 1879 through the generosity of Quincy Tufts and his sister, Miss Susan Tufts, who gave to the town, by will, a fund for the establishment of a library for the benefit of the citizens of Weymouth. This was supplemented by an appropriation of one thousand dollars from the town and two thousand dollars raised by private subscription. A part of the fund consisted of two buildings, the lower story of one of which was fitted up for the library.

The first meeting of the trustees was held on March 12, 1879, at which time the board organized by electing Zechariah L. Bicknell as president, and John J. Loud as clerk and treasurer. A librarian was engaged, books were purchased and prepared for circulation and on the first of January of the year 1880, the library, with a collection of about 2300 volumes, was opened to the public.

Special credit should be given to Frank W. Lewis, a member of the first board of trustees, who by his tireless and invaluable service, was instrumental in placing the library on a strong and enduring foundation.

Under the efficient administration of the first librarian, Miss Caroline A. Blanchard, to whose faithful and disinterested service is due in large measure, the success of the library, it soon became not only an educational power and a source of enjoyment to the citizens of the town, but also attained an honorable place among the libraries of the state. Considering its size and the money expended, it ranked second to none in the Commonwealth.

Early in the history of the library, delivery stations were established in all wards outside that in which the library was located, affording, as far as possible, equal privileges to residents in all parts of the town. These stations are still maintained with the exception of that in Ward One, which was discontinued in June of last year (1922) when the North Weymouth branch was opened.

The library occupied the building in which it had its first home until it outgrew the accommodations provided. At a special town meeting held March 21, 1891, it was voted to raise $22,000 for the purpose of erecting a public library building on the land in Ward Three donated by the Tufts family.

In preparation for the erection of a new building, the old one in which the library was then housed was moved to Commercial street where the Gem Theatre now stands. The new building, the present home of the library, begun in 1891, was finished in July of 1892, and formally opened on October 6 of that year.

The list of worthy men who have served as trustees is too long to be given here. The first board included: Noah Vining, Everett C. Bumpus, Frank W. Lewis, James Humphrey, Alanson A. Holbrook, John J. Loud, E. Atherton Hunt, Zechariah L. Bicknell, Amos S. White, and the selectmen ex officio: Thomas H. Humphrey, John W. Bartlett, William Nash, Augustus J. Richards, Jacob Baker.

The present board is composed of the following: John B. Holland, Clarence P. Whittle, William F. Hathaway, Joseph Chase, Jr., Kenneth L. Nash, Wallace H. Drake, Arthur E. Pratt, Alfred S. Tirrell, Joseph Kelley, and the selectmen ex officio: Theron L. Tirrell, William B. Dasha, Alfred S. Hastings, Winslow M. Tirrell, Annie S. Lynch.

In the 43 years of its existence the library has had only three presidents: Zechariah L. Bicknell 1879-98; Augustus J. Richards, 1898-06; Clarence P. Whittle, 1907-.

The first librarian, Miss Caroline A. Blanchard, who is held in grateful and loving remembrance, continued in office until 1907. On account of failing health a leave of absence was granted her in 1906 and in 1907 because of continued ill health, her resignation was formally accepted. Miss Blanchard was succeeded in 1908 by the present librarian, Miss Abbie L. Loud.

Miss Louisa C. Richards, who was associated with Miss Blanchard as assistant librarian, remained in office until 1917 when she resigned, having given 36 years of faithful service.

Miss Alice B. Blanchard, who was appointed assistant librarian in 1907, resigned in the latter part of 1922, the resignation to go into effect in January of the present year (1923). Her genial presence and efficient service will be missed by the visitors at the library as well as by her co-workers.

Miss Phyllis E. Palmer, the present assistant librarian, was chosen in March, 1918, to succeed Miss Richards. She came immediately into popular favor and has given most acceptable service.

Beginning in the year 1879 with 2300 volumes, the library at the close of 1922 had increased to over 34,000 volumes. Its circulation during the same period was 2,440,398, an average of 189 a day. Its greatest work, the mental and moral uplift given to its patrons and to the community through its beneficent and educational influence, cannot be estimated. Its prosperity has been made possible by the liberal appropriations of the town, augmented by legacies and other gifts, judiciously administered by able and loyal trustees.

Susannah Hunt Stetson Fund

In 1900 Amos W. Stetson of Braintree established a fund of $2500 in memory of his mother, who was born in Weymouth, to be called the Susannah Hunt Stetson Fund, the income to be expended in the purchase of books.

Augustus J. Richards Fund

In 1907 the family of Augustus J. Richards, in accordance with his wish expressed before his death, donated $5000 to the library, to be known as the Augustus J. Richards Fund.

The Tirrell Donation

This fund was established in 1914 by a legacy from Charles Q. Tirrell of Natick, in memory of his father, Norton Q. Tirrell, a native of Weymouth and for many years a physician of the town. The gift consisted of about 400 volumes and a fund of $1000, the income to be used in the purchase of additional books.

The Joseph E. Trask Fund

The Joseph E. Trask Fund of $12,500 was established by bequest of Joseph E. Trask of Boston and formerly of Weymouth. The income of this fund is devoted to the purchase of books other than fiction.

Francis Flint Forsyth Fund

In February, 1923, the library received by the will of Walter G. Forsyth, a former resident of Weymouth, the sum of $1000 to be known as the Francis Flint Forsyth Fund.

North Weymouth Branch

In 1922 plans for the opening of a branch in precinct one were consummated. A room at the corner of Pearl and Sea streets was engaged and made ready for the use of the library's first branch. Mrs. Mary M. Dingwall was appointed librarian and on June 16 the North Weymouth branch was opened with a collection of 1459 books brought from the main library. The establishment of this branch has been fully justified by the patronage given it. At the end of the year, six and one-half months after its opening it had reached a circulation of 9224 volumes and had issued cards to 492 new borrowers.

WHAT IS A CREDIT BUREAU?

A credit bureau, adequately organized and efficiently handled, is an institution of value in improving the tone of a community's credit. It educates the community in the meaning of credit by orienting for its credit-givers the standing of its credit seekers. It translates thrift, sobriety, prompt meeting of obligations, right living into very real and concrete terms for each individual. Performance is recorded and made to count in his credit relations. A credit record can be established which will insure accommodation during a period of misfortune, or a reputation may be acquired which will cut off every credit avenue. Bad bills reduced and slow accounts eliminated lessen business costs and hence decrease living expenses for consumers. People who know these things are given incentive to make their actions measure to the credit standard. A credit bureau which realizes its possibilities quickens and invigorates the ethics of business relations in its community.

STUDEBAKER BIG-SIX TOURING CAR

$1750

You Can Buy More Weight— But You Won't Find a Better Car

In the Studebaker Big-Six you get all the performance, all the comfort, and all the dependability that any car can give—at a price that smaller producers cannot even approach.

The Big-Six Touring is a seven-passenger car with a seven-passenger motor and seven-passenger dimensions throughout. It distinctly is not a seven-passenger body mounted on a five-passenger chassis.

The Big-Six will take the steepest hills on high. It will maintain a high rate of speed over long stretches hour after hour. No car provides more restful riding—none is easier to operate. None is freer from frequent repairs.

Equipment is complete, even to an extra wheel with tire, tube and tire cover.

Its low price is due to large volume and to the fact that Studebaker overhead is shared by three models—all sixes. Then, too, only one manufacturing profit is included in the Big-Six price because all vital parts are manufactured in Studebaker plants.

If you spend more than the Big-Six price you can buy more weight and bulkiness and pay more for overhead and operation, but you will not get a better automobile.

Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for 71 years.

WEYMOUTH, JUNE 15, 1923

TO BE ORDAINED

Luther Wesley Smith of Roxbury, youngest son of Rev. Wesley L. Smith former pastor of First Baptist church, Weymouth, was graduated from Newton Theological Institution June 7. His ordination will take place at the First Free Baptist church, Warren street, Roxbury, the evening of June 20th.

Mr. Smith has accepted a call as pastor of the Baptist church at Columbia, Mo., seat of the University of Missouri, and three other colleges. He will leave for the West about Aug. 1, and his mother, who expects to make her home with him, will leave early in October.

He was graduated from Harvard University with high honors in 1920. In his one year's service during the World War as an ensign, U. S. N. R. F., he made four trans-Atlantic trips.

His brother, Russell B. Smith, employed for the past five and one-half years in the Income Tax Unit, Internal Revenue Bureau, at Washington, D. C., is taking part of his vacation to attend the foregoing events. Being a native of Weymouth it is a double pleasure for him to be here in attendance at the 300th anniversary celebration.

Both sons are staying with their mother, Mrs. Hattie I. Smith at the "Russell" cottage, North Weymouth.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Webber of North street have returned from a short visit with their son, George Webber of Springfield.

—Mrs. F. M. Bridges of North street spent the week-end in South Boston where she was called by the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Stamp.

—The Home Economics Club of the Athens school held a food sale at the school building Friday afternoon. The sale was for the benefit of the Weymouth Hospital, and the sum of $16 was realized. Thru the columns of the Gazette the girls thank their many friends who contributed to the success of the sale.

—Children's day exercises were held at the Church of Good Tidings on Sunday morning. The church was prettily decorated with a variety of flowering plants and shrubs. Music both vocal and instrumental and recitations were furnished by members of the Sunday School. Mrs. Russell Whiting was soloist and Rev. Leroy Coons occupied the pulpit. Seven babies were christened at the close of the services. Three teachers, Mrs. Wilder, Miss Sampson, and Mrs. Vin- ing and four pupils received rewards for perfect attendance during the year. The pupils were: Frank, William and Jeanie McCulloch for one year and Ralph Raymond for six years. The Sunday School will remain closed during the summer months, reopening in September.

—Mrs. Moses Sherman of Green street has as a guest, Mrs. Atchinson of Nova Scotia.

—Sunday was Fireman's memorial day, but only early risers witnessed the small groups of men who went to the various cemeteries and placed flowers upon the graves of their comrades.

—In the popularity contest recently held by the King Cove Boat club, Miss Ruby Leighton was awarded a $10 gold piece for receiving the largest number of votes. Miss Grace Oliver of Quincy was second, and received a $2.50 gold piece. Miss Alice Pitts of North Weymouth also won $2.50.

—Mrs. E. R. Sampson of Lincoln street was so unfortunate as to trip on a rug while about her work on Friday. On falling she struck against an open desk drawer cutting a gash in her head that required eight stitches.

—Children's day was observed by the children of Pilgrim Sunday School at the morning service last Sunday. The cantata "The Secret of Happiness" was given by the pupils. Diplomas were given to ten children graduating from the beginners class. Seventy pupils graduated from the sented with Bibles. A number of little ones were baptized.

CHILDREN'S DAY

The Sunday School of the First Methodist Episcopal church held its Children's Day service last Sunday morning in the auditorium of the church. The church was prettily decorated under the chairmanship of Mrs. Lily Loneragan with the assistance of Mrs. N. E. Ames and the classes of Mr. and Mrs. Norman McClellan and Harold Lincoln. Large baskets of beautiful carnations were presented by Miss Annette Ford which added greatly to the beauty of the decorations. The service commenced with a procession of over 150 which passed down the middle aisle through two tastefully decorated arches led by Rev. Mr. Story and the officers of the Sunday School. A choir, made up of the four intermediate classes and directed by Mrs. Harry Mattson rendered special selections. Miss Hazel Cann presided at the organ and Mrs. W. A. Hodges at the piano. The scripture response was led by Harry Mattson, assistant superintendent, and prayer by the pastor. The address of welcome was given by Charles Denbroeger, superintendent.

The Beginners exercises were, as always, very entertaining and their songs, accompanied by Mrs. F. Wayland Preston were well rendered. Three recitations were well given by Miss Jean Story, Miss Barbara Elkington, and Master Richard Eddy. Two exercises, one by Miss Glennys Preston, and Master Hallett Hodges, and the other by Miss Paula Eddy, Miss Mary Fabian, Master Harold Champagne and Master Francis Whitmarsh were pleasingly given. The major part of the service consisted of the program "The Secret Whispered to Children" given by the Primary and Junior Departments. The Children's day fairy, who was Miss Pauline Merchant, called together the season's to prepare a festival for the children. The flowers and caterpillars went to sleep, while the autumn leaves were whirled around by the breeze, and then came the snowflakes. Spring brought the rain and sun-beams which awoke the flowers and gay butterflies danced among them with the leaves in their new green dress as summer brought Children's Day to all the happy children and opened to them a way of greater wisdom and understanding.

Three very taking solos were rendered by Miss Lois Preston, Miss Lillian Bicknell, and Miss Edith Tirrell. The costumes which were especially pretty were made by Mrs. Stephen Burgoyne, Mrs. Harry Mattson and Mrs. James Peers.

The offering on Children's Day goes to the Board of Education which loans to worthy Christian boys and girls funds to help them thru college. This was well explained by Miss Olive Sylvester, teacher of the young ladies class and the collection was taken by four junior boys. The potted plants which added greatly to the decorations were given by the Sunday School to its Beginners and Primary Departments and the younger members of the school as far as they would go. At the Baptismal service the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Raymond namely, Helen Isabelle, Ruth Carolyn, and Robert William were baptised by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Story.

OUR HONORED GUEST

Chief Justice William Howard Taft, who is our honored guest tomorrow, was the 27th President of the United States. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 15, 1857, was graduated from Yale in 1878, and became a lawyer, following in the footsteps of his father. He was the son of Alphonso and Louise (Torrey) Taft. In 1886 he married Helen Herron, and had two sons and a daughter. He became Secretary of War in 1904 and was inaugurated as President in 1909 and served four years.

William H. Taft was comfortably ensconced as a United States Circuit Judge, and a place on the United States Supreme Bench seemed to lie straight in his path, when in the spring of 1900 President McKinley called him to Washington. Insurrection prevailed throughout the Philippines, but the administration saw a rift of peace in the clouds of strife and was already planning the government which should exist when the olive branch was in the hands of every one of the little brown men.

Many persons thought Judge Taft was a peculiar man for the President to have in mind for the work of peace and civilization on the other side of the Pacific. Judge Taft was opposed to holding the archipelago. He took a gloomy view of the situation.

President McKinley, who was an adept at putting the right man in the right place, took Judge Taft into the Cabinet room at the White House. Three hours later the door opened, and as Senator Dooliver later phrased it, "Like Saul of Tarsus, Judge Taft had been over the road to Damascus."

Judge Taft landed in Manila in June, 1900, and his title was President of the Philippine Commission. His associates were quiet and determined men, who for a time merely looked on while the khaki-clad American soldiers chased the insurgents from one province to another. Then the commission began to work, under the direction of Governor Taft.

It was pretty hard to tell what was needed in certain localities. The military government would move out one day to make way for the civil government. The next day the civil government would send a runner to bring back the soldiers to protect them from Aguinaldo's men.

There were mixed questions of jurisdiction between the army and the civil government. Discouragements were manifold. It was difficult to tell what Filipinos were loyal and what were not. A new plot against the Americans was discovered every day.

Governor Taft was patient. In his dealings with the Filipinos he constantly encountered deceit. But he turned this treachery to good account in a manner which was successful even if it did arouse criticism against him. If a Filipino who, under the guise of loyalty to the United States, had been appointed a President or provincial official, was discovered to be dicking with the insurgents he was not always punished.

More than once an army officer chasing a band of lardones found evidence that trusted Filipino officials were playing with the enemy. Governor Taft was then called upon to punish the "traitor." More than once he declined to do so. "Let the man think we think he is loyal," said Governor Taft. "He will soon find that the insurgent cause is a lost one and he will be glad to be truly faithful to the Government."

Slowly but surely Governor Taft's government replaced the military rule. The Philippine Commission began to legislate. The discussion of bills which are to become laws is public—almost as it is in Congress here. The native voice is heard at all times. The press is a power in Manila, as it is in the United States.

Gov. Taft, in addition to all this work, found time to devote himself to the fostering of many of the little aids to civilization. He has encouraged the development of the arts in Manila. No more resolute handmaidens of civilization ever descended upon a benighted land than the one thousand school teachers who went out to Manila from the United States.

He relinquished his post to keep an eye on it from a distance at a time when it is a clockwork, incidental in the government machine.

Governor Taft became the head of the Philippine civil government when the insurgents kept President McKinley, his Cabinet, and 63,000 American soldiers awake at night.

Taft's administration as President from 1909 to 1913; his campaign for re-election against Wilson and Roosevelt; and his career as chief justice, are more familiar to the people of today.

Weymouth Second Town to Have Permanent Settlement, but FIRST Town to Institute Independent Local Government

Our grand old town of WEYMOUTH IS THE SECOND town in the United States with a permanent settlement.

On August 26, 1921, Rev. William Hyde began the publication in the Weymouth Gazette-Transcript of a series of articles on the "Early History of Weymouth", which extended over a period of a year or more. As Weymouth was a rival of Plymouth, Mr. Hyde did much to correct the misrepresentations of historians which never gave Weymouth the historical importance due her, because of her settlement in 1622.

In his opening article Mr. Hyde wrote:

We have all recently been stirred by the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Plymouth and the Pilgrims have been one of the chief topics of the newspapers. There is a very close relation between Plymouth and Weymouth as the date of the first settlers in Weymouth is only two years later than Plymouth and some of the same men had to do with both places.

The story of the various efforts to make a settlement on the coast of what is now Massachusetts is a very interesting one, but in a short sketch like this we can only mention them. These attempts had a relation to Plymouth and Weymouth as they led up to them and prepared the way for their success and therefore should at least be mentioned.

There was the work of Sir Francis Drake and Sir Walter Raleigh. The founding of the Fisheries Company, The London Company, and the Plymouth along the shores, fishermen also. Some of these were "stubborne fellows" we are told. They were rough and lawless also, and this caused the same terms to be applied to later settlers.

The report brought back by these traders, explorers, and fishermen caused much excitement in England, and the companies of business men and others became greatly interested in colonization and settlement and as a business project. The result was the obtaining of grants and patents of land in the New World from the government and the struggle for them led to rivalry between the companies and efforts on the part of some to get the better of the others. This in the end led to the settlement of Plymouth, Weymouth, and other places and the rivalry caused misapprehension of some by those who were in the contest and without considering this we cannot form a correct estimate of those who settled Weymouth.

Other articles in this series by Rev. Mr. Hyde told of,—

Thomas Weston and his relations with the Pilgrims

Thomas Weston and Wessagusset, telling of the landing place near Hunt's hill, North Weymouth

Company. The special work of these companies was the sending out of fishing vessels to the coasts of what is now New Foundland and the coast of Maine where fishing stations were established, to which vessels resorted year by year. These companies were composed of business men interested in trade and colonization. There was also the Merchants Adventurers Company of London, and later the Council for New England.

Some of these companies were chartered, as for instance the London and Plymouth Companies, as early as 1606. The Council for New England received its charter in 1620, and had much to do with the colonization of New England. The Virginia Company later forming the London and Plymouth Companies obtained its charter in 1603 and began the founding of Virginia in 1607. The region between the French and Spanish possessions in North America at first was called Virginia, but later the territory from Maine to Massachusetts was named North Virginia, and still later New England.

In 1602, Bartholomew Gosnold in a ship called "Concord" explored the coast of North Virginia and on May 14, 1602, he was at what is now Cape Porpoise and the Nubble off Cape Neddick. Later he came to a Cape to which, because he caught a great quantity of codfish, he gave the name Cape Cod. Sailing along the coast, he landed on an island on May 21, which he called Martha's Vineyard.

He next visited Gay Head, to which he gave the name Dover Cliff and on May 28 he landed at Cuttyhunk, where he built a small fort and remained till June 19. He planned to make his headquarters here and form a station or settlement, but finding he had not provisions enough to carry him through the winter, he loaded his vessel with cedar and sassafras and went back to England.

In 1603, Martin Pring with 54 men came out to North Virginia in the ships "Speedwell" and "Discovery," and after some exploration in Maine he entered what is now Plymouth harbor, which he named Whitson Bay. He loaded the "Discovery", with sassafras and sent her back to England, but he remained himself with others, and the "Speedwell." Like Gosnold, he did some planting and also like him succeeded in getting grain and peas and beans to grow, but in the end he also went back to England.

There was also Capt. George Weymouth, who came out in the "Archangel" to the coast of Maine in 1605. Then there was the Popham Colony on the Kennebeck in 1607.

But perhaps of those who came to New England before the Pilgrims, most credit is due to Capt. John Smith, the founder of Virginia. In 1614 he explored the coast of North Virginia and gave it the name New England. He made a map of the whole coast, which is of great importance, and for many years was the best map of the whole region and was extensively used. This map gives the coast line with much of the interior from the Penobscot to Cape Cod with the principal headlands, bays, river mouths, islands, Indian villages, and some of the mountains.

Later editions of this map gave more of the back country or mainland and the regions at the head of Massachusetts Bay. On this map we have the names New England, Cape Ann, Boston, Charlestown, Plymouth, Cape Cod, the Charles river and other rivers and places with Indian names, afterwards so named by the King at Smith's request.

During this expedition Smith explored what is now Boston Harbor. He also in his map shows that he entered Quincy and Weymouth Bays and his description of these regions made them familiar to the fishermen and explorers who came out in after years. Traders came out and were located

Many interesting quotations might be made from this series of articles to substantiate Weymouth's claim to SECOND permanent settlement, but they were published so recently that the writer would refer students of history to the Gazette files at the Tufts Public Library, at the Fogg Library, or at the office of the Gazette Transcript. The paper is also on file at the State Library in Boston, and the Congressional Library at Washington.

Like the Town the Weymouth Gazette and Transcript is Long Established Being One of the Oldest Newspapers in Massachusetts

People of Weymouth are proud of their town and proud of their newspaper. The history of the latter does not date back as many years as the former, but the Gazette-Transcript is at the same time one of the oldest and one of the largest weeklies in Massachusetts. The oldest paper in the state was established in 1768 and the Gazette was established in 1867. There are only ten weeklies in Massachusetts which regularly publish twelve pages, but the Gazette has for several years been a sixteen-page paper, and is today all home print.

Recently the Publishers Auxiliary, a National weekly, said: "Considered as a whole, the Gazette and Transcript is a well-balanced weekly, away above the average. The make-up of the 16-pages shows that considerable thought has been given the task, the result being all that an experienced newspaper publisher who studies the demands of his constituency could desire."

Keeping abreast of the times, the Gazette has made its greatest progress since 1916 when the present publisher assumed control. In less than seven years the paper has been enlarged from eight pages to sixteen pages, and often prints 18 or more pages; linotypes have been installed; the circulation nearly doubled; and the advertising patronage more than doubled; and just a year ago moved into a commodious new building owned by the publishers, and specially planned to meet the needs of a large and growing newspaper.

The main work room is of glass on three sides, making it very light and attractive, there being just 365 large panes of glass, one for each day of the year. Electric lighting is seldom needed, but has been installed, and the presses are operated by electric power. A steam plant heats the whole of the two-story building, which is 60x40, located on a large lot which runs from Station street to Station avenue and is six times as large as the building. The accompanying half-tone does not do the building justice as the photograph was taken before completion, before the land was graded or blinds and shades installed.

Practical Newspaper Man at Head

When Messrs Easterbrook, Blanchard, Hawes, Pratt and others in turn took over the control of the Gazette, they had had no experience in publishing a newspaper, but it was different when Frank F. Prescott became the owner, as he has been a newspaper man over forty years. He learned the printer's trade in Quincy, and worked at the trade in Marblehead, Boston, and elsewhere. Then he became a reporter of Quincy and Boston papers, and when the Quincy Daily Ledger was established by his father in 1889 he became the city editor, and had much to do with the management of both the Ledger, the Quincy Patriot, and the Braintree Observer.

In 1914, Mr. Prescott sold his interest in the above papers, and for a year published a paper at Wollaston. In September, 1916, he purchased the Gazette and Transcript of John O. Bicknell. Since that date all his energies have been devoted to the publication of one of the best weekly newspapers in Massachusetts. At the same time the company does considerable job printing.

The popularity and success of the new Gazette is undoubtedly due to the prominence given to local affairs,—the feature stories on page one; the large number of brief locals, the club and social department, the anniversary column of 10-20-30-40-50 years ago, the doings of the Selectmen and other town officials, the church and lodge news, the vital statistics, and its willingness to co-operate in events of the day, be it anniversaries, celebrations, entertainments, trade movements, or smaller affairs.

MANAGING EDITOR FRANK F. PRESCOTT

New life has been enthused into the paper since Carl F. Prescott became associated with his father, particularly since his marriage when he became a resident of East Weymouth. He is a veteran of the World War with two years service, nearly half of the time being at the front in France and Belgium. His interest in the American Legion and the ex-service men, also in the Masonic organizations, the Weymouth Hospital, the Men's Clubs and other organizations, and more recently as a Town Meeting Member show some lines of activity. He is also secretary of the Massachusetts Press Association, and the father of twin daughters now four months old.

Efficient Staff of Employees

The Gazette is fortunate in having an efficient staff of employees both in its composing room and press room and business offices, and also as writers and reporters.

The foreman is Edwin Mulready, with many years experience on daily and weekly newspapers and as a job compositor and pressman.

The No. 8 linotype is operated by David J. Toomey who is also an all-round printer. He sets the news composition of the paper.

Longest in service on the Gazette is John Breen, the old reliable, who with Edward L. Goodridge, both all-round printers, set most of the advertising which makes the paper so wide-awake.

The pressman is John R. Clifford, a young man who recently became a resident of The Birches. He has had considerable experience and is turning out good work.

Just at present there is a vacancy in the position of "devil", but there is a good opening for a well educated young man.

The corps of reporters include: H. Franklin Perry at Weymouth, Mrs. Alice H. Menchin at North Weymouth, Miss Florence B. Nash at Weymouth Heights, Mrs. Edwin Mulready at East Weymouth, Everett M. Holbrook at South Weymouth, and others. Most of the churches, lodges, and clubs also have press correspondents, and it is estimated that fully fifty persons assist every week in the publication of the newsy paper.

Since the first number of the Gazette was issued in the spring of 1867 many changes have come to the grand old town that enjoys the distinction of being the second town to be incorporated within the limits of what is now the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It was founded by Mr. Charles G. Easterbrook, a young printer of practical experience in Abington, Bridgewater and elsewhere.

The Gazette's first location was in the Nye building at Weymouth Landing and its equipment consisted of a meagre supply of type, an old-fashioned Washington hand press, and an equally antique job press. Mr. Easterbrook's first paper was a seven-column folio, 23x35 inches. Some of our readers may remember that newspaper which was very small when compared with our regular issue of today or with the present anniversary number.

The heading read, "The Weymouth Weekly Gazette, a family newspaper devoted to local interests and general news." News was not as plentiful in those days and to fill the pages a large type was used "long primer" led, a type that probably suited the old people of those early days better than the small print of today. Then they had no electric lights and fewer people wore glasses.

Mr. Easterbrook's Salutory

"The Weymouth Gazette, the first number of which we present to our patrons today is, as its title purports, a paper to be devoted to the local interests of the town. In the opinion of prominent citizens there is a field in Weymouth for such an enterprise, and the encouragement offered has induced us to commence a weekly issue in the hope that the business will be one of a permanent character.

"A press, in a town of sufficient importance to sustain it is advantageous in many respects, as it affords a medium of communication in public matters which cannot be so readily attained by any other method and as a record of passing events of a local nature, it will be found worthy of preservation for the future, while it is of interest in the present.

"The Gazette will assume no sectarian or party position, but its columns will be open for discussion and criticism concerning the various topics of public interest which may arise. In this department we shall endeavor to present such views as are consistent with a regard for the welfare and progress of the community for the furtherance of which able writers will contribute to our columns.

"In local matters arrangements are being made to present a record of news from the different villages of the town, which will be found of general interest and furnish a complete summary of local events in Weymouth in addition to weekly correspondence from Braintree and other places.

"With this brief introduction the publisher submits the opening number of the new enterprise to his patrons, hoping that its merits may commend it to every family and that our weekly intercourse with the public may prove of value and interest to all."

First Advertisers

The first number contained a goodly number of local advertisements among which were the following firms:

S. W. Pratt, tinsmith, Weymouth
J. M. Lufkin, dining room, East Weymouth
E. Rosenfeld, dry goods, South Weymouth
Mrs. E. A. Richardson, millinery, East Weymouth
Lucy W. Tuck, M. D., South Weymouth
J. Binney & Co., groceries and provisions, Weymouth
Abington Last Factory
Henry Lord, dry goods, etc., East Weymouth
John O. Foye, hardware, Weymouth
M. H. Read, clothing, Weymouth
Samuel Curtis, undertaker, Weymouth
Dr. A. G. Nye, dentist, Weymouth
L. Tuck, kitchen furnishings, South Weymouth
Charles O. Radcliffe, stoves, etc., Weymouth
W. T. Burrill, painter and glazier, Weymouth
N. C. Rogers, groceries and dry goods, North Weymouth
B. E. Shaw, groceries etc., East Weymouth
A. S. White & Co., apothecaries, Weymouth
J. Crane & Son, boots and shoes, Weymouth
Martin Burrill Jr., painter and glazier, East Weymouth
Willis & Worster, groceries and provisions, Weymouth
John M. Walsh, harness-maker and carriage painter, Weymouth
John Dinegan, tailor, South Weymouth Mansion House, South Weymouth

These names will be remembered by many of the older citizens of Weymouth, and many of our younger citizens are descendants of the men who were the prosperous and energetic merchants and tradesmen of a little more than a half century ago.

Larger Quarters

Beginning in a small way and working along slowly with the greatest economy and much hard labor, Mr. Easterbrook succeeded in establishing the Gazette as a permanent institution in Weymouth. After some years his increased business demanded larger quarters and he moved to the second story of the building then occupied by Milton H. Reed as a dry goods store, but afterwards occupied by the Tufts Public Library. Here the business remained as long as Mr. Easterbrook continued his interests in the paper, and until the Weymouth Publishing Co. purchased the plant and good will in September, 1890.

Mr. Easterbrook was in all respects well qualified for newspaper work and was successful in getting a good list of subscribers, among whom were many who, or whose families, are still taking the paper, and who welcomed it as heartily as their parents and grandparents did in the days before the city papers became so numerous and so easy to obtain.

The advertising patronage of the Gazette, during its early days was quite liberal, showing that even in the days following the Civil War merchants and tradesmen appreciated the newspapers as advertising mediums, and there are no doubt some of the business firms of Weymouth who have continued to advertise from that day to this, realizing that goods well advertised are as good as sold, and that "the nimble sixpence" is better than the slow dollar. Those were educational days in advertising, and the present liberal patronage of the advertising columns of the Gazette is but the natural growth from a healthy beginning.

The two columns or so of local news published in the earlier issues probably contained about all there was of interest in the happenings of the town. Today the Gazette is carrying an average of not less than forty columns per week of matter of local interest.

The business history of the Gazette is well known to the older people within its field of influence, but another generation has grown into maturity since we took the management of this paper; and, therefore, it may be fitting at this time to review at least a portion of our history.

Incorporated in 1890

The Weymouth Publishing Company was organized in 1890 for the purpose of purchasing the Gazette and conducting a publishing and printing business in Weymouth. The stock subscriptions were secured through the efforts of Amos W. Blanchard and Martin E. Hawes, and the Gazette Publishing Company was launched with the following stockholders: Thomas A. Watson, John A. Loud, Wendell B. Clapp, Francis Ambler, Henry A. Richards, Augustus A. Richards, Martin E. Hawes, Amos W. Blanchard, John B. Rhines, Joseph Dyer, Walter M. Dizer, Luther O. Crocker, William Burrell, Benjamin S. Lovell, John P. Lovell, Edgar R. Dowds, Elias S. Beals, Charles H. Pratt, Nathan D. Canterbury, Michael Sheehy, Henry A. Nash, David D. Randall, John S. Fogg, I. M. Norcross, H. Austin Tirrell, Henry L. Lovell, James H. Flint, and Marshall C. Dizer.

T. A. Watson was the first president and Francis Ambler the first treasurer. Mr. Watson resigned after two years and H. A. Richards was chosen president in his stead, serving until his death in October, 1905. Mr. Ambler served as treasurer until his interest in the company was purchased by Mr. Blanchard in the fall of 1895. To these men and to N. D. Canterbury, Edgar R. Downs and Wendell B. Clapp, who served as directors, the early management of the Gazette owed much for kindly advice and support.

Upon the completion of the company organization, Messrs Blanchard and Hawes were appointed managers and editors, which positions they continued to fill for many years. Neither of them were experienced in newspaper work, although Mr. Blanchard was a practical printer, and had for some six months previously edited and issued the Weymouth Citizen, a paper founded by himself. This paper was consolidated with the Gazette, and the job printing office which Mr. Blanchard had conducted for about ten years was purchased by the company, and the plant consolidated with the one bought by Mr. Easterbrook, making the largest job printing plant in Norfolk county at the time.

New Management in 1895

In 1895 the Weymouth & Braintree Publishing Company secured control of the Gazette. The Weymouth & Braintree Publishing Company was organized in May, 1892, when the Braintree Reporter first appeared. At that time the entire working force of the office numbered three. About this time the job printing increased so rapidly that additional help was required and also a large amount of new type and machinery at large expense.

At this time the East Weymouth edition of the Gazette was called East Weymouth Life. Shortly afterward the Company undertook the publication of the Hull Beacon, Nantasket Beach Breeze, Cohasset Sentinel, and Scituate Light, and these completed a list of seven weekly papers printed at our office, entailing a vast amount of care and labor in their preparation and publication which together with the large and increasing job printing business made the Weymouth & Braintree Publishing Company's office one of the busiest places in the county.

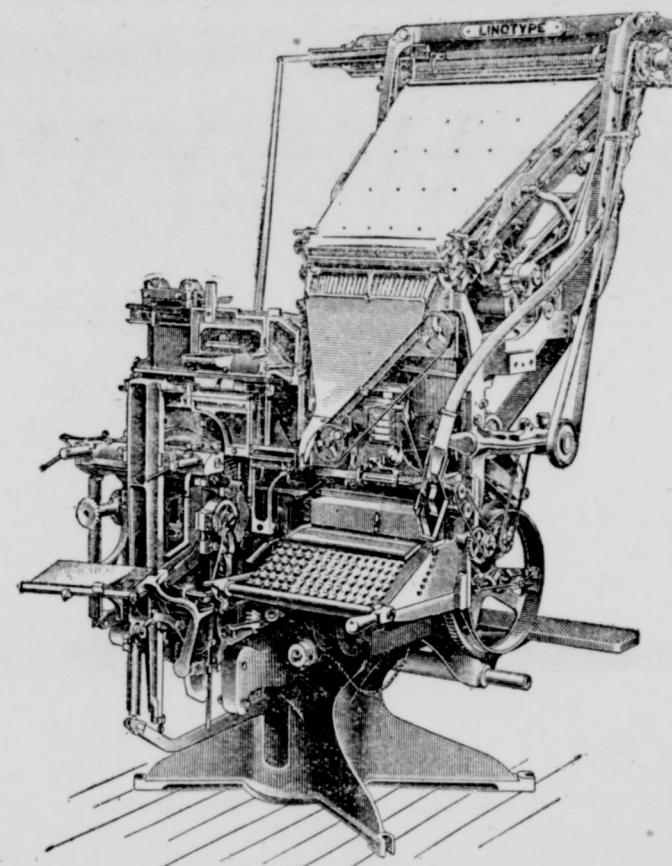

The management and staff at that time included:

Amos W. Blanchard, general manager and editor
Martin E. Hawes, assistant manager and editor
H. F. Perry, local Weymouth editor
Ernest W. Ager, South Weymouth editor
Harry C. Thomas, North Weymouth editor
Warner P. Dailey, editor of Hull, Nantasket and Cohasset papers
Jere R. Ainslie, editor of Scituate Light
Miss Helen A. Gossip, bookkeeper and proof-reader
B. F. Johnson was office foreman

The early editions of the Gazette were printed upon an old Washington hand press, but about this time new presses were added. John Foster Gray was the man whose powerful arms turned the wheels until the installation of a water motor made the employment of human energy unnecessary, while at the same time it speeded up the work of the machines.

Until 1922, the Gazette occupied the entire building at 52 Commercial street, now the site of the Gem Theatre, where we had over 3500 square feet of floor space in the first and second stories, and yet we were considerably crowded. The water motor was in the cellar, which was also used for the heater and for the storage of newspaper, of which we carried several tons at a time.

At the time of moving the Gazette to its present location, there were remains of the old water motor in the cellar, but it had been replaced by electric power several years before.

OUR NEW LINOTYPE

Country newspapers as a rule are not gold mines, yet the Weymouth Publishing Company was a prosperous enterprise and paid good dividends to its stockholders, and the company enjoyed the good-will and support of the public in its progressive efforts. In fact the Gazette and its associated papers were looked upon as being of vital importance to the communities which they served.

Birthday Number

In 1896 the Weymouth Gazette issued a "Birthday Number" in commemoration of its thirtieth birthday. The issue was a model of country newspaper art of those days. The sheet was of the old-style "blanket form", a style that has been abandoned in favor of the more convenient quarto of the present day. The birthday number contained many excellent cuts, representing the interior of the office as it existed at that time, and we feel no little pride in the fact that it was a printing establishment of unusual capacity and efficiency.

This was the layout of the establishment, and the amount of business transacted there was a credit to the management and the town; for a well-regulated printing plant is an asset in any community and one in which the citizens should take just pride. It is not only a business venture, but it is so closely bound with the business, social and progressive activities of the community that its value cannot be over-estimated. In fact its value cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

The Daily and the Weekly

The big city daily has its place. It comes into the smaller towns, a big volume of closely printed pages, bringing the telegraph news of the world, scandals, murders and records of crime; its finely written editorials, its personals, its sporting news, pictures, and features of greater or less interest. It is the busy man's paper. It is read in haste; very little of it is read at all by most of the men and women into whose hands it may go. Each individual reads that portion that is of particular interest. To most people, the greater portion of the big paper is waste material.

This is not the case with the weekly paper, that is the just pride of any community. The weekly is read from the headline to the last item on the last page, advertisements and all. All within the columns is news, and it is all eagerly read and digested. The big city paper is laid aside for the community paper, and it is usually a scramble in every household to see who shall have the pleasure of reading it first.

Every member of the family, old enough to understand, reads the community paper from beginning to end, and then the neighbors borrow it and read it until its much-handled pages are worn and tattered. The people read the community paper because they love it. It is a friend they cannot well get along without. Every item is of local interest, and all because the greater percentage of the people know each other, or know someone who does know all about them and their activities.

There is more genuine pleasure in reading a two or three-line item in relation to what Mr. Jones did on Monday, or a more detailed account of the church sociable, the lodge meeting, the chicken supper, the local baseball team, the band concert, and the thousand and more activities that engross the attention of the community than the long and brilliantly written accounts of events and transactions that do not concern us, and in which the individuals involved are unknown to us.

Say what you will about your home paper, you love it as you love your town; for it is the record of its activities; its births, marriages, deaths and funerals. It seems to have a heart that beats in sympathy with that of each individual in the community; rejoicing in their good fortunes and sympathizing with them in their adversity.

Such is the province of the community paper. It is your paper, a record of your life and that of every individual within the sphere of its influence. It does not go into the home, as does the big city daily, laden with horrors and unspeakable crimes. It goes into your family, clean and respectable, uplifting in its influence, and worthy of your friendship and respect. Such has been the record of the Weymouth Gazette, and for this reason it has enjoyed an unusually long and prosperous existence.

Recent Owners of Paper

Mr. Blanchard devoted too much of his time to the real estate and other business, and did not make a success of the Gazette. In 1912 it was sold by the creditors and came into the possession of Charles M. Bryant, associated with one of the large paper houses of Boston. He never was active in the management of the paper, but entrusted the editorial management to Charles H. Willoughby and Martin Hawes.

Later, for a short time, Norton F. Pratt was the owner, and it passed to his father-in-law, John O. Bicknell, who in September, 1916, sold the plant and good-will to Frank F. Prescott, the present owner.

In 1916 there was another paper in town, the Weymouth Times, published at South Weymouth by Sidney Cook, but he sold his good-will to Mr. Prescott and the Times was discontinued. At times other papers have been published in Weymouth, including the Weymouth Citizen, East Weymouth Life, the Weymouth Transcript, and others which have been consolidated with the Gazette and the merchants and citizens seem to prefer one good paper. Long live the Gazette-Transcript.

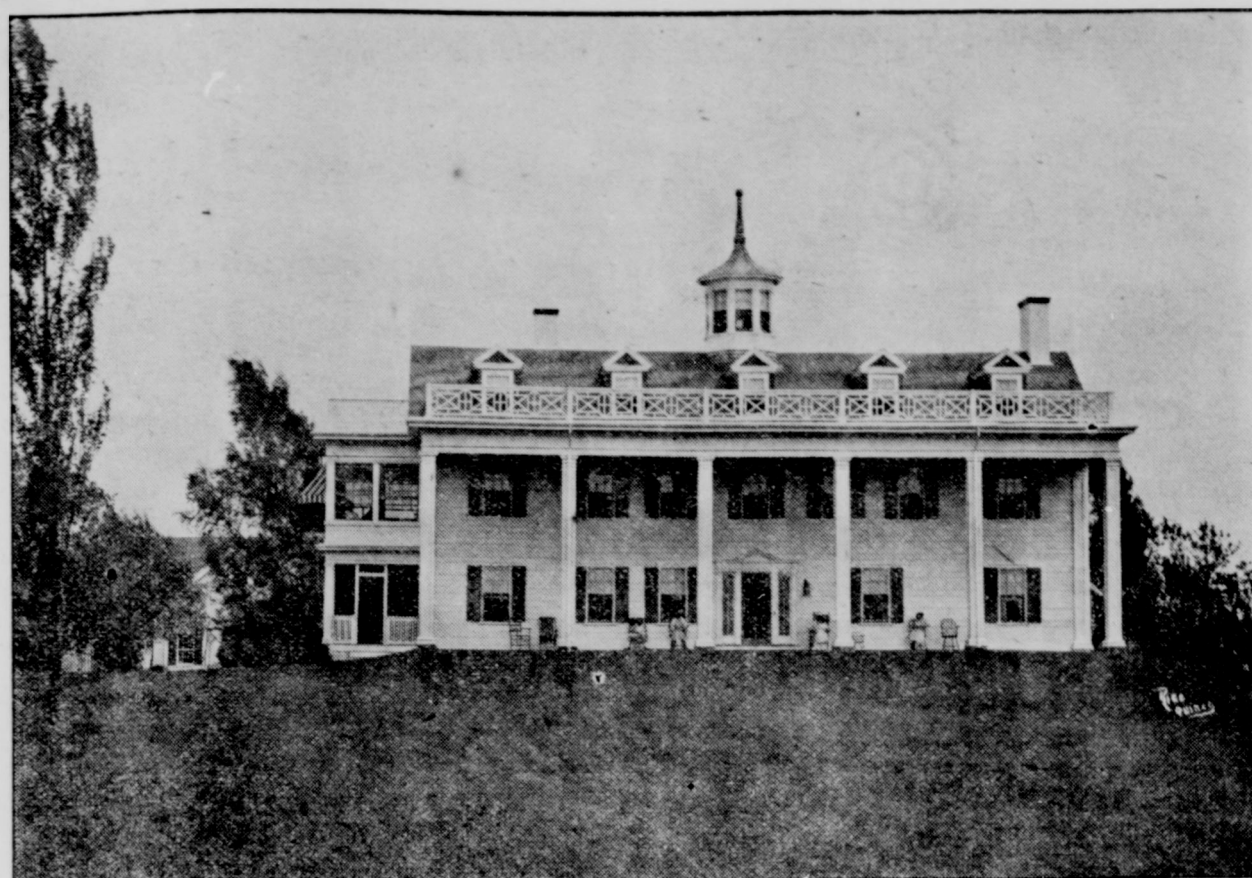

A GAZETTE CORRESPONDENT

There is a certain distinctive advantage in serving as a correspondent for a newspaper, but when the editor calmly gives you an assignment to interview a woman, it is exceedingly doubtful wherein the advantage lies. So it was with a feeling of reluctance and misgiving that I acceded to the request of my superior that I interview a woman, my subject being a member of the reportorial staff of the Weymouth Gazette & Transcript.

However, I armed myself with a notebook and pencil, feeling that my attempt to cross examine the subject in question was foredoomed to failure, but entertaining a fixed and unalterable determination to extract the desired information by bribery, flattery, cajolery, or any other method that might occur to me at the moment.

I am not justified in making unqualified assertions, but to me, it seems safe to assume that any person who has lived in North Weymouth a reasonable length of time, must necessarily have had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Alice (Haynes) Menchin, to whom North Weymouthites owe the accurate recital of their individual and associated activities which are chronicled in the local newspaper.

"The Mount Vernon House" Not in Washington, But in Weymouth

During his stay in Weymouth as the honored guest at the Weymouth Tercentenary, Chief Justice Taft and party will be entertained at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Allan C. Emery on top of King Oak hill, Weymouth Heights.

This house is a replica of the Mt. Vernon home of George Washington.

Having squarely faced the problem of my assignment, and hoping my chief would reward me with a "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" I proceeded to Mrs. Menchin's home at 303 North street, North Weymouth, to pursue my line of interrogation. Timidly ringing the bell, I was almost wishing that my sister-correspondent might not answer the summons, for I was beginning to realize how difficult a task confronted me, knowing that reporters are particularly averse to receiving publicity.

However, Mrs. Menchin was at home, and promptly answered the bell in person. After apologizing for my intrusion at the lunch hour, I hastened to explain that because of her many activities,—social, civic, and fraternal,—I felt that the hour was more opportune for me, if inconvenient for her, because I knew that her four children, each possessing healthy appetites, must be considered, and receive attention, and of course, being a devoted mother and the welfare of her children a paramount issue, it necessitated her presence at the mid-day meal.

Having been cordially received, I was soon at ease—although I felt a bit guilty when I remembered that my motive for calling was thoroughly disguised by more than a score of years of sincere friendship,—and I ventured (adroitly, I hope) to glean the information of which I was in quest. During the course of the conversation which was general in character, I eventually introduced the subject of personalities, with which I expected to bait my hitherto unsuspecting victim.

It developed that Mrs. Menchin was born in Woburn, where she acquired her education in the public schools, and after completing the prescribed course of study in the High school, and even throughout her senior year, she was the correspondent for the local paper in that town.

About 15 years ago she moved to Weymouth with her family, having resided in North Weymouth ever since. She has four children, two daughters and two sons, ranging from 8 to 20 years in age.

When she is not devoting her time to her domestic affairs, she is engaged in working for one of the several organizations with which she is affiliated. In the North Weymouth Welfare Association, and the Weymouth Chapter, Women of Mooseheart Legion, she holds the office of secretary, and during the past season served on the hospitality committee of the Monday Club. On several occasions when the Red Cross chapter of Weymouth, and the Visiting Nurse Association have conducted drives, she has taken charge of the work in her district.

Other activities which demand her attention are the North Weymouth Home and School Association, of which she is a member, and the Home Economics Class, the Bread-making Class, and the Canning Club, which is connected with the Norfolk County Extension Work, conducted under the auspices of the county officers who have their headquarters at Walpole. In addition to this work, she is the "Town Adviser", cooperating with the county officers in their efforts to give the residents of Weymouth the advantage of their experience along these lines.

During the war, she was identified with the Service Club in East Weymouth acting as hostess twice each week, entertaining the members of the several branches of men in government service, chiefly those in the Naval Camp, and the Marine station in Hingham.

Because of her sympathetic understanding of human nature, and her keen sense of humor, she has been eminently successful in discharging the obligations that she has assumed, and her wide experience in newspaper work, in which she has been interested for so long a time, make her exceptionally well qualified to represent the North Weymouth district for the Weymouth Gazette & Transcript. For several years she has handled this district in a most efficient manner.

Having made a mental note of the fore-going facts, I was on the point of referring to the anniversary program of the town which is to be given on the 16th of June, when we were interrupted by the insistent ringing of the telephone. So hastily expressing my thanks to my hostess for her courtesy, and feeling that I had at least accomplished something, I took my departure, finding solace in the knowledge that my efforts had not been in vain.

THE MONARCH LAUNDRY

Among the progressive business enterprises of Weymouth, the Monarch Laundry stands as one of the most up-to-date of its kind, equipped with the very best of modern machinery; housed in a building specially constructed for the purpose; cement floors in the wash room, and neat and clean floors in every other department. Steam is supplied by a 60 h. p. boiler, and power by four electric motors. The other equipment is seven washing machines, three extractors, a latest improved drying machine, and a 100-inch Hagen 4-roll ironer, one of the best machines of its kind in existence; Kelly hot water heater and all other equipment of a strictly up-to-date laundry.

This business was established in 1906 by Mr. Fred Mitchell of Boston, who continued the business for about five years, when it was purchased by A. F. Sherman & Co., originally of Boston, but for a number of years a resident of Hingham, from which place he came in 1890, and was employed by Sherman Brothers, manufacturers of heels.

In 1905 Mr. Sherman bought the waiting room at Commercial Square, and later purchased the Monarch Wet Wash Laundry.

In May 1, 1922, the laundry was totally destroyed by fire. Six weeks later a new fireproof building had been erected and equipped and Mr. Sherman was again doing business with new and improved machinery and the Monarch Laundry is today one of the successful enterprises of our town.

THE EDMUND S. HUNT & SONS CO.

The Edmund S. Hunt & Sons Co., established in 1850, is the oldest manufacturing company in Weymouth and the oldest fireworks company in the United States.

The business was founded and carried on until 1909 by Edmund S. Hunt, who was recognized as the foremost pyrotechnist in this country for many years, and who received four gold medals for fireworks and life-saving apparatus.

In 1907 the business was incorporated and the active officers at the present time are Russell G. Hunt, president, and Frank N. Clapp, Treasurer. At different times this factory has produced nearly everything in the fireworks line in addition to railway and marine signal lights and life-saving guns.

Since 1890, however, firecrackers have been manufactured almost exclusively. These are made largely by machinery and shipped to jobbers in nearly every large city in the country. They are used in the South for the Christmas and New Year's celebrations as much as they are in the North for the June 17th and Fourth of July celebrations.

During the late war, army and navy signal lights were manufactured and the company had just been awarded a $2,000,000 government contract when the armistice was signed.

OLD COLONY GAS COMPANY

The Old Colony Gas Company was organized in 1908, but no active construction work was undertaken until May, 1911, at which time the firm of E. M. Farnsworth & Company secured control of the company and gave assurance of adequate financial backing.

One of the conditions of the franchises at that time was that the company must be delivering gas in each of the towns of Weymouth, Braintree, Rockland, Abington and Whitman before December 31st, 1911. This meant that the plant must be erected and a large part of the distribution system laid and houses connected in each of these five towns within a period of seven months. The company at that time had no organization and to build up an organization and complete this work within the time specified was no small undertaking.

Starting with nothing the first of June, 1911, the force working for the company was increased as rapidly as possible, so that shortly after the first of July seven hundred men were all at work on the buildings at the plant or in laying mains. The efficiency of the organization was increased as time went on so that by August the company was averaging nearly a mile of main a day.

Work at the plant progressed rapidly. A small 6' set was installed and the little 80,000 cubic foot relief holder. Two purification boxes were built and one exhaustor and one compressor installed.

During the fall of that year, service pipe was run from the mains in the streets to houses in each of the towns.

Shortly after the first of December, fires were built in the water gas set and the manufacture of gas begun. On December 18, 1911, the company invited the Selectmen and other officials of the towns to inspect the plant and witness the official turning on of the gas. This event, so important to the welfare and prosperity of the towns, was then celebrated at a banquet held in the company's office.

During the balance of the month, meters were rapidly installed, and before the end of the month, gas was being delivered in each of the five towns, thus meeting the franchise requirement.

At that time, it was only necessary to make gas in the small set about an hour each day, in order to supply the 20,000 cubic feet of gas necessary to meet the customers' requirements. At the present time, the company has to make about 500,000 cubic feet of gas each day to take care of its business.

During 1912, the company continued to extend their mains and to take on additional consumers. At the end of that year, just over 2000 consumers were connected.

The business increased so rapidly that the relief holder became inadequate and the company contracted for the large storage holder, which has a capacity of 750,000 cubic feet or slightly more than is necessary for a 24 hours supply.

The next year found the business still increasing and it became necessary to install a new water gas set. This new 7' 6" set had a capacity of a million cubic feet per day, and it seemed as if this would take care of the company's needs for some time.

Shortly after, the town of Hingham was very anxious to have a supply of gas and at that time granted a franchise to the Old Colony Gas Company to lay mains into Hingham. Work was immediately started on this extension and gas was turned on in the town of Hingham that summer.

New consumers have been constantly added. For some time past, the company has been adding new meters at the rate of over 500 per year, and at the present time the company has approximately 7000 in use.

The year of 1914 saw the beginning of the World War. From then on, it became very difficult to raise money for any sort of construction work, but the Old Colony Gas Company was fortunate in being able at all times to raise the money needed to meet the growing demands of the communities that it served. By 1917, the United States had entered the war and prices of coal and oil, which had previously been advancing slowly, advanced very rapidly. Other companies throughout the state had been obliged to increase the prices charged for their service, but the Old Colony Gas Company postponed this advance as long as possible.

In the succeeding years, to meet the steadily increased cost of operating, the price of gas was advanced several times. The last advance included a change in the method of charging for gas. At that time, this method was new in this state, and it was not known whether it would work out satisfactorily or not. This present method is much fairer than the old method as it tends to distribute the actual costs of service fairly among the different classes of consumers. It has proven so satisfactory to the people of this district that they have greatly increased their use of gas, and other companies in the state have adopted a similar method of charging.

After the World War had been over about two years, the price of coal and oil started to go down. The Old Colony Gas Company immediately gave

Golden Celebration in Massachusetts of Couple from Weymouth, England

The people of Weymouth, Mass., accept with great pleasure the invitation so kindly extended by the people of Weymouth, England, to send a representative to visit them upon the occasion of the unveiling of a memorial marking the place from which the first Governor of Massachusetts Bay sailed in 1628.

In common with the numerous other settlements in this country which bear the names of the places in old England from which our forefathers came, the people of Weymouth, Massachusetts cherish sentiments of sincere esteem and respect for the more ancient town of Weymouth, England.

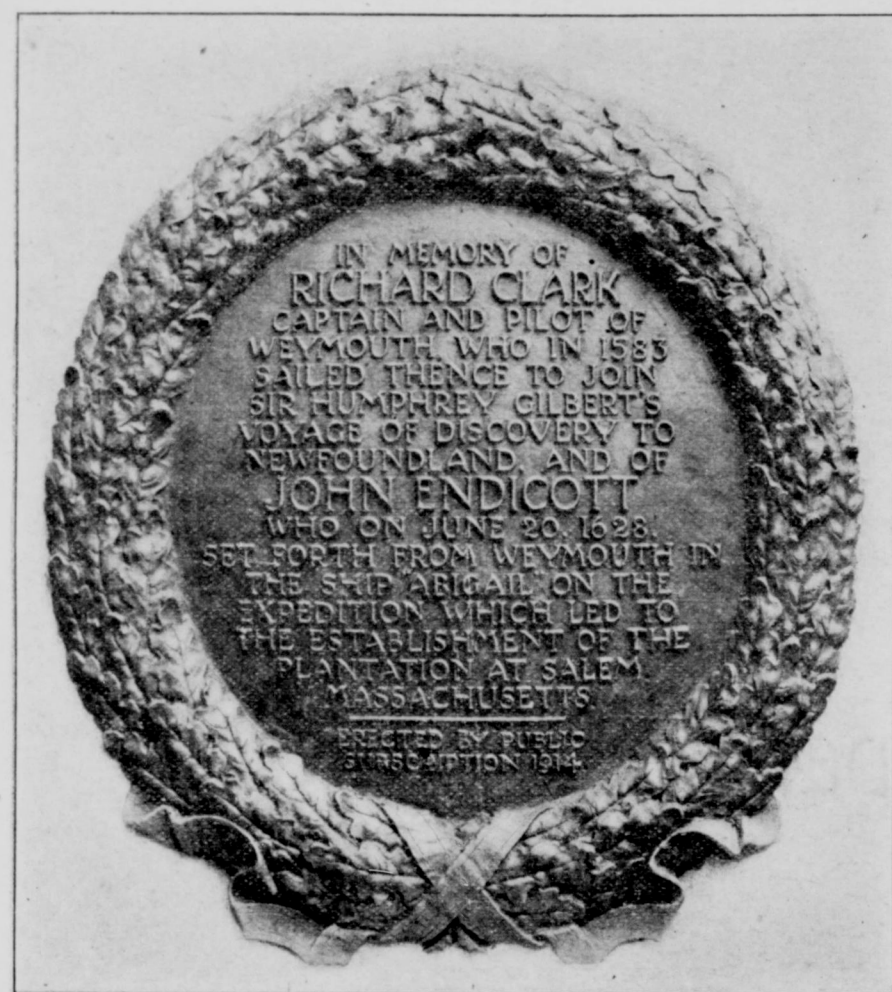

Moreover, in the words of John Endicott himself, whose departure from your shores you propose to fittingly commemorate:

"God's people are all marked with one and ye same marke, and sealed with one and ye same seale, and have for ye maine, one and ye same haite, guided by one and same spirite of truth; and where this is there can be no discorde, nay, here needs be sweet harmonies."

In furtherance of this purpose and in token of their endorsement of the above sentiments the people of Weymouth, Massachusetts, at a legal town meeting held March 11, 1914, elected Judge Louis A. Cook as their duly accredited representative from said town to attend at the proposed celebration.

In testimony whereof I hereunder set my hand and affix the seal of said town this 18th day of May, in the year 1914.

JOHN A. RAYMOND, Town Clerk

JUDGE COOK CREDENTIALS

To the Mayor and Inhabitants of the town of Weymouth, England. Weymouth was the first settlement in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, of which John Endicott was the first governor. Just as that colony has developed into the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, so in its course of nearly three centuries has that first settlement become one of the largest and most beautiful of the many towns in which the Commonwealth takes pride.

We of New England can well understand why our fathers, in many instances, brought with them and bestowed upon the place of their new home, a name "in honor and love to their dear and native country". Not only that, but they also brought with them those lofty and sterling principles of thought and action which have contributed so much to our prosperity and secured for us the manifold blessings we now enjoy.

As the present Chief Executive of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and on behalf of all her people, I send to the town across the sea, of which our Weymouth is the namesake, greetings and congratulations.

On invitation of the town of Weymouth, England, this town sent as its representative, Judge Louis A. Three pairs of shoes sent by local manufacturers to the Mayor of Weymouth can be seen on the table at Judge Cook's left. Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain unveiled the memorial.

NEVER USES FIRE ENGINE

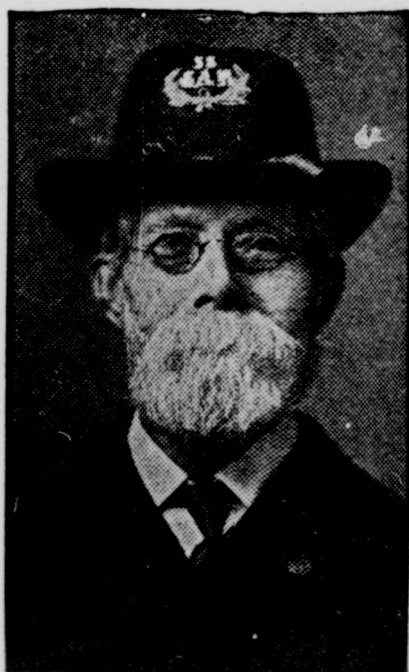

Weymouth has owned a fire engine for thirty years, says a London Daily Mail item. During all that time the machine has enjoyed serene and dignified leisure. It has never been used to put out a fire.

The Weymouth town council has decided that the time for the placid veteran's retirement had come. They resolved to order a motor fire engine.

Mr. Edward Chapman Culley was born in Weymouth, England, January 6, 1810. He married Eliza Mayell of Melksham February 9, 1836, and they with a family of seven children came to the United States in November, 1856, going to Lowell, Mass., where they lived two years, then came to North Weymouth in 1858, where they celebrated their golden wedding inviting all the townspeople February 9, 1886, and Mr. Culley passed away the following April 3, 1886, at the age of 76. His children are all living on Pratt avenue, North Weymouth today.

Andrew Culley who now owns and is living in the old homestead at No. 17. Mrs. J. T. Ferris and Edward Chapman Culley Jr. lives at 14 Pratt avenue.

PAST COMMANDER CULLEY

To Comrade Andrew Culley of Reynolds Post, G. A. R., and his sister, Mrs. Job Ferris, goes the distinction that their parents were born in England and later came to Massachusetts.

Everybody in Weymouth is familiar with Bay State Paints and Varnishes, manufactured by the well-known firm of Wadsworth, Howland & Co., which has offices in nearly all the large cities of the United States. In East Weymouth these paints are handled by J. H. Murray Co. Inc. While the paint is a well-known article in Weymouth and vicinity, few of our people are acquainted with Mr. Bodfish, who has recently been appointed advertising manager for the manufacturers of these celebrated paints.

Mr. Bodfish was American Vice Consul at Seville, Spain, during the war, and while there, in addition to his duties as American Vice Consul, served as a member of George Creel's Committee on Public Information and as American representative of the War-time Board of Trade and as representative of the H. J. Heinz Company, for whom he had travelled in this country for five years previous to the war, and by whom he was sent to Spain.

Ten years ago he was in the employ of the Wadsworth, Howland Co. and upon his return to America he was again employed by them as editor of "The Bay State," a monthly publication which the company sends out all over the world. Mr. Bodfish's knowledge of Spanish, which he acquired during his five years in King Alfonso's land, came into play recently, when he wrote an entire number of the "Bay State" in Spanish for distribution in South American countries.

THE LATE LOUIS A. COOK

In 1914 Weymouth, Massachusetts, had the pleasure of sending one of her foremost citizens to an anniversary in Weymouth, England, Judge Louis A. Cook being selected. Mr. Cook was royally entertained and was very enthusiastic over the reception, and the kind words expressed for Weymouth, Massachusetts.

Judge Cook was at the time of his death a few years ago the clerk of their consumers the benefit of the decrease and decreased their charges for gas.

It was hoped that a further decrease might be made about this time, but due to the uncertainty of the coal situation, it has been impossible. It is necessary to use anthracite coal in the manufacture of water gas and until it is determined what the price of coal will be after September 1, 1923, when there may be another coal strike, it will be impossible to make any reduction in the price of gas.

During the first few years of the company's history, before people realized how much cleaner and how much more convenient gas was than any other fuel, a large part of the consumers only used gas during the summer months. As time went on, and the inhabitants of this district came to realize how much better gas was than any other fuel, they have begun using gas more and more the year round for cooking and water heating.

The use of gas has increased so rapidly that the company has been obliged to make a decided increase in its investment in the plant. The original 6' set was outgrown and this has now been scrapped and a new 7' set having nearly three times the capacity of the old set. A new exhaustor with its engine has been purchased and also a new compressor. The company has now duplicate equipment throughout its plant so as to insure uninterrupted service to this community.

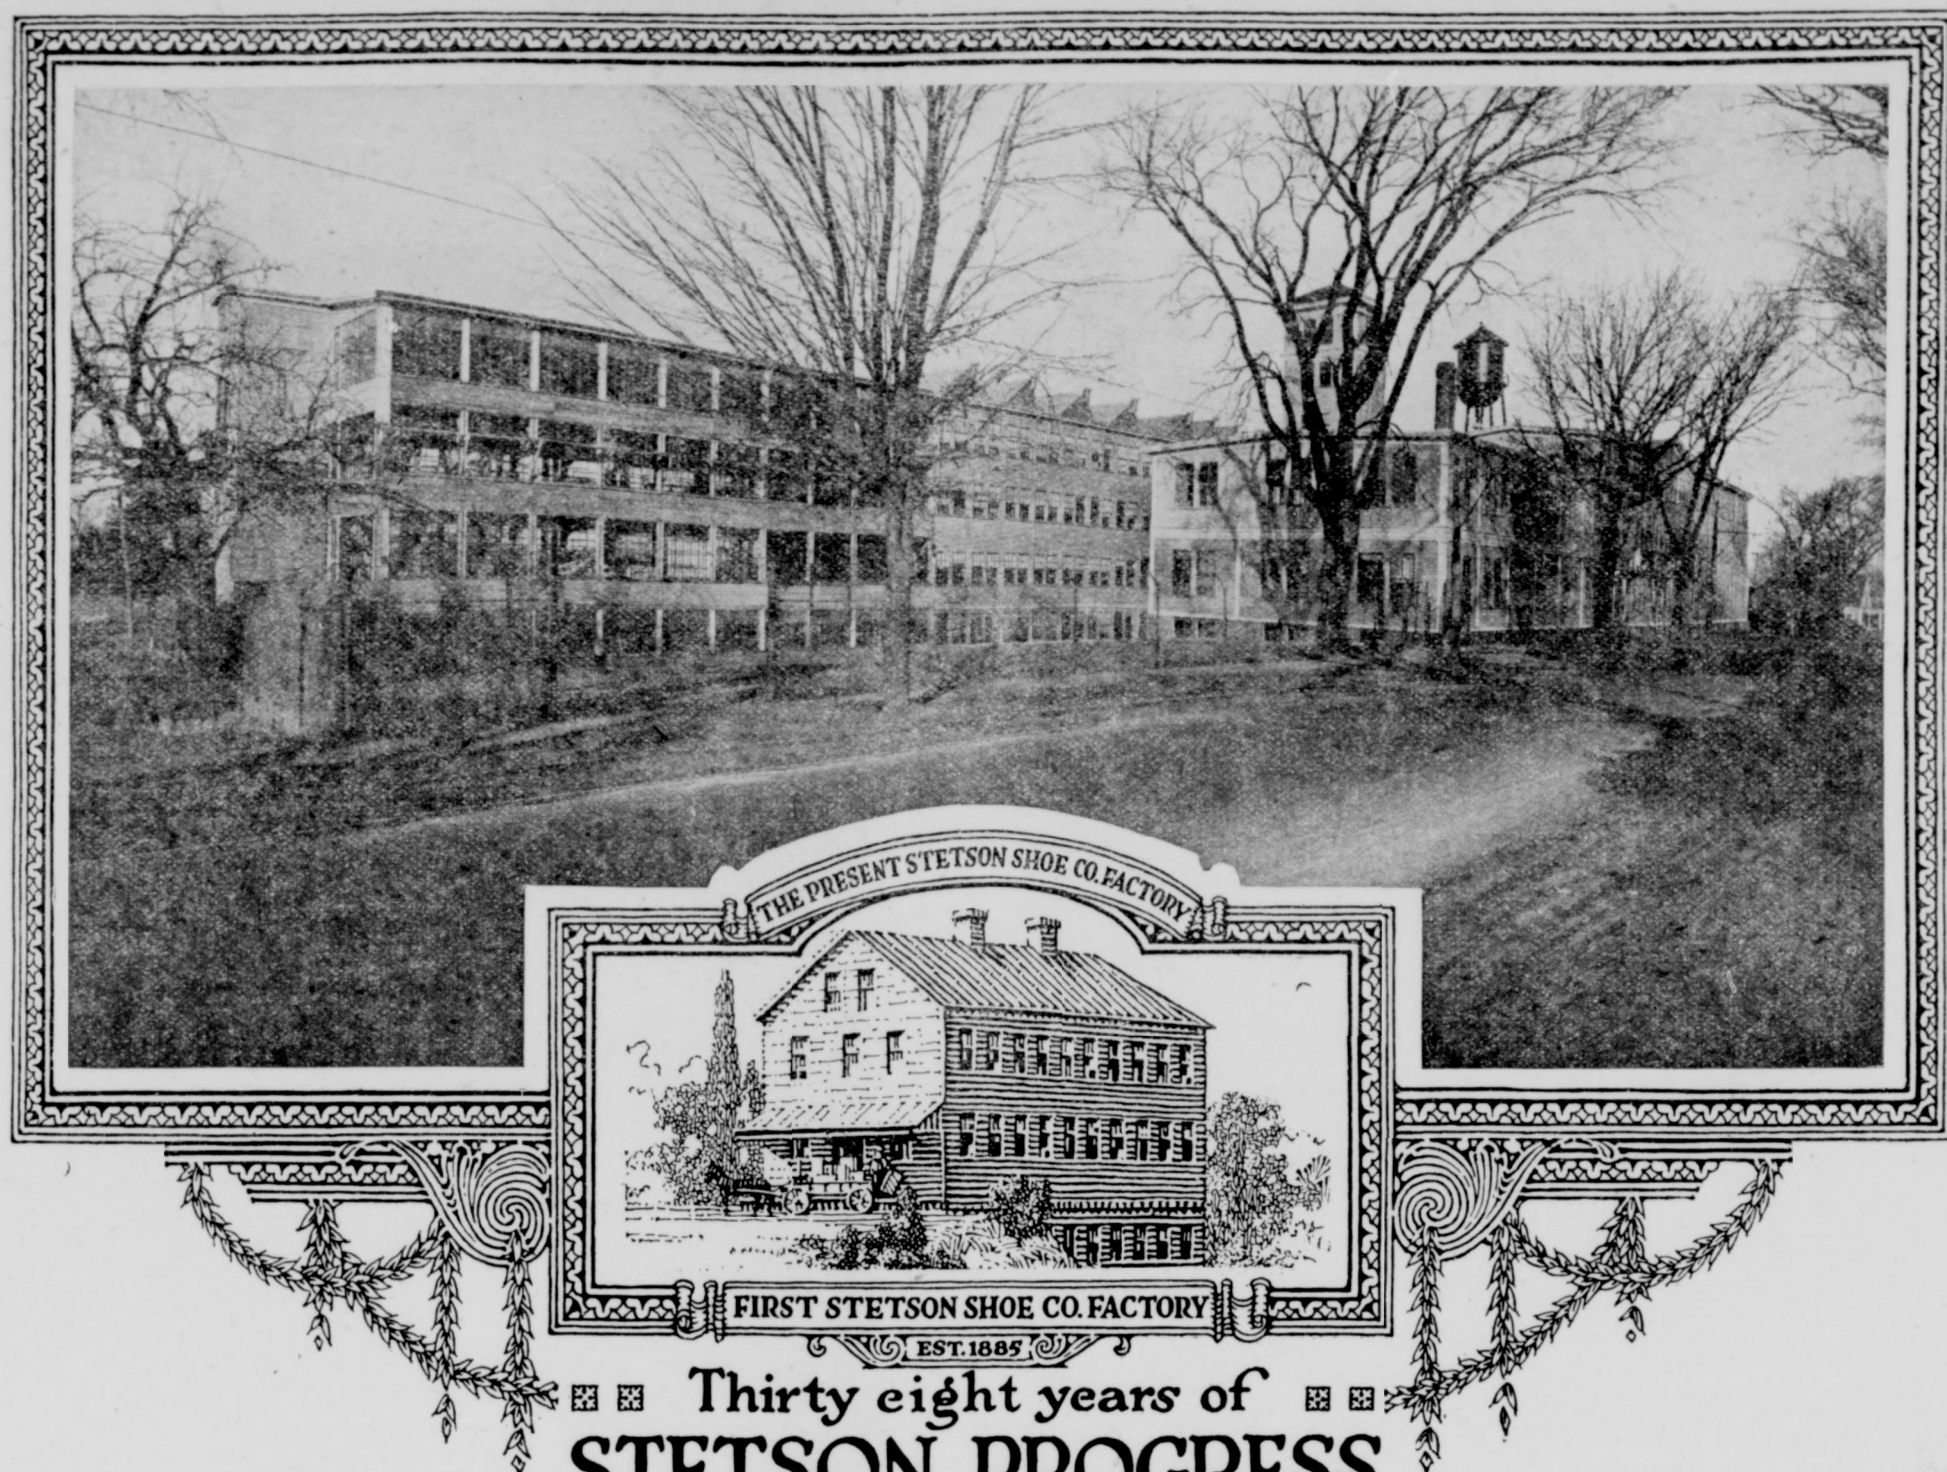

The company now has over 135 miles of main and is supplying gas through 7000 services.

In 1911, E. M. Farnsworth, president of the Brookline Savings Bank, was elected president of the Old Colony Gas Company, and he has continued in this office ever since.

In the beginning, the company had various local managers, but in 1917, the Board of Directors asked E. M. Farnsworth, Jr., who was then Vice President of the Company, to go to Braintree and take active charge of the company's affairs. He was also made Treasurer of the company at that time and has continued in these two offices ever since, devoting his entire time to the management of the company.

William W. Webb of Pleasant street, East Weymouth, is superintendent of the plant. He has charge of all intricate processes in connection with the manufacture of gas and is responsible for the delivery of a supply of gas to the mains at all times. William L. Sullivan of Vine street, Weymouth, is superintendent of the distribution. He has charge of running all the new extensions and the new services which we are continually running. He is also responsible for maintaining our distribution system in a perfect condition so as to insure our consumers with a supply of gas at all times. Included in this department is the installation of the numerous gas ranges, gas water heaters, lights, gas heaters, and all the other appliances which the Gas Company sells.

Howard B. Hall of East Braintree is superintendent of the Commercial Department. This includes the supervision of our accounting system. In this department alone, we send out about 7500 bills each month and only the most carefully devised system enables the company to get out this large number of bills with a minimum of errors. This department also includes the sale of the various appliances which the company handles. Before purchasing any appliances the company expects to sell to the public and to recommend to them, a most careful investigation is made of the appliance and of the firm which manufactures it, as it is the desire of the Old Colony Gas Company only to handle the lines of appliances which are so designed and manufactured that they will give the best of service to their consumers.

When a Referendum Is Not a Referendum

Can anything be accomplished at the special town election called to vote on the Street Railway question? The question to be submitted to the voters is upon ratification of a negative vote.

Will the voters RATIFY the vote on the appropriation order for street railway service, which was Yes 37, No 72.

If the majority is "YES" on ratification, will it not DEFEAT the appropriation?

If the majority is "NO", the vote will stand as passed by the Town Meeting Members, which defeated the appropriation.

Had the Town Meeting Members favored the appropriation, the voters at large might, on referendum, defeated the appropriation.

But is it possible at any time for the voters at large to make an appropriation after it has been turned down by the Town Meeting Members?

THE SOUVENIR GAZETTE

The publishers of the Gazette-Transcript should feel proud of the Tercentenary Souvenir of 36 pages, but they regret exceedingly that many historical writings contributed for this issue are unavoidably crowded out. Our only excuse is that it was impossible to print more pages. We have worked nights as well as days and employed extra help, but 36 pages is our limit for one week. The writeups, however, will be printed, one or two each week. Most of these historical articles will be found of great interest.

Houses and Buildings Beautifully Decorated

Never before has so much enthusiasm been manifested by the citizens of Weymouth, as has been manifested all the week over the Tercentenary celebration tomorrow. Weymouth was settled 300 years ago, and a big day has been planned.

Not only have the places of business been decorated with flags and bunting, but the public buildings and the residences. These are not confined to any particular ward of the town, but

The American Legion and Its Auxiliary

WEYMOUTH POST, NO. 79, A. L.

On February 16, 1919, a meeting was called in Paris, France, to discuss the opportunity of forming a veterans' organization. This meeting was attended by twenty men. These men realized they had no authority to do more than start the ball rolling. They issued an invitation to representatives of every overseas organization to meet again in Paris March 15-17, 1919. Nearly 1000 delegates attended this preliminary caucus. They outlined a constitution, chose an Executive Committee of one hundred, and named the baby organization "The American Legion".

On April 7, 1919, at another meeting in Paris, a plan of organization work in France was drafted and a committee of fifteen selected to begin operations in America. A caucus was held in St. Louis May 8, 9, and 10, 1919, at which troops in this country and in the Navy were represented. There it was that the nation had its glimpse of the new organization that was being formed of its fighting sons. The delegates came from every state. Again as in Paris, half of them were enlisted men. The utmost earnestness prevailed. Enthusiasm ran high, and out of the natural confusion incident to the formation of such a body, orderly action quickly ensued.

The history of the Massachusetts department, the American Legion, may not truthfully be said to commence in the A. E. F. To Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., although he has disclaimed the honor, has been ascribed the conception of the Legion. With him was associated Major John W. Farley of Massachusetts, who immediately upon his return from France began to move the matter in this state. At the caucus held on March 15, 1919, there was present from the Yankee Division a larger delegation than from any other one outfit.

On the 5th of April, Major Farley received a telegram from Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., to select some one in Massachusetts to act as temporary secretary of the state branch. Major Farley had accepted the appointment of organizer for Massachusetts, and associated with him from the very first was Major Robert Homans. He had affected a temporary organization and was impatiently awaiting the return of the units of the 26th Division.

On the 11th of April at a conference held at Camp Devens a formal organization was affected, and it was decided to send 32 delegates and as many alternates to the caucus at St. Louis. This delegation elected as its State chairman, Col. John F. J. Herbert of Worcester and as its secretary George F. Gilbody of Boston.

Upon the return of the delegation from St. Louis the delegates and Executive Committee proceeded to organize Posts throughout the Commonwealth. To this work Col. Herbert devoted himself with his accustomed energy, and so successfully that it was determined to hold a caucus at Worcester composed of as many representatives of the Posts already organized as could attend. This caucus was held at the Hotel Bancroft, Worcester, on June 6, 1919. About 300 persons attended the caucus about thirty newly organized Posts being represented. At the convention held October 15, 16, 1919, delegates from 288 Posts attended.

The first meeting called for the purpose of forming a Post in Weymouth was held in the G. A. R. hall, East Weymouth, on June 27, 1919. This meeting was called to order by Selectman Joseph A. Fern. At this meeting temporary officers were chosen, namely, William A. Connell, chairman, and Norman A. Walker, secretary. A request for a charter was signed by fifteen of the members present. At the meeting held on July 25, 1919, officers for the year were elected as follows:

Commander—William A. Connell
Vice Commander—C. Parker Whittle
Adjutant—Pasquale Santacrose
Finance officer—Norman A. Walker
Historian—Charles Burton
Chaplain—William R. Duffey
The above were the first officers of the Post.

On August 9, 1919, a "welcome home" was given to all service men from Weymouth by the town. This took place at the Clapp Memorial Building and grounds. It was a gala day for the town. Buildings and residences in the town were decorated with flags and bunting and everywhere the soldiers and sailors were greeted with enthusiasm and joy. A banquet was served under a canopy on the grounds at which about 350 of the service men were served. In the evening there was a band concert, dancing on the grounds, singing and fireworks.

On Sunday, Sept. 28, 1919, at the Clapp Memorial grounds under the auspices of the town an open-air memorial service for the soldiers and sailors from Weymouth was held, which was largely attended.

Seven military funerals were conducted by the Post to date:

Ralph Talbot, Nov. 7, 1920
Arthur B. Hurley, May 29, 1921
Ernest B. Mowry, Aug. 21, 1921
James H. Corridan, Oct. 23, 1921
Thomas F. Donovan, Dec. 18, 1921
William E. Johnson, Jan. 29, 1922
Harold B. Klingeman, Feb. 5, 1922

The Post has been very active since its organization, and has met with much success in all its undertakings. Meetings of the Post are held on the first Monday of each month (business meeting) and the third Monday of each month (social meeting). The membership of the Post for 1922 was 275 active, paid-up members, and from all indications this number will be very much increased at the close of 1923.

The present officers of the Post are:

Commander—Raymond E. Stein
Vice Commander—Leo F. Cote
Adjutant—Pasquale Santacrose
Finance Officer—Walter I. Peers
Chaplain—Robert R. Gay
Historian—D. Francis Condric
Sergeant-at-arms—Henry A. Cote War Risk Officer—Oberlin S. Clark
Employment Officer—Herbert W. Rockwood
Publicity Officer—Carleton P. Tyler

The principles that guide the American Legion are admirably set forth in the preamble to the constitution. It reads:

"For God and country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the great war; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good-will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

To participate in and to contribute to the accomplishment of the aims and purposes of the American Legion, Weymouth Unit No. 79, American Legion Auxiliary, came into being.

On Saturday afternoon, August 28, 1920, fourteen months after its first meeting, Weymouth Post No. 79, set aside a booth at its field day, held in North Weymouth at Beal's Park, where the first applications for membership in the Women's Auxiliary to the Post could be made. This booth was in charge of Mrs. Katherine B. Howley, chairman of the Women's Auxiliary committee. Arrangements were made to meet on Sunday afternoon, September 19, 1920, at the Weymouth High School to organize Weymouth Unit. Post Commander Bryan Leonard opened the meeting by introducing James J. Mullin, Jr., State organizer, who explained the object and the work of such an auxiliary. Mrs. Annie J. Libby of East Weymouth was elected acting president and Mrs. Mary K. Haviland of Weymouth was elected acting secretary. Application for the Unit's temporary charter was made and it was decided to hold the first meeting of the newly formed Weymouth Unit at G. A. R. hall, East Weymouth, Monday evening, October 4, 1920.

American women have always confronted the terrible after-effects of war with wonderful love and earnestness, and Weymouth Unit started on its work with the feeling that its members could, by steady persistence, mitigate to some extent at least the horrors of the World War and bring to those in hospitals and to the sick and disabled ex-service men at home as many comforts as possible, together with a vast amount of sympathy for and interest in all those who served, either directly or indirectly, and sacrificed so much for the common good. The members of the Unit aim for the same attributes as the colors of the American flag signify, viz: courage, zeal, fervency, purity, cleanness of life, rectitude of conduct, loyalty, devotion, friendship, justice and truth.

The first officers of the Unit worked faithfully and well for the organization. On January 2, 1922, when the charter closed there had been one hundred fifty-one members enrolled. At the first installation of the Unit held at G. A. R. hall, February 6, 1922, the following were installed as officers: president, Mrs. Annie J. Libby; vice-president, Mrs. Edna M. S. Warren; secretary, Mrs. Mary K. Haviland; treasurer, Miss Hazel A. Dexheimer; chaplain, Mrs. Mary Talbot; historian, Mrs. Isabelle Easton; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. Elizabeth Draper. The first chairman of the executive committee was Mrs. Mary J. Riley.

Weymouth Unit took its place among the other patriotic organizations and appreciated the friendly welcome accorded it. The Women's Relief Corps showed a kindly interest by providing the first flags used by the Unit for military service of deceased World War veterans. A delegation from Dorothea Dix Tent No. 32, Daughters of Veterans, at the April, 1921, meeting presented four beautiful silk American flags, similar to the flags used by their color bearers. Old Colony Chapter, Service Star Legion, asked the Unit to co-operate in the memorial work with them on Memorial Day, 1921.

At the installation held at G. A. R. hall on the evening of January 12, 1923, the following were installed as 1923 officers: president, Mrs. Edna M. S. Warren; vice-president, Mrs. Mary K. Haviland; secretary, Mrs. Isabelle Easton; treasurer, Miss Helen A. Kenerson; chaplain, Mrs. Mary K. Talbot; historian, Mrs. M. Christine Flynn; sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. Elizabeth Draper.

Welfare and hospitalization work has been the first thought of the organization. Visits to West Roxbury Hospital have been made monthly when weather conditions permitted. Mrs. Annie J. Libby, for over two years would fill her automobile with little luxuries generously donated by the school children or others solicited in the town of Weymouth, and with two or three Auxiliary members, would drive to the hospital where the good things would be distributed, and a sick or lonely lad would be cheered. This work is being continued by Mrs. Edna M. S. Warren, 1923 president, who has a most faithful and kind welfare worker as chairman of the hospitalization committee, Mrs. Mary J. Riley.

The Unit's next pleasure and duty is to assist Weymouth Post No. 79 in every way possible. At the first installation of Weymouth Post on March 11, 1921, Weymouth Unit provided and served the supper. On November 10, 1920, at the suggestion of Mrs. Christine Flynn, a candy sale was held at the Post dance, and $50, proceeds of sale, was donated the Post as the Auxiliary's first financial offering. On May 28, 1921, a poppy sale was held in co-operation with the Post. Daisy drives were held on February 24, 1922, and on April 14, 1923.

On Memorial Day, the Auxiliary joins the Legion in its loving remembrance of departed comrades. The Unit has lost three of its members by death, Mrs. Mary Slattery, Mrs. Elizabeth Wynn and Mrs. Ellen M. Coyle, and on Memorial Day their resting places are visited and flowers are left. On Christmas Day ex-service men who are ill, disabled, or needy, are remembered. Gold Star mothers are remembered on Memorial Day and on Mothers Day. Enrolled as charter members are thirteen Gold Star mothers. Since the close of the charter seventeen new members have been voted into the Unit.

In the handclasp of comradeship and the personal word of cheer lie great comfort. Weymouth Unit No. 79, American Legion Auxiliary, is building well and strongly on a foundation of devotion and service made by loyal members whose pledge to care for the suffering and the sorrowful of the World War will be the light to guide them to the accomplishment of all things they may undertake in the future.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

The Daughters of Veterans are composed of daughters of honorably discharged Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines who served in the Union Army or Navy during the Rebellion of 1861-65. —A joint meeting of the Pond Plain Improvement Association and the Ladies Auxiliary was held in the New

Bungalow on Thursday evening. At the brief business session the resignation of Edward G. Caswell, chairman of the entertainment committee was accepted and Arthur I. Negus was appointed to fill the vacancy. Town Counsel William J. Holbrook was the speaker of the evening and his subject was "The Weymouth Hospital."

—About forty members of the classes which have been conducted by Miss Beatrice Burr, home demonstrator of Norfolk county, attended a picnic which was held under the auspices of the Norfolk County Extension Bureau held at estate of Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird in East Walpole on Thursday last week. The trip was made by auto.

—A capacity audience attended the annual children's concert given by the members of the Sunday School connected with the Second Universalist church on Sunday afternoon at 3.30. Rev. L. W. Attwood, a former pastor, now holding the pastorate of the Universalist church in Abington, presided and conducted the devotions. The concert was in charge of Mrs. George Sargent. A feature of the program was the baptism of children which was performed by the Rev. Mr. Attwood, the water being used in the ceremony having been brought direct from the river Jordan in the Holy Land. He also paid tribute to the late Mrs. Grace Wheeler Willis, a former superintendent of the Sunday School, who was actively engaged in the church affairs, and directed the services for a number of years. At the close of the services, floral tributes were taken to the cemetery, and her grave decorated with flowers that had been used in the decoration of the church.

—The first of a series of band concerts conducted under the auspices of the Citizens Association of Precinct Four, was given on Nash's Green, Nash's Corner, on Monday evening by the Weymouth Post Band, A. L. The local troops of Boy and Girl Scouts, together with the pupils of the Shaw school, formed a column at Liberty Square, and marched with the band to the green. The concert was well attended, and the proceeds are to be used for the piano fund.

—The last meeting of the season of the dress-making class connected with the Ladies Auxiliary to the Pond Plain Improvement Association was held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. H. Goodale on Pond street. Miss Burr, home demonstrator of Norfolk county, was present, and Miss Couture as usual instructed the members of the class.

—Miss Fostine Blanchard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton S. Blanchard is ill at her home on Curtis avenue with the chickenpox.

—Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sylvester of Old Orchard, Maine, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Loud Jr. of Bates avenue.

—Wessagusset chapter, O. E. S., held a whist party in the New Bungalow on Pond street on Friday evening. Mrs. Frank O. Houghton chairman. The proceeds realized from the affair are to be used for the float which the chapter is to enter in the parade on Saturday.

Weymouth Proud of Her Record in the Indian Wars, the Colonial and Revolutionary Wars, the Civil War, Spanish War and World War

Sketches of the Grand Army American Legion and Auxiliaries

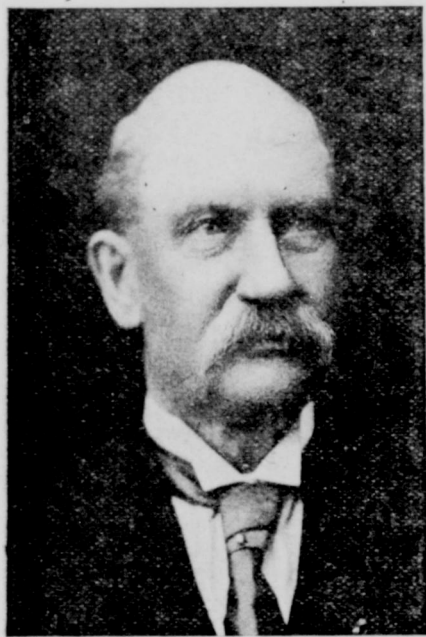

In one of the historical articles recently published in the Gazette-Transcript, Rev. William Hyde gave a list of Weymouth men who participated in King Philip's war, some being sent into Connecticut. There are also in Weymouth many graves of Colonial and Revolutionary heroes which have been marked.

Following are sketches of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Spanish War Veterans, and the American Legion, and their auxiliaries, also of the Special Aid Society of American Preparedness, the Service Star Legion, and other noble orders:

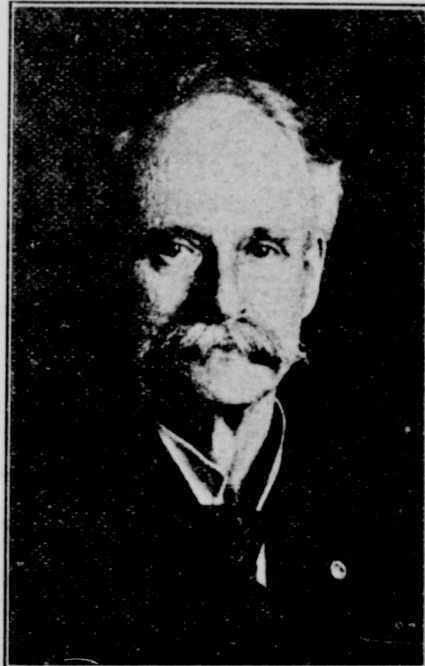

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., was formed in July, 1868, with the following charter members: Gen. James L. Bates, Capt. Charles W. Hastings, Capt. Andrew J. Garey, Capt. John Whealan, George Maynard, George Davis, George A. Holbrook, John D. Ray, Capt. Francis B. Pratt, and Lieut. George W. French.

Previous to this there had been formed in North Weymouth Lincoln Post, No. 40, and for some years both posts held Memorial Day exercises separately. But the one dominating principle of the Civil War "Union one and inseparable" having been accomplished, it was soon felt that the same principle should be applied to fraternal relations and along in the 70's the union of the two posts was accomplished, and has been found ever since to have been a wise move, making one strong post with one aim, increasing their membership with the years, till in 1883 they reached the maximum of 484 members.

COMMANDER BICKNELL

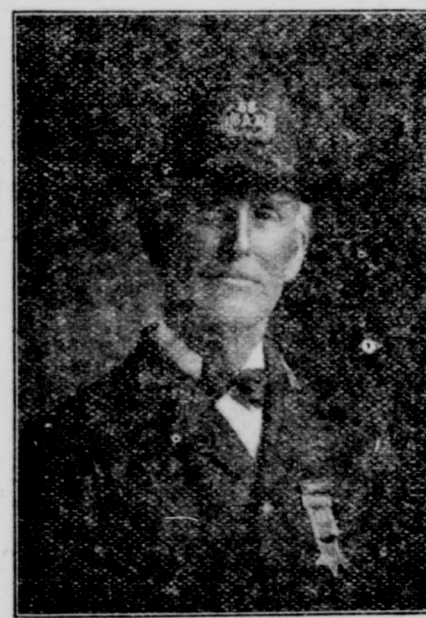

PAST COMMANDER HAWES

The Post for years was a dominating factor in the life of the town. Through its influence in its observance of Memorial Day the various cemeteries have taken on a new life and from being the neglected briar and weed enclosures, as many of them used to be, a spirit of pride and thrift has been enthused into their management, and many of them are beauty spots, well tended and admired while ALL are much improved, each individual lot owner vying with another in their care, while many cemeteries have a constant attendant through the summer months.

The sterling characters of many of its leading men have been recognized by the town in electing them to various offices of trust, one member having been for 24 consecutive years a member of its Board of Selectmen, and others have held important offices under the State and Government, of great trust and responsibility. In fact so liberal has been the call to service in the past that it became proverbial "If you want a good officer get a G. A. R. man". (The writer well recollects when he was nominated for assessor overhearing the remark, "For G—d's sake aint there anybody but G. A. R. men to run the town?")

For over fifty years the town has liberally donated a sum of money each year for the observance of Memorial Day, which has been spent under the direction of the Post.

ADJUTANT WALDO TURNER

WILLIAM H. MORAN

Throughout these years the Post has had a number of different homes. It was instituted in and for some years it occupied the room on the second floor of the Town Hall, the High School room; from thence it went to South Weymouth for a while. As its numbers grew it went back to the Town Hall occupying the main hall. Here were spent its palmiest days. Here were inaugurated a series of fairs and entertainments which resulted in the gathering of a substantial fund, the investment of which is still keeping the Post in good financial condition.

From there the Post removed to East Weymouth and occupied the hall over the "Old Loud store" on Broad street (recently demolished) this

The various auxiliary organizations connected with the Post greatly strengthen it in the days of its passing. From the high water mark in 1883, the Post has been reduced to 39 active members at the present writing and it is but reasonable to expect that the next ten years will wipe out its existence. For this reason the Post have already appointed a committee to determine what disposition shall be made of such effects as it shall be possessed of at the time of its dissolution. This committee still have the matter under consideration and will report in the near future.

Wonderful Work Done by Special Aid Society

In February, 1917,—fully two months before the United States entered the World War,—a meeting of representative women of Weymouth was called at the home of Mrs. Albert Worthen of Weymouth, for the purpose of forming a branch of the Massachusetts Special Aid Society of American Preparedness. A society with a long name, but every word of it with a vital and far-seeing purpose.

Mrs. Barrett Wendall of Boston, president of the Massachusetts S. A. S. made those present realize the need of such an organization in Weymouth, and a general chairman for the town was chosen that day—Mrs. Carleton Barnes of South Weymouth.

The local chairmen were selected also—Mrs. Elbridge Nash for South Weymouth, and Miss Lillian Curtis (afterwards Mrs. Albert Gladwin) for North Weymouth. These two chairmen served during the existence of the society. Mrs. Kate Pierce Thayer for Weymouth and Miss Katherine Fraser in East Weymouth brought their respective organizations through the first hard year of the war period and were succeeded in Weymouth by Mrs. Elmer Alexander and Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, and in East Weymouth by Mrs. George W. Perry.

Meetings in each part of the town were called within a few days in order to perfect the local organizations and chairmen of sewing, knitting, outfits, bandages, and ways and means committees were then appointed.

The significant fact of the geographical location of Weymouth, next to the Hingham Arsenal, and being on the coast, brought home to its women the special need of "Preparedness," and as the men had their "Home Guards" and "Public Safety Committees," the women met at first to sew and prepare for any local emergency or disaster that might occur. A regular First Aid medicinal and hospital outfit was purchased and kept on hand in case of need.

Thus when the United States on April 6, 1917, did actually enter the war the S. A. S. A. P. was in working order, ready to help the men of Weymouth. This was preeminently its purpose for the next few years, to see that not a man went into the Army or Navy without a warm and serviceable outfit which included a sweater, socks, helmet, wristers, handy kit, and pajamas.

Of course this took money and as the dues were very small, the Finance, Ways and Means Committees, and men of the town were constantly arranging pop concerts, card parties, moving picture shows, dances, children's entertainments and mammoth out-of-door fetes etc. to raise the necessary funds.

Finally a system of donations by "Systematic giving" was worked out. A large corps of women and girls, divided into squads, made a house to house canvass every week, collecting pledges made to S. A. S. of sums varying from ten cents a week to five dollars from men, women, and children. This ensured the definite income amounting to several thousand dollars yearly. Every contributor thus became a member of the Special Aid, working for the men of Weymouth.

The first few who went across before December, 1917, were sent Christmas gift boxes, and in 1918 the many abroad were remembered with Christmas cards and $2; the first cash that some of them had seen for many a long day.

Each part of Weymouth had its separate Special Aid Society, workrooms, chairmen and committees, but they all united in their desire to help the home boys, wherever they were, in camps in the United States, on the war ships, or in foreign service. Besides two or more days of sewing a week, they met for several afternoons and evenings of surgical dressings in churches, halls, and engine houses and everywhere, and at all times the knitters plied their busy needles. The total output was truly enormous.

The scope of the work of the S. A. S. was varied, "special aid" wherever needed. They answered calls from ships leaving port for warm knitted garments, and gave pajamas to hospitals.

The sailors of Camp Hingham were given a mammoth "Husking Bee" supper and dance, besides being entertained by individuals in their own homes at various times. The S. A. S. helped support the officers' home at Camp Devens, the Major Willard House, and the one, towards the close of the war, located in Boston. The Society gave war-time courses in food conservation and cookery and organized to cook and carry food to families laid low by the dreaded flu epidemic. They contributed tons of clothing and several hundreds of dollars to the Halifax Relief Fund.

They participated in the Fifth Victory Loan parade and also the Armistice torchlight parade, and its members helped the men in all the drives during the war.

They sewed for the American Fund for French Wounded, Belgian Relief, and the American Red Cross. They made surgical dressings by the thousands for the Peter Bent Brigham Unit and the Red Cross. Even the school children were organized into Junior Special Aid Societies.

When the men began to come back the Special Aid gave them banquets, entertainments, welcome home greetings, and gifts of money. The Mass. Special Aid Society supported the Wendall House in Boston, a house with a home atmosphere for soldiers and sailors. Weymouth furnished one of its rooms, and Weymouth women acted as hostesses for one afternoon and evening a week.

The situation in Weymouth in regard to the relation between the Special Aid and Red Cross was unique to Weymouth. There was a central Red Cross chairman and committee for the town as a whole, but automatically the local S. A. S. chairmen became also the local Red Cross chairmen as the Special Aid workrooms did also the Red Cross work. This was possible because the personnel and membership of the two organizations were one and the same, carrying on both the Special Aid and Red Cross work. Each local society had its treasury with Red Cross money used only for Red Cross work, and Special Aid money used for the "special aid" of its own Weymouth service men. An amicable and convenient arrangement, as it fulfilled the very vitally broad and cope of the American Red Cross program, and yet the women of Weymouth had the honor of providing for the individual needs of every man who served Weymouth in the World War; and of reserving part of the S. A. S. funds for a memorial or memorials to those who sacrificed their lives in that war.

CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT
A very successful child's entertainment was given last night at the Braintree Point Welfare clubhouse under the direction of the Braintree Point Woman's club.

The stage was beautifully decorated and in our corner was a larger book out of which stepped the "Story Book Kiddies" each of which represented some character dear to the hearts of the younger generation. Little Miss Muffit, Bo-Peep, Little Boy Blue, Robin Red Breast, Jackie Horner, and in fact all of the little folks' friends of the Story Book were there.

The entire program was portrayed in an excellent manner and it is conceded to be by all those who attended a most enjoyable entertainment. Special features of the program were a Rose Drill, The Marionettes, a Spanish and D'Waisy dance by Miss Esther Turrell, Minnie by Rosalie Debois and Ruth Sullivan, Irish jig and fancy dance by Nan and Bernice Keast "A Riddle" recitation by Miss Fitch, "Oobdy's Darling" sung by Bernard Smith and Warner Fitch, which was a great hit.

At the conclusion of the entertainment the "Kiddies" danced around the Lollypop Tree and lollypops were distributed to all the children taking part in the program as well as to those in the audience.

The assembly hall was then turned over to the children for dancing. The committee having the entertainment in charge was under the direction of Mrs. Newman Page.

AMERICAN LEGION

Post No. 79, American Legion, held a special meeting Tuesday night in G. A. R. hall and it was a sight for sore eyes to see so many old buddies and new faces there.

The committee for the Tercentenary parade which is to be held Saturday (tomorrow) afternoon, reported that everything is in readiness, and it is with great pleasure and an honor that we are to have with us tomorrow a gentleman known to everyone, and a friend to all soldiers, Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, and Maj. Gen. Logan. Every ex-service man in town is invited to march with the Legion and from what was said and done at the meeting Tuesday night it is very evident that we are going to make a wonderful showing. Now remember ex-service men and Legionnaires do not let the uniform keep you away as there will be a place in line for all ex-service men in civilian clothes and suitable arm bands or something of that nature will be provided.

The Legion and ex-service men will assemble at Bicknell Square, North Weymouth, at 1.15 P. M. sharp; so be there early and get assigned to your platoon.

Commander Stein, ex-Commander Leonard and several of the comrades motored to Medfield Sunday to attend a special meeting of the Norfolk county council. There was a very interesting meeting and a large amount of business was attended to, after which the members present were treated to a splendid lunch.

It was voted at this meeting to have a picnic at the Webster House, Brant Rock, July 29. The program for the day will be given out later. Now do not forget, ex-service men, to turn out tomorrow and help the committee make this the biggest day that Weymouth ever had or ever will have.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

The members of the First church choir will hold a picnic this evening at the cottage of Mrs. Nancy Ames at Wessagusset.

At the recent business meeting of the teachers of the First church Sunday school the date of the annual church school picnic was decided upon and it will take place on Saturday, July 14, at North Scituate beach.

STATISTICS OF WEYMOUTH MANUFACTURES

While the town of Weymouth has not made a gain in the number of its industries during the past decade, but on the contrary, shows a slight decrease in the number of manufacturing establishments, the capital invested and the value of manufactured products is considerably greater.

According to the last industrial report, there were in Weymouth 28 manufacturing establishments, as compared with 31 a decade ago. Surprising as it may seem the number of industries has declined while invested capital, the value of raw material, wages paid, and every other feature of the manufacturing business shows an increase in valuation.

	1923	1913
Number of establishments	28	31
Capital invested	$11,713,954	$5,759,327
Value of stock and materials used	$13,167,629	$5,506,758
Value of product	$21,822,189	$8,344,066
Amount of wages paid during the year	$ 2,710,349	$1,409,554
Wage earners employed
Males, average number	2,090	1,672
Females, average number	638	565
Both sexes, average number	2,728	2,237
Smallest number employed	1,286	1,777
Greatest number employed	2,767	2,654
Value of products	$21,222,189	$8,344,066

The total horse power used in manufactures in the town of Weymouth in 1920 was 2,724, of which 1,235 was generated by steam engines and turbines, 744 by turbines, 1,419 by electric.

When the great Edison power and illuminating plant is completed and in operation that alone will generate a volume of horse power greater than all the present power plants within the limits of the town.

MONDAY CLUB

Since January 3, 1897, when 75 women of the town met in the Temple of Honor Hall to organize a woman's club, the history of The Monday Club has been one of notable progress and achievement. To Mrs. Mabel Jones, goes the credit for the vision and energy to organize a woman's club in those days when women's clubs were in their infancy and many discouragements were met. The presidents of the club have been as follows: Mrs. Charlotte Lovell Richards, 1896-1897; Mrs. Mabel B. Jones, 1897-1899; Mrs. Elizabeth B. Pratt, 1899-1901; Miss Susan C. Richards, 1901-1903; Mrs. Susanne Fenmore Tyndale, 1903-1904; Mrs. Anna D. Heckman, 1904-1906; Miss A. Lillian McGregor, 1906-1908; Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, 1908-1910; Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees, 1910-1912; Mrs. Florence A. Harper, 1912-1914; Mrs. Lottie G. Sampson, 1914-1916; Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, 1916-1918; Mrs. Alice L. Neal, 1918-1919; Mrs. Alice Pierce Jewell, 1919-1921; Mrs. Annie J. Libby, 1921-1923; Mrs. Alice Pierce Jewell, 1923.

All of these are living with the exception of Mrs. Anna D. Heckman and many of them are among the most active members in the work of the club today.

The membership of the club has varied and has been as high as 290 but at the present time membership is limited to 250 and frequently there is a waiting list.

As for the achievements of this organization during these 26 years, no better resume has been made than that of Mrs. Jennie Worster on the occasion of the Silver Anniversary of the club, celebrated December 5, 1921, from which the following is taken:

Our first gift was to the Weymouth High school; Merrill's "Vision of St. Anthony" which cost $25. Later we paid $30 for setting out trees. Then a lantern we helped to pay for $143.98; also a hot water heater for domestic science class, for buying music $20, making a total of $250.28 for the High school. We have our scholarship fund of $1000. We have educated a girl in Kentucky at an expense of $200. We have given to the Boston floating hospital $200, to the Weymouth Hospital Association $100, to the Visiting Nurse at different times $288, for sewing in the schools $202.60, to establish the Stamp Saving system $100, to assist in the Boston Biennial $125, to the War Victory fund to establish a home for boys in France $150, for Belgian Relief $88, toward the Endowment fund of the General Federation $125, to the Endowment fund of the State Federation $55, to the Pond Home $60, to the Paint-up and Clean-up committee $35 to Miss Brassill for her work $20.

During the war we bought one $50 Bond and gave small sums to many worthy cases connected with the war. We have given to the Springfield International college and the Massachusetts Forestry Association, also the National Audubon Society. We contributed to the Longfellow Memorial fund and to the Roger Wolcott Memorial fund, to a Model school in Georgia we gave $25, toward travelling librarian for outlying districts $30, to the State Federation for educational use $25.

We helped restore Longfellow's birthplace, gave toward the Anne Hutchinson statue, helped the Social Welfare club; and in summing up I find it totals in amount of money $3433.38.

The season just closed has maintained the same high standards under the guidance of President Mrs. Annie J. Libby and an able corps of officers, and already plans are being made for an equally successful season 1923-24. The officers and committee members who will guide the destinies of the club during the coming season are:

First Vice-President—Mrs. Bessie K. Hunt.
Second Vice-President—Mrs. M. Elizabeth Alden.

THE TOWN OF WEYMOUTH

1866 TO 1896

For a town that stands near the head of the list of old towns on the American Continent, thirty years is a short period in its history, covering but little in some such epochs and a great deal in others; yet every period, however long or short, has in it events that go to make a grand and complete whole, linking that period to the past and the future in one continuous chain of events that make history eventful and interesting.

In many respects Weymouth, at the beginning of this period was in its infancy. It was old in years, but the race for modern improvements had not enthused its people with the desire for the activities, the utilities and conveniences that came before the close of this period, together with industries that helped to build up the town.

SCHOOLS

In 1866 there were 34 teachers and 1739 scholars enrolled in town. In 1896 there were 54 teachers and 2271 scholars. The old school districts had been abolished and the management placed upon an entirely different basis with materially improved school facilities and advantages. The school appropriation for 1866 was $12,593, which in thirty years was raised to $43,000. These figures, however, do not reveal the true state of affairs, as many items that in former days were paid for by parents and scholars, were at the close of this period paid out of the school fund.

ROADS

In 1866 roads were cared for in much the same manner as schools, each district having its own surveyor and in most instances working independent of town government. At the close of this aforementioned thirty-year period, in 1896, a far different system of road-making prevailed. The sixty-five miles of Weymouth's old narrow lanes had been widened, straightened and regraded, and thirty-five miles of new roads had been built.

WATER SYSTEM

In 1866 a water system was an almost unheard-of thing in Weymouth, and had anyone suggested the feasibility of such a thing they would have been considered at least visionary, yet in 1896 we had one of the best systems in the land with upwards of fifty-five miles of supply pipes with 356 hydrants well distributed throughout the town, and the system self-supporting and carrying each year a good balance to the sinking fund for the payment of water bonds when they should mature.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

In 1865 Weymouth was without a fire department, except for four hand engines at the Landing, North and South Weymouth, which belonged to local companies. Thirty years later we had a complete department with two steamers, seven hose and five hook and ladder companies with complete apparatus which with hose cost over $40,000, not including several thousand dollars spent on hand engines in the process of evolution and experiment, and several thousands of dollars expended in reservoirs then covered up and abandoned.

SCHOOLS

In the thirty years previous to 1896, Weymouth spent $90,000 for new school houses and had reduced the town debt from $90,359 at the beginning of the period to $63,002 on December 11, 1895.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING

As early as 1866, at the close of the thirty year period of the history of journalism in Weymouth the town had an extensive electric lighting plant and two rapidly growing and well conducted electric street railways.

The town in 1896 had a good system of street lighting, a feature that no one dreamed of at the beginning of the thirty year period of which we write and which brought to Weymouth a greater number of improvements and public utilities than all the years of our previous history, and among these improvements not the least is the Weymouth Gazette which has been instrumental in creating public opinion favorable to the undertakings that have brought to Weymouth utilities that as early as 1896 were considered indispensable. No one would willingly go back to the days of even thirty years previous.

We hear of people longing for the "good old days," but when we think of the tallow candle, the whale oil lamp, the smoking kerosene lamp and feeble street lighting system of the early days we wonder what there is in ancient history that attracts. The time was when we went to the well and pulled down the sweep to lower "iron-bound bucket" into the water. It was an effort to pull it up and a greater effort to carry it into the house. Turning the faucet was a different proposition and brought into being well furnished bath rooms and a healthier and cleaner people.

WEYMOUTH ART LEATHER CO.

The Weymouth Art Leather Company is one of the industries of Weymouth that is rapidly coming to the front as an important industry not only in Weymouth, but in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and by reason of its growth has from time to time been obliged to increase its capacity, build new and larger buildings and increase its help and machine capacity.

The company was established in 1910 in the old Sherman mill in East Weymouth, and was incorporated April 11, 1911. The mill ran successfully until May 27, 1914, when it was totally destroyed by fire, together with the Town Hall and considerable residential property. The following month the company renewed business in the old Cement Building plant.

The business of the Weymouth Art Leather Company was started with six men and today employs 58, signifying that the capacity of the plant has been increased many fold. The new buildings now in process of erection will again double the capacity of the plant. The new buildings are respectively 58 x 85 feet, 15 x 90 feet, 25 x 90 feet, all of wood, and another 60 x 75 feet of terra cotta.

The business was started under the management of George H. Lowe Sr., president of the Carter, Rice Company, as president, and his son, George H. Lowe Jr. as treasurer and manager, and who are still conducting the business.

Mr. C. A. Milbury, the local manager, came to Weymouth in March, 1917, and is still in charge. Miss Alice M. Cullen is secretary and office manager. Miss Cullen is a native of Weymouth and a graduate of Weymouth High school, class of 1919.

The company makes it a point to employ almost exclusively Weymouth help, some of whom have been at work for the company since its establishment here.

For the first four months of the year the company has been working double time, and are now running at full capacity, and when the new buildings are completed it is expected that they will be fully equipped and manned.

The business of the company is the conversion of cotton into materials for the use of automobile manufacturers, furniture manufacturers, upholsterers, and for all purposes of a kindred nature.

JACKSON SQUARE

IN COAL BUSINESS OVER FIFTY YEARS

The first coal used in Weymouth of which we have any record was in 1848, although it may have been a year or two earlier. The coal was sold by the old firm of Joseph Loud & Company which was composed of Capt. Joseph Loud, James Tirrell, Joseph Loud, Jr., and Nathaniel Blanchard. Previously for many years, this firm had engaged in the grain, lumber, and wood business. They owned two grist mills, one in Quincy, and the other near the site of the old Town House in Weymouth, which they afterwards sold to Howe & French. They owned interests in several schooners which brought grain and lumber to their wharves before the days of the railroad, and afterwards these were utilized in bringing coal from Philadelphia. This firm was dissolved by the death of Capt. Joseph Loud on Jan. 14, 1864, and a new partnership was established July 30, 1864, by James Tirrell, Joseph Loud and Nathaniel Blanchard. James Tirrell retired Aug. 1, 1864. This firm continued until July 10, 1868, when Mr. Blanchard retired and a new partnership was formed by Joseph Loud and Augustus J. Richards, which continued until the death of Mr. Loud in 1875.

Mr. Richards had entered the employ of Joseph Loud and Company in 1845, when as a boy of ten years of age, his first duties were the bagging of the grain. After the death of Mr. Loud, Mr. Richards continued the business under the same firm name of Joseph Loud & Company, until his two sons, Henry A. Richards and George J. Richards completed their college courses and joined him. In July, 1888, they formed the co-partnership of Augustus J. Richards & Sons. Henry A. Richards died in October, 1895, and the firm name was changed to Augustus J. Richards & Son, under which name it has continued until the present time. During her brother's illness, Susan C. Richards went into the office to assist with the bookkeeping and much to her surprise from that day to this, for nearly 28 years, has been closely identified with the business.

George J. Richards, who had conducted the grain business at Quincy, died in April, 1900. Mr. Richards was then bereft of the comfort and aid of his two sons to whom he had looked for the sharing of the responsibilities of a business which he had spent his life in establishing. He made his daughter his partner, but naturally she could never fill her brothers' places. Augustus J. Richards died July 15, 1906, having been in the business for 61 years.

Since then his daughter, who has become Susan R. Worthen, is continuing her father's business, with the hope that some day her son, Richards Worthen, may prove to be as wise, generous and honorable a man as was his grandfather, and carry on for yet another generation the firm of Augustus J. Richards & Son.

Mrs. Worthen fully realizes that she never could have succeeded so well, but for the able assistance that she has always had.

Mr. John F. Dwyer as superintendent since 1914, and Miss Grace R. Stancombe, bookkeeper for the past three years, have relieved her greatly of the many cares and bothersome details connected with a retail coal office. There is also a debt of gratitude due to Robert A. Condrick, who has been in the continuous employ of the firm for 45 years; to Thomas Tracey, Patrick Shea, Patrick Kelley, and Frank Burns, who have been with her for twenty years or more, and to her other present fellow workers: James Armitage, Patrick Coyle, Arthur Hunt, Robert Smith, and Edward Starr, whose loyal friendship and faithful co-operation are deeply appreciated.

She also wishes to express her gratitude for the fair and courteous treatment shown by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company and the Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Company, through whom she has been receiving her coal supply for the past 25 years.

It seems impossible to express to her hundreds of customers her heartfelt appreciation of their consideration and unflinching support during all these years. There are names on the books today that have been there for fifty years; there are the names of children and grandchildren of the families who bought their coal of Joseph Loud and Company, and in spite of wars, strikes, car shortages, and coal famines, they have proved steadfast loyal friends.

HUNT'S MARKET GROCERY

"Every day, in every way," you are seeing and hearing, more and more, about "your neighborhood store."

The stability and permanency of a business can only be definitely established by a record of successful operation over a period of years. Founded in the early sixties, the records of Hunt's Market Grocery show about sixty years of uninterrupted operation as a Quality and Service neighborhood store. Mr. Hunt became sole proprietor in 1891, then doing business on the site now occupied by the Tufts Library Building; one year later moving across the street to our present location. We are proud to state that we are the oldest grocer and provision dealer in Washington Square, and with but one or two exceptions the oldest in this community.

Present day civilization demands fair merchandising, cleanliness, economy and dependability. It has been our aim, always, to please our patrons by giving up-to-the-minute service, and handling the best goods on the market at a price consistent with fair business methods.

That you may receive your meats, poultry, and green vegetables in the best possible condition, we have recently installed an automatic refrigerating plant that keeps our chest at an even temperature of 32 degrees. Hunt's is the old reliable neighborhood store with the newest ideas. The oftener you call on us the greater benefit you will derive.

We are pleased to note that our efforts have been appreciated as our books show a substantial increase from year to year and we take this opportunity to thank you for your past patronage. Rest assured, we will endeavor to do our utmost to improve our happy business relations.

Be a good neighbor and pay us the compliment of a call. If not convenient for you to come in person, phone Weymouth 0970-0971 where you will receive courteous treatment, the best merchandise, and real delivery service.

M. R. LOUD & CO.

Business started in 1895 at Independence Square, South Weymouth by Matthew R. Loud and Frank E. Loud. The stock was principally hardware.

In same year they bought out the hardware and plumbing and tinshop business of Stewart & Howe, formerly L. Tuck, and moved to the building then called Union hall.

In a few years they moved to the room now occupied by E. Nash Drug Co., and shortly in 1911 when the building was bought by F. E. Loud, the drug store and hardware store exchanged places, the building was lowered and enlarged and is now an active business center.

The original partners remain in active interest in the business and are very grateful to the many who have patronized and have thus contributed to our success.

ANNIVERSARY GAZETTE

Because of the extra cost for stock and for printing, the Souvenir Gazette to be issued June 15, for the 300th Anniversary of Weymouth, should be sold for 25 cents, but the publishers have decided that the price shall be ten cents by news agents and newsboys.

It is expected that the edition of 4000 copies will be exhausted within a week, but if any remain unsold after June 30, the price will be 2 cents per copy. Agents making returns of unsold copies should return the whole paper before July 1.

Agents will please take notice at above, and sell all copies for 10 cents. Extra papers supplied until edition is exhausted.

WEYMOUTH CHAP. RED CROSS

In the early days of the World War various associations were formed for the production of surgical dressings and garments. Of these the one best known in the South Shore was the Special Aid Society which organized groups in all of the towns. After the United States entered the War it was the Red Cross which the Government recognized and it became necessary that all articles should meet the requirements specified by the Red Cross. This led to the formation of Red Cross units or chapters all over the Country and most chapters had numerous branches in their adjacent towns.

Thus when the Metropolitan Chapter was formed in Boston, her branches developed in all the smaller cities and towns of the Metropolitan District.

The Weymouth Branch came into being at a meeting held at the Fogg Library in South Weymouth in November, 1917, at which time there were officially only 147 Red Cross members; but at the end of the first year 4900 members had been added. The first officers to be elected were Mrs. Free-man Putney, Jr., Chairman; Dr. Rudolph Jacoby, Vice-Chairman; Mrs. Walter R. Field, Secretary and Mr. Edwin R. Sampson, Treasurer, an office which he has held continuously since that time.

The Red Cross work was begun in the work rooms of the Special Aid Society, already well established in the four villages. A joint committee was appointed for conference, consisting of the officers of the Red Cross, the chairman of the Special Aid and the four work room chairmen, Mrs. Elbridge Nash, Mrs. Kate Pierce Thayer, Miss Lillian Curtis and Miss Katherine Fraser; also Mr. W. Carlton Barnes and Mr. Prince H. Tirrell.

During that first year through the combined efforts of the Red Cross and the Special Aid the following articles were sent forth from those four work rooms: 10,042 pieces of sewing, 4,888 knitted garments and 163,457 surgical dressings.

Shortly after the United States entered the War and our young men entered the service, there came the realization that as these young men left home, it frequently meant that the chief bread winner was taken away, leaving a family with the problem of re-adjustment to face and often causing much suffering, increased by the worry for those who had gone. It was then the Red Cross instituted its Home Service through which an endeavor was made to reach every man and the family of every man who enlisted; financial assistance was given when needed and friendly service of every variety was rendered. It was not meant that a single family should be worse for giving its members to the War. To be sure the Government insisted that every man with dependents should make an allotment of his income which the Government would supplement if necessary with an allowance. With the rapid movement of troops and the enormity of the proposition, the money did not come through immediately, so that it had not been for the ample resources of the Red Cross and their immediate service, the results might have been unfortunate.

This all had its bearing upon the men as members of the National forces; having confidence in the Red Cross which they felt was present to meet any situation in their families, they were relieved of worry and thus enabled to give themselves up to being efficient soldiers and sailors.

At first this work was handled by the chapter but in October, 1918, a committee was appointed to consider Home Service as a Branch activity and in February, 1919, a Home Service Committee was appointed with Mr. Edwin R. Sampson, chairman; the other members being Mrs. J. Herbert Libby and Miss Katherine Fraser for East Weymouth; Dr. Rudolph Jacoby and Mr. Joseph Kelly for Weymouth and Mr. Prince H. Tirrell with Mr. Matthew O'Dowd for South Weymouth. The Executive and clerical work of the committee was to be done through the established office of the Quincy Branch.

To be sure this was after the Armistice but the troops were returning; men did find immediate employment and become re-adjusted; besides there were the sick and wounded troops being returned to their families. These men were to be followed until they were able to take their places in the community as self-supporting citizens. The Government had made plans that the Public Health Department should attend to the further physical needs of the men; that compensation should be given to men not able to work and where men were unable to pursue their former occupations they should be trained in some line that would insure for them independence and self-respect in the future. Again it seemed necessary for the Red Cross to grease the wheels of Government procedure and assist the men in making their connections with proper Government agencies. The problem grew very rapidly, beyond all expectations and the problem still continues. The Home Service makes no decisions upon men's claims upon the Government, but every chapter and branch feels that in order to fulfill the sacred responsibility assumed under the Red Cross Chapter, they must continue until the last man is satisfied.

While the Home Service was becoming very active the production still continued, on through the year 1920 and large consignments were sent out for hospital work as well as for people in the stricken countries. In the spring and fall of 1919 the Branch responded generously to the call for used garments to be sent to Belgium and Northern France.

Following the close of the War, the National Red Cross made plans for continuing work, developing a Peace Time Program which should endeavor to "conserve the vitality of the nation." In accordance with this plan, on December 30, 1919, the Weymouth Branch appointed a public health committee which was given power whereby they should secure a nurse at a salary of $1200.00 per year; such a nurse was installed as nurse in the schools of Weymouth for the year 1919-1920.

In the fall of 1920 membership returns were greatly reduced with the result that the Branch now felt it was able to meet only its Home Service obligations.

On April 12, 1921, after due consideration, the Branch voted to petition the New England Division of the Red Cross to become a chapter, thus separating itself from the Metropolitan Chapter; this petition was acceded to and a charter was granted on Sept. 9, 1921.

Up to March 1, 1922, however, the Home Service work of the Chapter was carried on at the office of the Quincy Red Cross where a full time worker was maintained and the Weymouth Chapter assumed its proportion of the overhead expenses. Upon inquiry it was discovered that Weymouth could manage a less expensive way of having her work done and, it was believed, a more advantageous way. The services of a worker were procured for one day a week and she was established for work, with desk room in the Town Office at East Weymouth on March 1, 1922.

During the year the Home Service work has been followed closely; there have been some demands for material relief to tide over short periods; numerous men have been given assistance in the technicalities of prosecuting their compensation claims upon the Government; one or two old allotment and allowance difficulties required attention; help was given in making proper application for State bonuses; and what seems very important is the service which we are at times called upon to render to the doctors and workers where our men are receiving treatment; they depend largely upon this.

The past fall and winter the Chapter has filled its quota of layettes assigned to it and made a contribution of used clothing for the refugees who fled to Greece after the burning of Smyrna.

An information service has been offered to all requiring this in any line whatsoever.

More recently, it has been deemed possible to render assistance in a few civilian families, particularly where there was a special health problem and the Chapter is at this time considering a continued program and how it may make the largest offering towards "conserving the vitality of the Nation."

The regular meeting of the Weymouth Chapter is held at Clapp Memorial Building the second Tuesday of each month. The present board of officers is Chairman, Mrs. Kate Pierce Thayer; Vice-Chairmen, Rev. K. A. Handman, Rev. John B. Holland, Hon. Thomas V. Nash; Secretary, Mrs. Alice G. Doyle; Treasurer, Mr. Edwin R. Sampson.

THE NORFOLK CLUB.

Common interest in the bicycle, at a time when the desire to own a "safety" animated most young men, frequently brought together in the rear of the jewelry store of Charles H. Tinkham, in Music Hall block, South Weymouth, a young and enthusiastic group. Memory sets the date in the year 1889, and the names of the regular members of this little band as Walter L. Bates, H. Wilbur Dyer, Arthur C. Heald, the brothers, J. Howard and Walter R. Field, Edward P. MacBride and Charles H. Tinkham.

What a group this was! Who, having known them from the point of view of the small boy, can ever forget them; their characteristics; their doings? Was ever seen the like of the youthful beard of Howard Field? How could human feet ever stride so quickly as those of Wilbur Dyer? Days were never dull when the team of Ned MacBride and Walter Field was loose in town.

In the year 1890 the above named group with additions increasing the number to twelve organized themselves on Memorial Day as the Norfolk Cycle Club.

Quarters were established in the Fogg Building, Columbian Square, in the rear of the middle room, then occupied by the Postoffice, and as interest in cycling grew with the perfection of the pneumatic tire, so did the Norfolk Cycle Club grow. Gradually larger quarters were obtained in the Fogg building, and bowling alleys some years later were installed.

At about this time, two other clubs had appeared in South Weymouth, the Hawthorne, with quarters in the old Savings Bank house on Main street, and the Lincoln, whose members originally were boys, shortly to consider themselves men. In January, 1894, these two clubs united with the Norfolk Club and larger quarters were taken in the Fogg building. In 1898 the Club was incorporated under the name of the Norfolk Club of South Weymouth and at that time the membership numbered eighty-five.

For several years, as it had previously been, the club remained the center of bicycling interest in South Weymouth. Road races had been and were of frequent occurrence, and rivalry with other towns and villages was keen. Possibly the Lovell Cycle Club of East Weymouth had a slight edge in this respect. How many are there who can say they have made Nantasket from Columbian Square in less than thirty minutes?

The days of the cycle as a sporting implement for the amateur came to an end, and the Norfolk Club became purely a social club. In 1913 the club took title to the Fogg Opera House building, which has for the last few years been managed through a committee of the club. Membership hovers around the two hundred mark, the limit set by the Club by-laws, and as large a membership as the present club quarters can conveniently contain.

The moving of the two banks, which will occur within a year from the present time will give the club opportunity to broaden its scope to considerable extent.

Hitherto, the club has been a convenient meeting place in the centre of things in South Weymouth; its quarters have been available to members and non-members for public purposes, and its members are always expected to do their share when there is work to be done. The club has carried out the purpose of its charter "for encouraging all public exercises, to cultivate a more intimate knowledge of all events affecting the public welfare, and so far as possible to use its influence for the public good," and more; and so it must do in the future.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS CORRESPONDENT.

Miss Florence Bicknell Nash, who belongs to one of the oldest families of Weymouth—the "Bicknells"—traces her ancestry back to Zachary Bicknell, his wife, Agnes, and son, John, who left Weymouth, England, in Rev. Joseph Hull's company, settling in Weymouth in 1635. These early settlers were the founders of the Bicknell family in America, and in their memory a monument stands in the Old North cemetery, Weymouth Heights, this monument being erected in 1882 by a grateful posterity.

Miss Nash, daughter of the late Charles Carrol Nash, was born and brought up in Weymouth Heights and attended the Weymouth schools. She became connected with the Weymouth Gazette as Weymouth Heights correspondent, during her grammar school days. In her early youth, when it was necessary for her to seek advice from her father as to the correct wording to use in the reporting—but experience was a good teacher, and she has been faithful to her duties as a Gazette correspondent for more than fifteen years,—through the days of her youth,—through High School days, and continuing on during her years in the business world.

In 1910, after Miss Nash was graduated from the Weymouth High, she entered Burdett Business College. She graduated from there in 1911, after which she entered the business world, where she has proved herself to be a successful secretarial stenographer, having been in the office of Alden, Walker & Wilde, Inc., East Weymouth, for over ten years, where she now holds a very responsible position.

Not only are Miss Nash's accomplishments confined to the business world, but she, having come from the old Puritan stock, has been reared in the Christian church, and it has been quite natural for her to follow along in the religious footsteps of her good old Puritan ancestors. It was her privilege in 1907 to become a member of the First Church in Weymouth, where her name still stands on record as a member, in high esteem, in the Mother Church of Weymouth.

For fifteen years Miss Nash was a teacher in the Primary Department of the Sunday School, also she has been active in the Senior Christian Endeavor Society, at all times being a great promoter of young people's work.

Five years ago, she organized a Junior Christian Endeavor society, bringing a band of boys and girls together into a religious society meeting every Sunday afternoon, and the work of this society is still being carried on,—with Miss Nash in the lead, as Junior Superintendent.

Miss Nash's service and usefulness in carrying on His Kingdom, has not only been confined to her own church, for, by her holding the office as President of Clark Christian Endeavor Union for two years, her Christian service and leadership reached into dozens of C. E. Societies and churches along the South Shore, also through Norfolk County.

Would it not be a great inspiration to the early settlers of 1635 if they could but see the worth-while lives their descendants of today are living?

Winter of 1923 Miss Nash was away from her Weymouth home on King Oak Hill, having spent five months in Lakeland, Florida. Her stay in the Sunny South proved to be a most interesting one, and the experience was most valuable.

Miss Nash returned from the South the latter part of May, and is glad to resume her business, social and religious duties in her dear old home town.

A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT

We have found from years of experience that those who fill their coal bins early are not only saving in dollars, but in comfort and peace of mind. COAL may be a little cheaper, but more often it is dearer and more difficult to obtain, so we continue to advise early ordering and early deliveries.

We have passed through the worst winter in the history of our business, but let us advise you not to forget it until you have ordered your next year's supply and have had it delivered as soon as possible.

Last year coal was allotted to dealers, 60 percent of the amount received the year before. We were fortunate in being able to secure our allotment, and those of you who had your coal delivered early received 100 percent. Weather conditions, caused a demand even greater than the year before, and the question then confronted us, how to satisfy those who did not fill their bins when we were to receive but 60 percent of their requirements.

We feel proud of the fact that during this past winter we supplied the local Fuel Administrators with ONE THOUSAND tons of coal for delivery to those in need in Quincy and Weymouth, of our own free will, without obligation of any kind to anyone. This supply was more than that furnished by all the other local dealers combined, but we believed the community could best be served by giving this coal to alleviate suffering irrespective of where the receiver had previously purchased coal.

On Sunday, Feb. 4, during the hardest traffic and weather conditions of the winter, we delivered coal with our full equipment at double expense to help those in need.

We cannot state at this time just what the lowest price will be in the future, but we can assure you that we will welcome you as a customer and provide for you fair and courteous treatment and equitable distribution of the best coal obtainable.

Call us up. We are one company that answered every ring of the telephone during the past winter, and if you were unsuccessful in getting us, it was only because we were answering another call.

F. W. STEWART HARDWARE

This hardware business was established in Weymouth about 1868. Mr. George S. Baker and Mr. Francis Ambler, both needing a building suitable for business bought of Mr. Asa B. Wales in Washington Square a piece of land joining the Cowing estate, paying $2500 dollars for the same. On this spot Mr. Baker built a building of sufficient size to accommodate two enterprises. Mr. Ambler occupied one half for a drug store and Mr. Baker taking the other half to start the hardware business. The location was good, as the travel by this place to the lumber wharf was growing, and carpenters on their way for stock, invariably stopped there for their building and painting materials.

Mr. Baker gained the confidence of the people from Scituate, Hingham, Randolph and other neighboring towns by always furnishing first-class goods at an honest price and never failed to make good anything that turned out to be inferior. He built up a good, prosperous trade and carried it on until ill health compelled him to retire.

After his death in 1886 the business was continued by the family for about twenty years, when it was sold to Mr. J. Edward Ludden, who by adding a plumbing stock and trade for years, enlarged the business and then sold to Frank W. Stewart Oct. 1, 1908, after three years. The business has been continued up to the present time, with the exception of the plumbing which has been dropped. It has always had the best of reputation, the owner always buying the best, and always being accommodating to all around, always willing to lend and help someone. The faithful bookkeeper should also be mentioned, who has been present on the job for ten years.

Up to the present time the business is flourishing and has increased wonderfully within the last ten years.

The Fore River Plant on Weymouth Fore River

The Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., on the Weymouth Fore River, is about ten miles from the city of Boston. The shipyard covers an area of approximately 122 acres located on a land-locked harbor which reaches the sea by a channel dredged to about 24 feet, M. L. W., deep enough to float the largest of our battleships and merchant vessels.

This district has been a shipbuilding center for two centuries and the present site of the Fore River Plant is located on ground formerly occupied by one of the oldest shipyards in the United States.

The original company, the Fore River Engine Company, established in 1884 in East Braintree, some two miles away, moved its Plant in 1900 to the present site. Since the relocation of the Plant there has been a constant growth and development increasing waterfront and acreage, shops, docking facilities, until today this Plant has a waterfront of 3350 feet, docking space of 5000 feet, eight major launchingways, six submarine launchingways and a 10,000-ton floating dry dock.

The Fore River Plant has direct connections with the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. Co. by the Fore River Railroad, an independent company, with approximately some ten miles of track covering both main and yard lines. The Yard is approached on the land side from Hayward and Washington streets, having entrances to the Yard from both these streets, and is directly connected with the Washington street and Quincy avenue street car lines.

The greatest growth of the Plant has occurred during the past five years during which period there has been made a remarkable record for output, the Plant having completed in that time 132 ships of various types such as submarines, destroyers, tankers, and freighters. During the Yard's operation practically every type of ship has at some time been constructed including in addition to the above named types, yachts, trawlers, sailing vessels, battleships, cruisers etc., covering a total output far in excess of 300 vessels of all sizes.

The battleships "Vermont", "Nevada" and "Rhode Island" were built for the U. S. Navy; the battleship "Rivadavia" for the Argentine Republic; submarines for the British, Japanese, and Italian Navies, and turbine engines for the Japanese and Italian Navies.

on the dock located to give the operator unobstructed vision. Rapidity being vital in ship repair work, this dock is fitted so that it may be pumped up in about half an hour under normal conditions. The dock is equipped with power winches for hauling the ships on and off, derricks with a lifting capacity of fifteen tons, and other devices for handling light and heavy work. These mechanical facilities are reinforced, as stated above, with the equipment and organization of the Plant Departments, making the Repair Department capable of handling any class of work that may be required.

Ship repair work is one of the most interesting branches of ship work, because it is varied, and each ship is different, and presents a different problem from the preceding one. The key-note of ship repair work is usually SPEED, for the vessel is practically always in commission, and the owners naturally wish to lose as little time as possible in laying the ship up for repairs. Sometimes the ordinary repair work is put off until the ship is drydocked, which is usually done twice a year for the purpose of cleaning and painting. At other times, accidents or some unusual emergency will make immediate repairs imperative, in which case the ship is docked, and the organization works day and night until the job is finished. A few of the interesting ship repair jobs which have been finished at the Fore River Plant are noted below.

On Saturday, Aug. 26, 1921, the SS "City of Atlanta" ran ashore off Castle Island in Boston Harbor, just after clearing from Boston for Savannah and that afternoon, after the Yard had closed for the week-end, word was received to dock the ship and make any repairs necessary. Inspection revealed the bottom to be seriously damaged, the keel being deeply indented for a section of about 150 feet with an open crack extending the length of the engine and boiler room tanks. All seams, butts, and rivets were leaking freely. A large number of men were rounded up from their homes, and work was carried along throughout the night under the most unfavorable conditions, the workmen being subjected to a continual flow of water from the leaking tanks. In the remarkably short time of thirteen hours, all tanks were made tight, and on Sunday morning at eight o'clock, the ship was floated, and proceeded on her trip to Savannah. These repairs were made on a drydocked vessel while her passengers remained on board.

Another case where a rush job on a ship with seriously damaged bottom plates was successfully completed, was that of the SS "Clement Smith." In addition to being a very heavy repair job, the work was done under the most disagreeable conditions possible. The ship struck a submerged object when entering Boston Harbor, ripping her port and starboard plates from the fore peak tank to the engine room aft. She was kept afloat with greatest difficulty while her cargo of oil was being pumped out, finally compressed air being resorted to, to keep her afloat. When she was docked, large quantities of oil ran from her punctured tanks, all of which had to be confined to the limits of the dock and removed from the surface of the water to prevent the pollution of the harbor. All tanks had to be cleaned from oil and sediment, and passed by a chemist before the workmen were allowed to work in them with naked lights. This included thirty cargo

The auxiliaries with some replacements, and new turbines and gears were installed. This was a rush job, the time limit being 45 days. The work was continuous night and day. All of the auxiliaries were removed, and replaced, the boilers altered, a complete forced draft fuel oil burning system installed with the necessary blower, engines, and air ducts, the tail shaft was drawn, the propeller changed, and new foundations were built, on which complete engine room equipment with new turbines and gears was installed. The work was completed and after successful dock and sea trials, the ship was delivered to her owners, 43 days after her arrival at the Plant.

Perhaps the most elaborate repair job ever undertaken in the Fore River Plant was the reconditioning of the "Minnekahda." This ocean greyhound, 625 feet long, had been used during the war as a troop transport, and most of her accommodations had been removed to make room for the troops. After the war, her owners decided to convert her into a third class passenger liner, carrying 2150 passengers, half of them in two to eight berth staterooms, the other half in open berthing spaces. There were also additional quarters for the 122 officers and men. The work involved building complete the new staterooms with their necessary equipment and accessories, the public and lounging rooms, the dining saloon with capacity for 700 persons, toilet, lavatory and laundry spaces, galleys, bakery, pantries, butcher shops, finely equipped hospitals with operating rooms, new life-saving equipment, fire alarm and protection systems, the most modern ventilation and heating systems with sanitary piping and plumbing, electric light installation, decorating, painting etc. Work on this ship was carried on continuously both day and night in approximately four months.

Some idea of the magnitude of this great shipyard will be conveyed by the airplane picture which is reproduced in another section of this paper. During the war this shipyard employed some 16,000 men. At the present time the Yard has under construction the Airplane Carrier "Lexington" for the U. S. Navy, the Scout Cruisers "Detroit" and "Raleigh", six submarines, ship repair work, and the reconditioning of locomotives for the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. Company, the present number of employees being about 3500.

The U. S. Scout Cruiser "Detroit" constructed by the Fore River Plant, has just completed exhaustive trials off the coast of Maine. This vessel is the highest powered vessel ever constructed in the United States, developing over 100,000 H. P. when going at her highest speed, over 35 knots.

She is really a very fast and powerful destroyer, having a length of 555 feet, breadth of 55 feet, and a normal load displacement of 7200 tons. She carries twelve 6-inch guns, four 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, ten torpedo tubes, and can launch more than 200 mines over her stern in a very few minutes. She can carry airplanes, which can be launched while the vessel is running, and in every respect is the last work in design, construction, equipment and armament.

She is equipped with twelve oil fired water tube boilers to provide steam for the operation of the Curtis turbines, at the speed of 2500 revolutions per minute, which speed is reduced, through reduction gears on each of the four propeller shafts, to 400 revolutions per minute.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH SAVINGS BANK

The South Weymouth Savings Bank, established March 8, 1868, is proud to look back over a period of FIFTY-FIVE YEARS during which time it has met every test for usefulness to the community.

It has encouraged thrift by offering a safe place for the industrious to deposit and accumulate savings and through its loans has aided in making a community of home owners.

As a Mutual Savings Bank, it has no stockholders to whom dividends are paid, but is operated solely for the benefit of its depositors among whom all of the earnings are distributed after expenses and taxes are paid and an amount required by law put into a guaranty fund for their protection.

Since the day of its incorporation representative citizens have served, without compensation, as trustees in the management of its affairs. As in every community public spirited men have given freely of their time and ability for the advancement of the community interest, so this bank has always found able and influential men ready to serve it. The condition of the bank today bears witness to the fulfillment of the trust assumed by the founders and carried throughout the years by their successors.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH CO-OPERATIVE BANK

The first thought of the early settlers of Weymouth was a home and the same thought is in the minds and hearts of the true citizens of today. In the early days the hearty co-operation of the friends and neighbors, "a jolly log-rolling", "a quilting-bee" and a "husking party" helped to establish the home.

The greater demands of today and the more pretentious homes required often make necessary the assistance of skilled labor and capital; this aid we extend to you.

Since its establishment February 28, 1889, the South Weymouth Co-operative Bank has always stood ready to lend assistance in the building of homes, the first requirement of every self-respecting citizen. Through its efforts, parents and children enjoy the better life, the greater liberty, and the more abundant happiness that is found only in a home of their own. By its aid they have laid by a comfortable sum to improve and maintain it and at the same time have learned the value of compulsory saving and the wonderful lesson of thrift.

As in the past we have helped others, let us in the future come to your aid and establish for you a comfortable home in the beautiful, historic old town of WEYMOUTH.

THE WEYMOUTH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

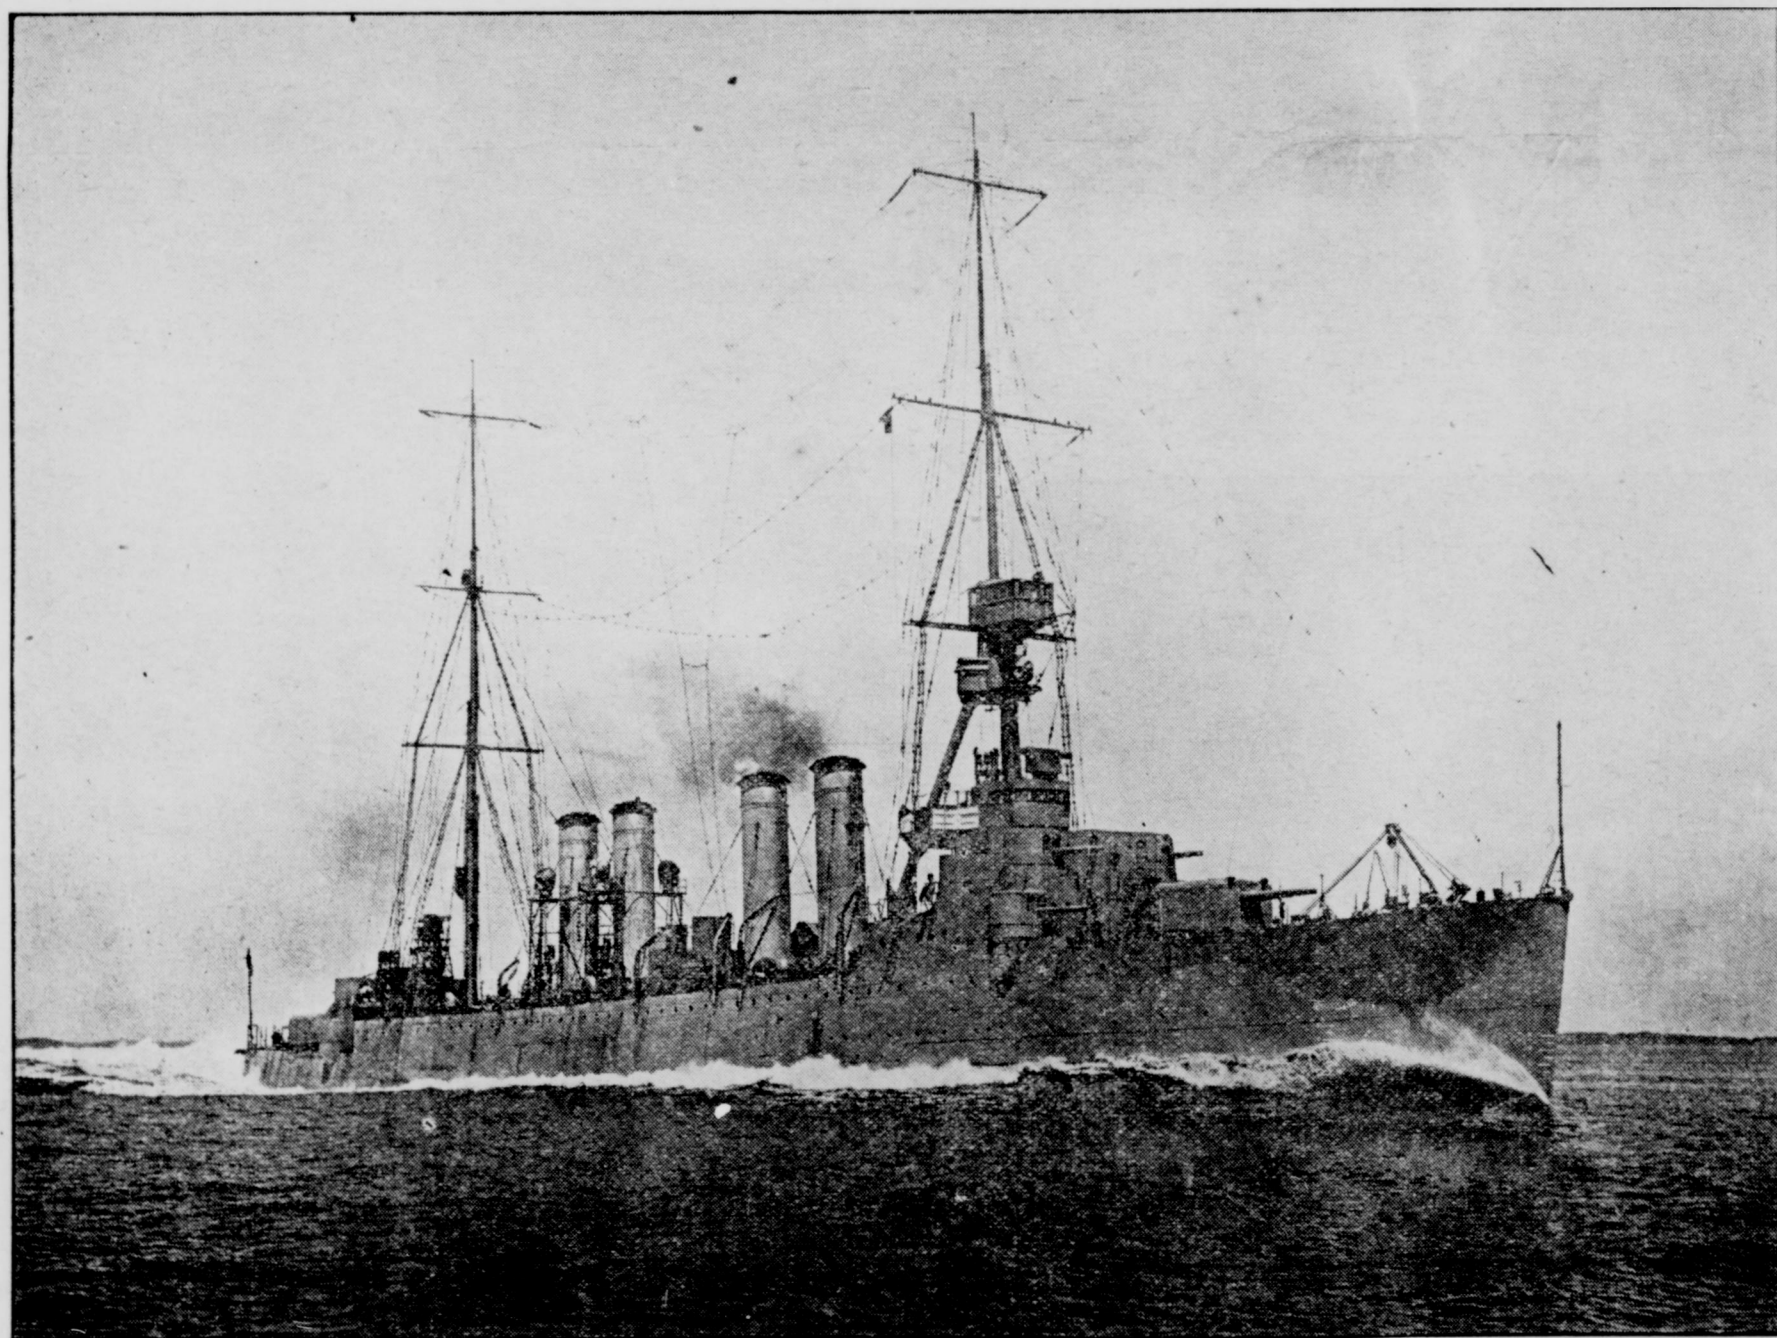

On March 22, 1879, a meeting of a few persons was held at the office of Elias Richards, Weymouth, to talk over the forming of an Historical Society. This meeting called a larger one, which was held in the same place March 29, 1879. At this meeting a committee was chosen to prepare a constitution and bylaws. On April 12, 1879, another meeting was held at the office of Mr. Richards and the constitution was accepted and the society organized under the name of the Weymouth Historical Society. The following officers were elected: president—Elias Richards, vice-president—John J. Loud, recording secretary—Gilbert Nash, corresponding secretary—Anson Titus, treasurer—William H. Clapp, librarian—Samuel W. Reed. Meetings were held regularly once a month at the office of Elias Richards and a large number joined the society.

At the annual meeting held January 3, 1880, Miss Carrie A. Blanchard was elected librarian, and on April 7, 1880, the meeting was held in the rooms of the Tufts Library, and the meetings were afterwards held in the Tufts Library.

At the annual meeting held January 7, 1885, Mr. John J. Loud was elected president, Mr. Richards having resigned and Herbert A. Newton was elected vice-president.

At the annual meeting in 1886, Mr. Charles T. Crane was elected treasurer and Samuel W. Reed secretary. The officers remained the same, except Rev. William Hyde succeeded Mr. Reed as secretary, Francis Cowing became treasurer, and after him Walter L. Bates.

When John J. Loud died, Mr. Howard H. Joy was elected president. A great amount of work in historical lines has been accomplished by the society as can be seen by the many publications issued by it; as for instance, Vols. I, II, and III, concerning the History of Weymouth. It may also be said that the celebration of the 300th anniversary is largely due to the Weymouth Historical Society. The meetings were held in the Tufts Library until it became difficult to get a quorum, and then the meetings were held at the Fog Library in South Weymouth.

In addition to its facilities for actual ship construction, the organization has embodied in it a Ship Repair Department, drawn from the various Yard Departments, of which there are 52, each with its own Foreman and organization. These Departments comprise Structural and Fabricating Hull, Machine and Ship Machine, Pipe, Plumbing and Copper, Boiler, Sheet Metal, Blacksmith, Anglesmith, Carpenter, Joiner, Brass foundry, Electrical, Rigger, etc.

The management of this Plant has direct charge of Simpson's Dry Dock at East Boston, one of the oldest on the coast, the first dry dock having been built in 1853. Three years later the dry dock was purchased by James Simpson, who re-established Simpson's Patent Dry Dock Company. Before the American Civil War, this dry dock was busy with repair work on clipper ships, and during the war, much repair work on Naval vessels was performed.

Due to the growth of this business, two other dry docks have been built, so that at present the docking facilities include one dock 455 feet long by 81 feet wide; one 256 feet long by 67 feet wide; and a small dock especially suited for tugs, fishing vessels and other small craft, 164 feet in length by 44 feet wide. Equipment for doing repair work has been added to the Plant as it has been developed. Recently a new power and pump house was built, also a modern machine shop. Other shops include a boiler shop, paint shop, carpenter shop, and blacksmith shop. The Company is to erect this spring a new shop and stores building and new traveling cranes, and will also install many other modern improvements.

The floating dry dock at the Fore River Plant was completed in February, 1921. It is of the Donnelly type, with a lifting capacity of 10,000 tons, and consists of ten pontoons, 116 feet by 41 feet by 13 feet, of timber construction, with steel wing walls running rigidly full length. The dock is operated by twenty centrifugal pumps, motor driven, from a control house, tanks, and also the ballast, boiler, and engine room tanks and the pump rooms, which had been floated by oil so that they required cleaning also. Six days of continuous work day and night were necessary to put the ship in shape so that the hull could start, during which time tons of oil were removed in barrels.

A survey of the ship's bottom showed that 25 bottom plates had to be renewed, and 29 of the bottom shell plates had to be removed, faired and replaced. This included practically every plate on the ship's bottom. Every keel plate was removed, making it necessary to reblock the ship several times. In addition all frames and bulkheads had to be cut out, and renewed or patched or faired, but in thirteen days after docking, all plates were removed and the first new plate erected. Twenty-four days after the ship was originally docked, she was undocked, every compartment on the ship once more tight, and all repair work completed ready to sail.

The Steamer "Calvin Austin" recently met with an unusual type of accident, in which, by grounding, or striking some submerged object, the rudder and part of the stern frame were carried away. In a case like this, it is necessary to have a pattern made, and get a new casting with all possible speed. The patterns for this frame were made in three days, and the casting delivered at the dock in three weeks. Approximately two weeks after the receipt of the casting, the new rudder and stern frame were installed on the ship.

Another class of work not common, is replacing the engines in a ship. In the case of the "J. E. O'Neill", the original engine was removed entirely with all of the auxiliaries, including exhaust trunk main condenser overboard discharge piping, lubricating oil pumps, main turbine and gears, lubricating oil coolers and filters, thrust block, main air pumps, main and auxiliary feed pumps, feed and filter tank, evaporators, bilge and ballast pumps, with all foundations and piping, engine room gratings, ladders, skylights etc., and the main and auxiliary foundations were rebuilt to a new arrangement.

Scenes of Great Activity at New Weymouth Station of the Edison Electrical Illuminating Company

DEVELOPMENT NOW IN PROGRESS

There is not today in all New England a busier place than the site of the new station of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company at New Downer's Landing on the Weymouth Fore River. Those who have known the place for many years, and who have visited it when it was a pleasure resort, would not recognize it today. Old landmarks have disappeared. The forest-clad hill and the wooded point have undergone changes that have deprived the once beautiful place of every feature that made it attractive for picnics. The grove has practically all disappeared, and what few trees are left will soon be felled and their stumps dug out and cast into the fore-bay as filling to make of what was once tide-flats firm and solid ground that will be covered in due course of time with the buildings and appurtenances of the great light and power station that is to be erected there.

The sandhill upon which the old dance hall stands is being rapidly cut away by steam shovels and the earth thus excavated removed to fill the low flats to the required grade. There are at present five steam shovels thus employed, and the amount of earth handled by them in the course of a day is astonishing, when compared with the amount that could be removed by human agency.

The tract of land purchased by the Edison Electric Illuminating Company for the purposes of its great lighting station includes forty acres of land that is being rapidly changed in topographical features from a pleasure resort to that of the yard of a great manufacturing industry. The grade has been established at sixteen feet above mean low water, and to bring the tract to the required level huge steam shovels are cutting down the elevations and gigantic dredgers are digging away at the bottom of the harbor, and all are depositing the excavated material within prescribed limits to fill the low places to the required level.

The scene is one of intense activity. Pile drivers are at work driving down the creosoted poles and steel sheet piling of the coffer-dams, necessary to keep back the sand and water during the construction of foundations. Tractors are crawling about in all directions, looking for all the world like huge turtles, dragging poles, stone-boats and timber to required locations. Derricks are swinging steel, iron, and heavy timbers into place and the noise of the pile-drivers, and the steady hum of activity pervades the atmosphere of the whole place.

Scattered about at convenient locations are numerous buildings for the storage of tools, offices, service stations, shops and all the necessary requirements of this great undertaking.

Today, as one passes by this busy place, he sees a long row of creosoted piling extending far out and beyond low water mark; from the highway bridge, parallel with the channel for a distance of 1400 feet, then turning a right angle to the shore. This is the initial work in the construction of a bulkhead that will be filled with earth from the high land and dredgings from the harbor to provide storage for 300,000 tons of coal.

The piling is creosoted southern yellow pine, as is also all the material used in piling, sheathing and decking. This timber was brought from the South in five schooners that were either wholly or partially loaded with materials for use in this great coal-storage plant. After the sheathing has been secured to the face of the piling dredgers will excavate the bed of the harbor in front of the 600-foot wharf to such a depth as to accommodate a 10,000-ton coal boat, and apparatus will be provided to unload it within twenty-four hours.

The material for filling this wharf will be handled by a 20-inch suction dredge, pumping 3000 cubic yards of material per day. Such a dredge is now in operation above the bridge, and between the works and the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. To the uninitiated this dredge is a wonderful piece of machinery. It has a revolving cutter that stirs up the earth and marine material, which is then sucked up by the pump and forced through a 20-inch pipe to whatever point desired. Sections of the bay to the right of the roadway are now being filled in this manner.

In the execution of this gigantic fill it will be necessary to handle 300,000 cubic yards of material, all pumped from the harbor, besides 100,000 cubic yards of earth which will be taken from the hill on the point known as Lovell's Grove, which has been cut down to but a few feet above high tide, involving the handling of about 100,000 yards of material, much of which, together with considerable dredge material has been used in filling what was once tide flats surrounding the old grove, once a picnic ground for Sunday Schools and other occasions of a worthy nature, but which gradually changed its dignified character until its depreciation became rapid.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company is now converting this once attractive resort into one of great usefulness to the people of Weymouth and all Greater Boston.

The steam-shovel work is being done by Jeremiah Sullivan of Cambridge. The bulkhead is being constructed by Aberthaw Construction Company of Boston, sub-contractors.

The concrete plant will mix 30,000 cubic yards of concrete for floors, walls, etc. The sand and gravel used in the mixing of the concrete will be brought from Scituate by barges. These materials will be handled to concrete bins, over the mixer, by belt conveyors. After mixing it will be carried to proper locations by chutes.

About 1,500,000 feet board measure of lumber will be required in the construction of concrete forms, scaffolds, runways etc.

This large quantity of lumber requires a well-equipped saw mill, containing various kinds of saws and planers.

To care for equipment and manufacture special fixtures entering into the permanent building requires a machine shop with regular lathes, drill and shaper equipment, bolt and pipe-threading machines, and blacksmith shop. Steam for hoisting, pile-driving and general purposes is supplied by a central boiler plant having 300 boiler horse power.

The organization includes complete facilities for purchasing, accounting, time-keeping and engineering.

THE EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY

Only forty years ago the electrical industry was in its infancy. Its progress at first was slow but of late years it has been increasing with ever greater rapidity so that today its growth is limited only by the ability of the manufacturers to turn out the necessary machinery. Figures prepared by the United States Census Bureau indicate that the electric light and power industry will be asked to provide as much power in the next seven years as has been produced in all the past forty years since the first central power station was established.

In accordance with this ever increasing demand for power the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, Mass., as indicated by an interview with its president, Mr. C. L. Edgar, has begun the construction of a plant which will include the very latest developments in power station design in order to effect economies possible in the development of electricity from coal.

Electricity a Modern Convenience

The Edison Illuminating Company of Boston, whose present capitaliza-

THE NECK OF LAND ABOVE THE BRIDGE IS THE SITE OF THE EDISON STATION, AS VIEWED FROM QUINCY

In such a gigantic undertaking, and particularly one of so hazardous a nature, serious and perhaps fatal accidents are liable to occur. To meet the emergency there has been prepared a fully equipped first-aid room with an experienced man in attendance ready at all times to administer first-aid to such as may be unfortunate enough to meet with accident.

The company has a water system of its own; so the draught upon the Weymouth water supply will not be excessive. Water is taken partly from the Weymouth system and partly from driven wells.

An electric sub-station has been constructed to supply light and power for the construction work; power being purchased from the Weymouth Light & Power Company; 13,800 volts are stepped down to 2300 volts.

tion is more than $27,000,000, was organized thirty-eight years ago with a capital of $100,000, which included the payment of $35,000 to the Edison Electric Light Company, the parent company, for license rights under the Edison patents. These rights entitled the company to use the system and apparatus including the first incandescent lamps of commercial value, perfected by Thomas A. Edison.

The first station was put in service in February, 1886, with the Bijou theatre as its first customer. It is an interesting fact that Mr. Edison personally officiated at the station during the evening of this date. Seated beside the generator rheostat, he regulated the voltage of the current used at the theatre, a signal bell being used as a warning when any sudden change in load was contemplated.

This station in Boston was one of the first stations in the world to supply any considerable amount of electricity for motive power. Previous to this time there is no record of more than a few motors being operated from a single plant, while the Boston station, in the latter part of 1887, was supplying current for ninety-two motors with an aggregate of 225 Kw.

New Station at Weymouth

The company has just installed the last 30,000 Kw. unit at its L Street Station in South Boston. This brings that plant up to 196,000 Kw. generating capacity and so fills it that further expansion is not possible at this site without making radical changes. For this reason it was decided to build an entirely new plant with an ultimate capacity of more than 300,000 Kw. to provide for future growth.

After a careful examination of all the available sites a location was chosen opposite the Fore River Shipbuilding Yards on the Fore River at Weymouth because of its strategic position both as to fuel delivery and power distribution.

Situated wholly outside of the city limits of Boston and its congested districts, where high voltages are restricted, the power will leave the plant on high tension lines. These will encircle the city with a trunk line supply from which the radiating lines of the existing system will distribute the power at a reduced voltage.

The delivery of coal to the plant is made easy as it is reached by a channel unobstructed by bridges, and with a depth sufficient to float the largest battleships launched at the Fore River Shipbuilding Yards. For this reason it will be possible to send coal from Newport News by ship or ocean-going barge and to unload it directly into the storage pile, where it will be possible to build up a reserve supply of 300,000 tons. In addition to convenient water transportation it may be served by a short spur from the South Shore branch of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

A Large Industrial Center

The company is at present supplying Weymouth and the adjacent city of Quincy with their electrical energy and the main cables which pass by the new site will conveniently serve as an initial tie line between the new plant and the L Street Station eight miles distant. It will also be easy to take energy from this plant for any electrification scheme of the steam railways or to tie into the proposed superpower system recommended by W. S. Murray in his report on the subject to the United States Government.

The locality gives every indication of rapidly becoming a large industrial center as it is the nearest point to the business center of Boston, from the south, where deep-water vessels can conveniently dock. It has already attracted many large companies such as the refining plant of the New England Oil Company, the steam generating plant of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation and numerous others.

Big Boilers at Weymouth Plant

One of the especially interesting features in the design of the Weymouth plant is that one of the boilers is being built to generate steam at 1200-lb. pressure. In the early days of generating electricity from steam it was customary to drive the generators by means of reciprocating engines in which a pressure of not more than 100 to 150 lbs. of steam was used. This was gradually increased until since the advent of the turbine, steam pressures of from 300 to 350 lbs. are in common use.

The decision of the Edison Company to install one boiler to produce 1200 lb. pressure is a long step in advance, and the Company's engineers are confident that the results will amply justify this pioneer move in power plant design. This unusual pressure may, perhaps, be better understood when one realizes that the high speed passenger locomotive operates under a pressure of not more than 200 lbs. so that the high pressure turbine at the Weymouth plant will be driven by steam with six times the expansive force used in the locomotive that pulls the 20th Century Limited.

The steam from the one boiler which will produce the higher pressure will first operate a turbine especially designed for its use and after exhausting it will still be high enough in pressure to mingle with the steam from the other boilers, and will be used in the turbines operating at 350 lbs. The work is under the direct supervision of Mr. I. E. Moulthrop of the Edison Company, and Stone & Webster, Inc., of Boston has been engaged to design and build the plant in collaboration with the company's engineers.

THE EDISON STATION IS IN THE FOREGROUND NEARLY SURROUNDED BY WATER AS VIEWED FROM WEYMOUTH, LOOKING TOWARD SHIP YARD

ORGANIZATION

The purpose is to produce a power station, and to furnish light and power to all Eastern Massachusetts covered by the Edison lines, and thus the job requires highly skilled men and elaborate equipment.

The various suction and dipper dredges are handling 2000 cubic yards each per day. This statement may not mean much to the uninitiated, but it does mean an enormous pile of earth.

The dredging is being done by the Gerrish Dredging Company and the Bay State Dredging Company.

The deepest foundations will be thirty feet below mean high tide, involving the use of many tons of interlocking steel sheet piling to make tight coffer dams, inside of which concrete foundations and tunnels will be constructed. The tunnels are for the purpose of furnishing water for condensing steam.

Mr. F. D. Knight, the engineer in charge of constructing this mammoth electric illuminating and power plant, has had a wide experience in this line of work, and has had charge of the construction of steam power stations in nearly all parts of the United States. He is a New England man, a native of Limerick, Maine, and a graduate of the University of Maine. Mr. Knight has purchased a home on Webb street, at Weymouth Landing, and is now a citizen of Weymouth.

Located on the site of one of the oldest shipyards in the country, the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., is well known as one of the foremost shipbuilding centers of America.

The vessels built at this yard since its beginning have included craft of practically every type, ranging in size from small steam fishing trawlers to some of the finest modern freighters, and from submarines for many navies to the largest modern battleships. Curtis marine turbines, marine reciprocating engines, and water tube boilers constitute some of the products of the Fore River shops.

COMPLETE SHIP REPAIR FACILITIES

With the completion of its new 10,000-ton floating dry dock (the largest floating dock between Halifax and New York) and the subsequent purchase of the Simpson Dry Dock Plant at East Boston, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., through these docking facilities, together with its large equipment of Machine, Engine, Turbine and Boiler Shops, can now take care of any kind of repairs to vessels or machinery.

The many years' experience of both the Fore River and Simpson Dry Dock Plants, backed by the extensive resources of the Bethlehem organization, are a guarantee of one hundred percent efficiency and service.

Record Breaking Class
at High School

The Class of 1924 will probably have a larger hall in the new High school building than the Class of 1923 had this year, and will thereby be able to entertain more friends. This year, as in recent years, the hall was taxed to its capacity, and many fond relatives were not permitted to be present at the graduating exercises held yesterday in High school hall.

The Class of 1923 broke the record with seventy graduates, of whom 46 were young ladies and 24 young men. The class colors, green and gold, were prettily used to decorate the hall and the class motto "Laborare est vincere" was prominently displayed.

Musical numbers predominated in the program, but there were the usual salutatory address by Miss Barbara Allen, and valedictory address by Miss Doris B. Garey. James F. Calderwood the musical director of the public schools, has wonderful success with the chorus, and always maintains a good orchestra. This year there were also two soprano solos, a violin solo, and a cornet solo. The program was as follows:

Processional
Invocation Rev. Earl E. Story
Star-Spangled Banner
Overture High School Orchestra
Chorus—"Uncle Moon" (Scott) School
Salutatory Address—"Scenes in the Life of Weymouth" Barbara Allen Soprano Solo—"I know where a garden grows" (Densmore)

Florence A. McKenzie
Violin Solo—"Romance" from Second Concerto in D Minor (Wienlawski)
Mary J. Keith
Cornet Solo—"Polka Militaire" (Denish)
John J. Cipullo
Soprano Solo—"If God left only you" (Brahe)
Muriel E. Hanson
Valedictory Address—"The Interpreter" Doris B. Garey
Chorus—"The Kilties' March" (Marchison)

Following the exercises the members of the Class of 1923 enjoyed a banquet with teachers only as guests. The class history was read by Marion R. Loud and Raymond P. Sherman. Equally as interesting was the class prophecy given by Emma A. Arbuckle, Catherine I. Barnes, and Gordon H. Rauch.

At 7.45 there was another large attendance of friends for the class play, when the one-act High school comedy "The Queen of Hearts" was admirably presented by the following cast:

Geraldine Bruce, a senior Marjorie T. Worster
Dolly Hilton, her cousin, a freshman Lesley Lovell
Marion Kendrick, a senior
E. Gladys Price
Fitzhugh Chauncey, an instructor at Weston
Herman L. Allen

The words for the class ode were written by Florence A. Salisbury and the music was by Herman L. Allen. "Laborare est vincere"

The work of the Weymouth police in Washington Square last Saturday night is to be commended. The jam of people listening to the concert, many machines, and frequent street cars kept all alert and busy and yet not an accident is recorded. Good work, men!

Street Railway Vote
Ratified 430 to 366

Only two of the seven precincts of the town were against the ratification of the street railway vote of the Town Meeting Members. The vote on ratification was:

YES	430
NO	366

As will be seen by the vote below both the East Weymouth precincts were against ratification 63 to 58, and 97 to 44. In the North Weymouth precinct the vote was a tie, and in Precinct 4 the yes majority was only 1

	Yes	No
Precinct 1	32	32
Precinct 2	58	63
Precinct 3	100	75
Precinct 4	52	51
Precinct 5	95	22
Precinct 6	44	97
Precinct 7	49	26

Total 430 366
The largest vote against ratification was in the South Weymouth precincts Weymouth-Quincy line.

where the bus line is giving excellent service.

Probably many did not understand how to vote, or how to accomplish what they wanted. Perhaps they voted "Yes" because they wanted street cars. The question upon which the vote was taken is printed below:

"Shall the town RATIFY the action of the Representative Town Meeting held on May 31, 1923, voting NO on the following motion?"

"That the town raise and appropriate a sum not exceeding $3750, for the purpose of meeting one-half the actual deficit incurred by the Eastern Mass. St. Ry. Co. during the nine months period ending February 29, 1924, for maintaining passenger transportation on the streets of this town, provided that the Transportation Committee are able to arrange with the Trustees of the Eastern Mass. St. Railway Co. that this town shall receive an equitable credit for its share of the revenue received on the East Weymouth-Quincy line."

Witness Great Spectacle

In commemoration of the Three Hundredth Anniversary of the SETTLEMENT OF WEYMOUTH and the encounter of the Settlers under Myles Standish with the Indians in March, 1623 when the Indian Chiefs Pecksuot and Wituwaumet were killed, thereby averting serious disaster to the Colonies. This tablet placed in 1923 by the Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

As a permanent memorial of the settlement of Weymouth, and the brilliant observance of her 300th anniversary, there stands today on the summit of Great Hill, a boulder with the above inscription. It was a grand spectacle and a notable occasion last Saturday afternoon, June 16, 1923,—when this boulder was unveiled by Mrs. William H. Taft, a former mistress of the White House at Washington, and the wife of the present Chief Justice of the United States.

As viewed from Wessagusset Beach, from Fort Point, from the Hingham road, and other vantage points, the gathering on the summit of Great Hill was a scene long to be remembered,—the flags, the different colored uniforms of the military, the navy and the marines, the bands, the school girls in white, the gayly decorated bicycles, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, and thousands of people assembled.

Sacred Heart School Awarded First Prize

The time was very limited in which to make an exhibit of floats, but some great work was done and the result surprised everybody. The number of entries was large and all were beautifully decorated. It was no easy task for the judges to award the prizes, but they were disinterested persons and awarded the prizes as follows:

For the best school participation—Sacred Heart school, first; Hunt School, second

For best Boy or Girl Scouts or Campfire Girls—Troop 1 of Weymouth, first prize

For best appearing marching club or society—The American Legion, first

For the best appearing patriotic society—Susannah Tufts Chapter, D. A. R. first

For best floats—Telephone operators, first; Wessagusset Social club, second; Abigail Adams Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F., third

The Judges were: Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the State Federation of Women's clubs; Lieut. Col. Walter C. Sweeney, chief of staff at the U. S. Army Base at South Boston and Patrick F. Campbell, headmaster of the Boston Latin school.

Some Notable Exhibits of Antique Relics

The decorations at Weymouth were beautiful, manifesting a desire upon the part of the citizens to make this Tercentenary a memorable occasion in the history of the town. Both business and residential property was aflame with the national colors, and the show windows of the merchants were picture houses of the window dresser's art.

In the window of the Hobart hardware store was a collection of antiques, including coins of American and foreign mintage, representing Great Britain, France, Spain, Canada, Germany, and a Hibernian coin of 1723, just 200 years old. There were also tokens of the colonial and early days of the republic, and an enclosed postage stamp bearing date of 1860. There were also several specimens of Confederate currency, and an old paper dollar of the State of Massachusetts Bay, "good for one Spanish milled dollar", and bearing date of 1786. A pocketbook that showed age, and which once belonged to William Smith, father of Abigail Adams, and bearing the name of "William Smith" and the date "Weymouth 1740" in gold letters.

The new building of the Weymouth Savings Bank was beautiful in its decorations.

Hunt Market was one of the chief attractions. Both show windows were museums of antiquities. The right window contained conch shells, coral, a pair of child's peg shoes 100 years old, two pictures of Washington Square taken forty and fifty years ago, an old-fashioned and much worn cradle that showed evidence of great age, wooden paddle for removing dishes from the old-fashioned brick oven and an iron ash shovel for use about the oven and fireplace, a single-barrel pistol owned by Mr. Rideout and a muzzle-loading revolver owned by George Meyer, also a paring machine and an old mortar and pestle; a sword-cane owned by Charles Pierce, a long handled cooking dish for fireplace use, the property of Mr. Myers and several jugs and bottles and a coffee roaster, a whale oil stove for heating baby's milk, a foot-warmer owned by Mrs. Hunt five generations ago. A curious alcohol compass that formerly guided some ancient mariner across the seas. There were whale oil lanterns and an ancient wine gourd decanter used in the early days of the colonies. Another interesting relic was a pylon upon which Abigail Smith rode before she was Mrs. Adams. It belonged to the Smith family of North Weymouth. An old bellows reminded the old ladies of the days when they were obliged to blow the coals upon the hearth to fan them into a flame in order to make a fire to cook the breakfast for the family. Not the least among the relics of bygone days was a hand-made plow made and used by Rev. James Perkins, one of the first pastors of the old Union church, and which was drawn by a slave. The plow was loaned by Mrs. C. G. Shepherd. There were two pairs of tongs and a collection of coins that were buried beneath the "Liberty Pole" in Washington Square when the pole was set up in 1861. These coins were dug up when the pole was removed. Some of the coins date back to the year 1800. Another article of interest was an old sealskin covered chest owned by Mr. Myers.

The opposite window was devoted to articles of household use, prominent among which was a flax wheel with all its equipment, heckles, cards, etc. There were a number of ancient documents, one of which reads: "Eli Hayden Dr. Samuel Spear, 1783, March 7. To carting seven barrels of rum to North Hartford from Boston and bringing back one tun of flower, 17 pounds 6 shillings 8 pence. To carting seven barrels of rum from Hartford to New Providence and bringing back one tun flower, 65 mills at 9 pounds, fifteen shillings. Cost of waiting for your trunk you promised to pay at West Springfield, 18 shillings. To carting eight barrels of flower eighteen miles at 1-6, 7 shillings, ditto six barrels, 8 shillings."

Then followed the receipt "Briantree, June 6, 1785, then received of David Holbrook the above and in be half of Eli Hayden for myself and W. Nathaniel and in full of oil for more trading to this day. Samuel Spear." On the reverse side of the document was another similar account, indicating that paper was a scarce article in those days.

Another document: "Briantree, May 26th day 1779. Holbrook, Sir; Holbrook six pounds, it being in full for one month's wages advanced on board the sloop 'Repetition' to Conventiente for Eliphazer Weston."

Please deliver to Benjamin Stetson three bars of iron that we had aside

Another document: "Briantree, May 26th day 1779. Holbrook, Sir; for him and in so doing you will oblige your humble servant Joseph Spear."

The documents and the pictures of Washington Square are the property of Warren Nadel.

There was a candle mould and a pair of hand-lasted and hand-stitched baby shoes loaned by Mrs. Charles Guerton of Congress street.

There were interesting exhibits in other windows, but the one in the show windows of Hunt's Market was a museum of antiquities seldom seen outside of a regular museum.

We are taking this opportunity to thank you for your hearty co-operation and assistance in making the Tercentenary Anniversary number of the WEYMOUTH GAZETTE-TRANSCRIPT the splendid success it was.

The big edition is already completely exhausted, and the words of praise have been many.

Always at your Service,

DELPHI TEMPLE, NO. 59, ORDER OF PYTHIAN SISTERS

Delphi Temple, No. 59, Order of Pythian Sisters, was organized March 25, 1907, with a membership of 49 sisters and 30 brothers. The first officers to be installed consisted of the following:

P. C.—Lydia Richards
M. E. C.—Annie E. Jordan
E. S.—Elvina P. Smith
E. J.—Jeanette Dexheimer
M. of T.—Edith Inkley
M. of F.—Elizabeth S. Hall
M. of R. and C.—Tina Hyland
P. of T.—Fannie Walsh
G. of O. T.—J. Gertrude Newcomb

During the past few years we have initiated seventy new members with prospects of seventy more now in view.

In the years of 1921 and 1922 we had a number of good times including our anniversaries and a rollicking supper which was largely attended.

In October of 1922 we held a two-nights fair in Lincoln hall, Weymouth. The first night's entertainment was in charge of Miss Hazel Hollis and was surely a success as was the second night's drama in charge of Jessie Our and entitled "Honeymoon Flats" all parts being taken by members of the lodge. All kinds of fancy and useful articles were sold and with the help of the Knights of Pythias a goodly sum was realized. We are to make this event an annual affair and are working hard now for our fair in the fall.

In January our officers for the year were installed in a very pleasing manner, Sister Emma Perkins, deputy, presiding.

Drucilla Davis as Most Excellent Chief is doing very good work and Mabel Tisdale, Senior; Elsie Nelson, Junior, it seems as if our next few years would be as successful as the past.

In April we celebrated our anniversary with a chicken supper, a very pleasing entertainment and dance. It was a wonderful time, due largely to our usual live committee: Evelyn Brown, Lulu Murphy and Gladys Dexheimer.

On May 21 this year we tendered a reception to our charter members. We now have 29 active charter members, 19 of whom were present. Our Sister Jeanette Dexheimer was not able to be with us, due to her recent illness. Our May social committee, Mary Hudson chairman, took charge of the affair. Our hall was very prettily decorated in the lodge colors, and a very pleasing entertainment provided, followed by refreshments. We had as our guests Grand Guard Nellie Chase, Grand Manager Emma Perkins, who is also our deputy, and the pleasure of seeing Sister Mary Sampson of North Weymouth, a charter member, but not able to be with us very often. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all and our charter members much pleased with the respect shown them on our first charter members reception.

We have a lively set of officers and a full degree team of sixteen members and captain which adds to the beauty of our work, and shows the untiring efforts of our degree master, George E. Ludden. We hope to continue our good work and have every chance of being much bigger organization than we are now.

Some Facts and Comments About Souvenir Gazette

The Tercentenary edition of the Weymouth Gazette was a success from every angle, and when we consider the short time permitted for the preparation of this great edition of forty pages, and the facilities of the usual town weekly newspaper office, of which ours is no exception, this edition is a credit to the town and the people of Weymouth who, through their loyal support, made the great Tercentenary edition possible. Never before in the history of Weymouth has there been published within its corporate limits a newspaper of such magnitude, and to the people who have made the undertaking possible we extend our deepest gratitude. The preparation of this special number required much labor and research, and while it might have been larger and better had there been more time to prepare it, we feel no little pride in the accomplishment, and we also feel that the citizens of Weymouth are also proud of the fact that they have within the town a publishing house capable of meeting an emergency equal to the publication of a forty-page paper within the short period permitted to gather and print such an edition.

Every unit of the editorial and mechanical force of the Gazette has been working to capacity and the result is a paper that will be preserved as a memorial of the proudest event in Weymouth's history. The paper is especially valuable as a work of reference, marking the three hundredth mile-post in the history of the second town in New England to be settled, and the first in America to be organized with a democratic form of government.

Weymouth set the pace for America, and as Weymouth did, so has every other town, city, and state in the United States, and the result is a great American democracy, the equal of which there is no other on earth.

Fellow citizens, we thank you one and all for your loyalty and the generous support you have given us in the preparation of this great and expensive edition which, without your support, would have been impossible.

FIGURES AND COMMENTS ON THE SOUVENIR

An edition of 4000 copies was printed and almost exhausted the next day. Forty reams of paper were required which weighed over a ton—2400 lbs. When folded and put in a pile, they would stand 560 in. high, or 46½ ft. The total presswork was over 40,000 requiring about fifty hours, yet the work week is only 48 hours.

The edition contained 116½ columns of news articles; enough to fill over twenty pages. It also contained 2468 inches of advertising, enough to fill 123½ columns. It was the big industries of the town that made possible the printing of a 40-page paper.

The high water mark in Gazette advertising in 1919 was 875 inches in a single issue. In 1920 it was 1076 inches. In 1921 it was 1276 inches, and in 1922 it was 1557 inches. The Souvenir went over 900 inches above high water mark.

One Grand Army veteran remarked that he intended to keep his Souvenir copy under lock and key; if he could not obtain another copy he would not part with his for $500.

The publisher was compelled to omit advertisements and historical articles, all ready to use, which would have filled ten more pages. If any person is inclined to criticize, he should remember that some things are impossible.

The cost of the white paper used in the edition was $168 f. o. b. Boston; to which should be added expressage and ink.

The presswork cost in the vicinity of $200, and the composition fully $300, to which should be added $200 paid advertising solicitors, and $200 for proof-reading, electric power, postage, wear and tear, and overhead charges, a total of over $1000, over 25 cents per copy.

The cost to mail single copies of forty pages is three cents; yet regular subscribers received their paper for less than 5 cents. Those who paid 10 cents did not pay one-half the cost.

This policy was designed to offset the smaller profit by increased volume of sales. It has proven most successful. For the value offered won nationwide recognition at once. Both the trade and the public clamored for it.

The Selz $Six is in every detail a standard, fine quality shoe for men; made of the finest materials by the most skilled workmen. It is good enough for any man to wear, no matter how big his pocketbook.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

Everyone is still talking about the exercises and the wonderful parade of last Saturday.

Everywhere one goes he can hear nothing but praise for the committee and those who took part in the parade and made it such a wonderful success.

Would it not be fine if something of that nature could be had every year and keep the good old town of Weymouth on the map.

Commander Stein wishes to thank the members of the Post for doing their part so well; most everyone knows that the Legion was awarded the prize for the best marching organization in Weymouth, which is quite some honor.

The members of the Post also wish to thank the Auxiliary for the trouble they went to in providing lunch for those who participated in the parade.

The executive committee of the Post held a meeting last evening at Commander Stein's chateau on Weymouth Back river. Arrangements for the mammoth field day which is to be held July 14 were discussed, and everything seems to be progressing wonderfully. As the field day is only three weeks away and there is so much work to be done, it is the duty of every member of the Post to get in touch with some member of the different committees and help them as much as possible so as to make it the largest and the best field day that was ever held in Weymouth.

COOLEST PLAY HOUSE IN NEW ENGLAND

To The Public

We have information we believe to be reliable that less than 600 operators voted at the strike poll of telephone operators at Chipman Hall, Tuesday, June 19.

There are approximately 6,000 operators in the Metropolitan Boston district. Over 90 per cent of them refrained from participation in this referendum.

If a strike is called, therefore, it will be with the expressed sanction of less than 10 per cent of the operating force in this area.

THE STUDEBAKER LIGHT-SIX TOURING CAR

A Real Achievement in Dollar-for-dollar Value

The thousands of Studebaker Light-Sixes in daily use are the best possible assurance of what may be expected next year—or several years hence—of the Light-Six you buy today.

For after all, the best way to judge a new motor car is by what it has done—how it has stood up in service—the satisfaction it has delivered.

We sincerely believe that the Light-Six Touring Car, with its improved all-steel body, is the sturdiest, handsomest, most comfortable, most dependable and economical low-priced car built.

The machining of all surfaces of the crankshaft and connecting rods, to which is largely due its practical absence of vibration, is a practice used by Studebaker exclusively on cars at this price and is found only on a few other cars whose selling prices are from three to ten times as high as the Light-Six.

The one-piece, rain-proof windshield with parking lights set in the base, is a joy to the driver—nothing to mar his view of the road ahead. Deep, fat cushions are upholstered in genuine leather. Curtains, bound on three sides by steel rods, open with the doors and provide closed car coziness in bad weather.

The most seasoned driver will find a new thrill in the smooth, quiet, steady performance of the Light-Six—and in its ease of handling, and in the way it performs in high gear at low speeds—eliminating constant gear shifting.

The name Studebaker has stood for high grade transportation, quality, value and integrity for 71 years.

Power to satisfy the most exacting owner

LAKEWOOD GROVE AND BIRCHES

The season started off with many new camps in process of construction and nearly all the last year's residents are back for the summer.

The Improvement Association has issued a small pamphlet telling of the work of 1922 and what is hoped to be done in 1923.

Dances are being held each Saturday evening with a four-piece orchestra composed of members. The dances are for members and their guests and even limiting it to those the hall is well filled each night. Whist parties will be held during the summer by the ladies.

Many other entertainments are planned for the season.

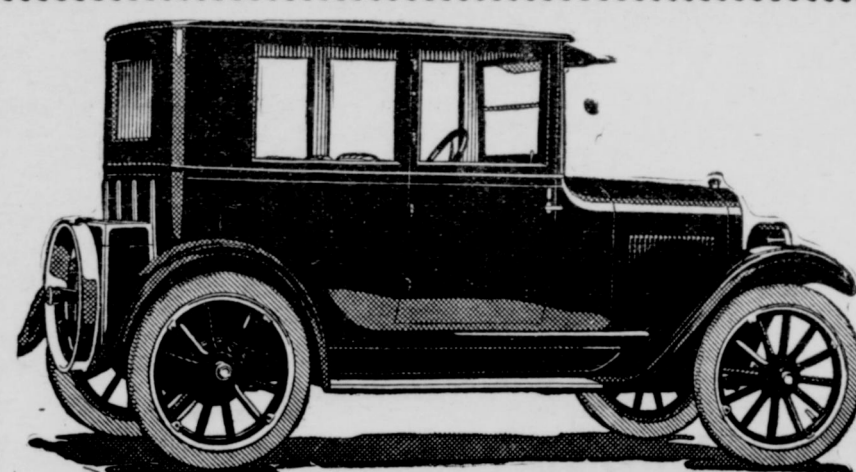

At a recent meeting it was voted to call the house "Birchcliff hall" and a committee was appointed to see that an appropriate sign was made. A member, whose wife proposed the name that was accepted, volunteered to pay the bill and the lady presented the bonds she purchased last fall to the Association in appreciation of the vote.

D. Arthur Brown, the "godfather" of the community, offered to supply the paint for the hall if white with green trimmings would be acceptable as this color would match the general paint scheme of the community. Paint was accepted and Mr. House, a member of the Association, and a painter, put in a bid for the work that was so remarkable that the Association would not accept it without an amendment in the form of a couple of bonds. If the gentleman makes all his bids for contracts the same he never need be without work. However, he says, he wanted to do something to help along the work and it seemed as if this would be a good way.

While the residents are not quite in the "L" Street class in the bathing line, still several have already got a regular tan from their dips in the lake. Mr. and Mrs. Billings are among the leaders. President Dr. Gardner is generally the first one to take a "dip".

Myron Dodge has the navy aloft again and we are now ready to meet all invasions from the water front. Between the navy and trying to reduce the running time from camp to Brockton he is busy man.

Speaking about clean-up and paint up, how about rake up, and after the rake up what do you do with the leaves. Can't burn 'em, can't get any one to haul them away. Just rake up in pile and let them blow around again. Then rake up. Regular continuous performance with lots of exercise.

FASHION SPONSORS WRAP-AROUND TYPE IN STREET COAT-ROCKS

A STYLE idea which occupies a conspicuous niche in fashion's hall of fame is the wrap-around coat-dress. Styled of the most elegant materials, with enrichment of embroidery, braiding and color superb, the spirit of luxury fairly radiates from this handsome garment.

Among other of its winning qualities, the wrap-around street dress has the gift of slenderizing the figure, for the straight, slim silhouette is its characteristic feature. Add to this that it is a frock ready at the moment to slip on, void of complicated fastenings, just a mere tying or buckling to one side and one readily understands why this garment is so popular.

THE model in the picture is light-weight duvelyn, a fabric which has made its reappearance this season. The upper portion is elaborately designed with gray braid. The squirrel collar is detachable.

In many instances the straight-line coat-dress is entirely all-over-trimmed in self-color. This type is built along simplest possible lines, departing from severely only when it comes to the huge ribbon tie at the left front hipline.

MILLINERY RESPONDS TO EVERY TYPE AND MOOD

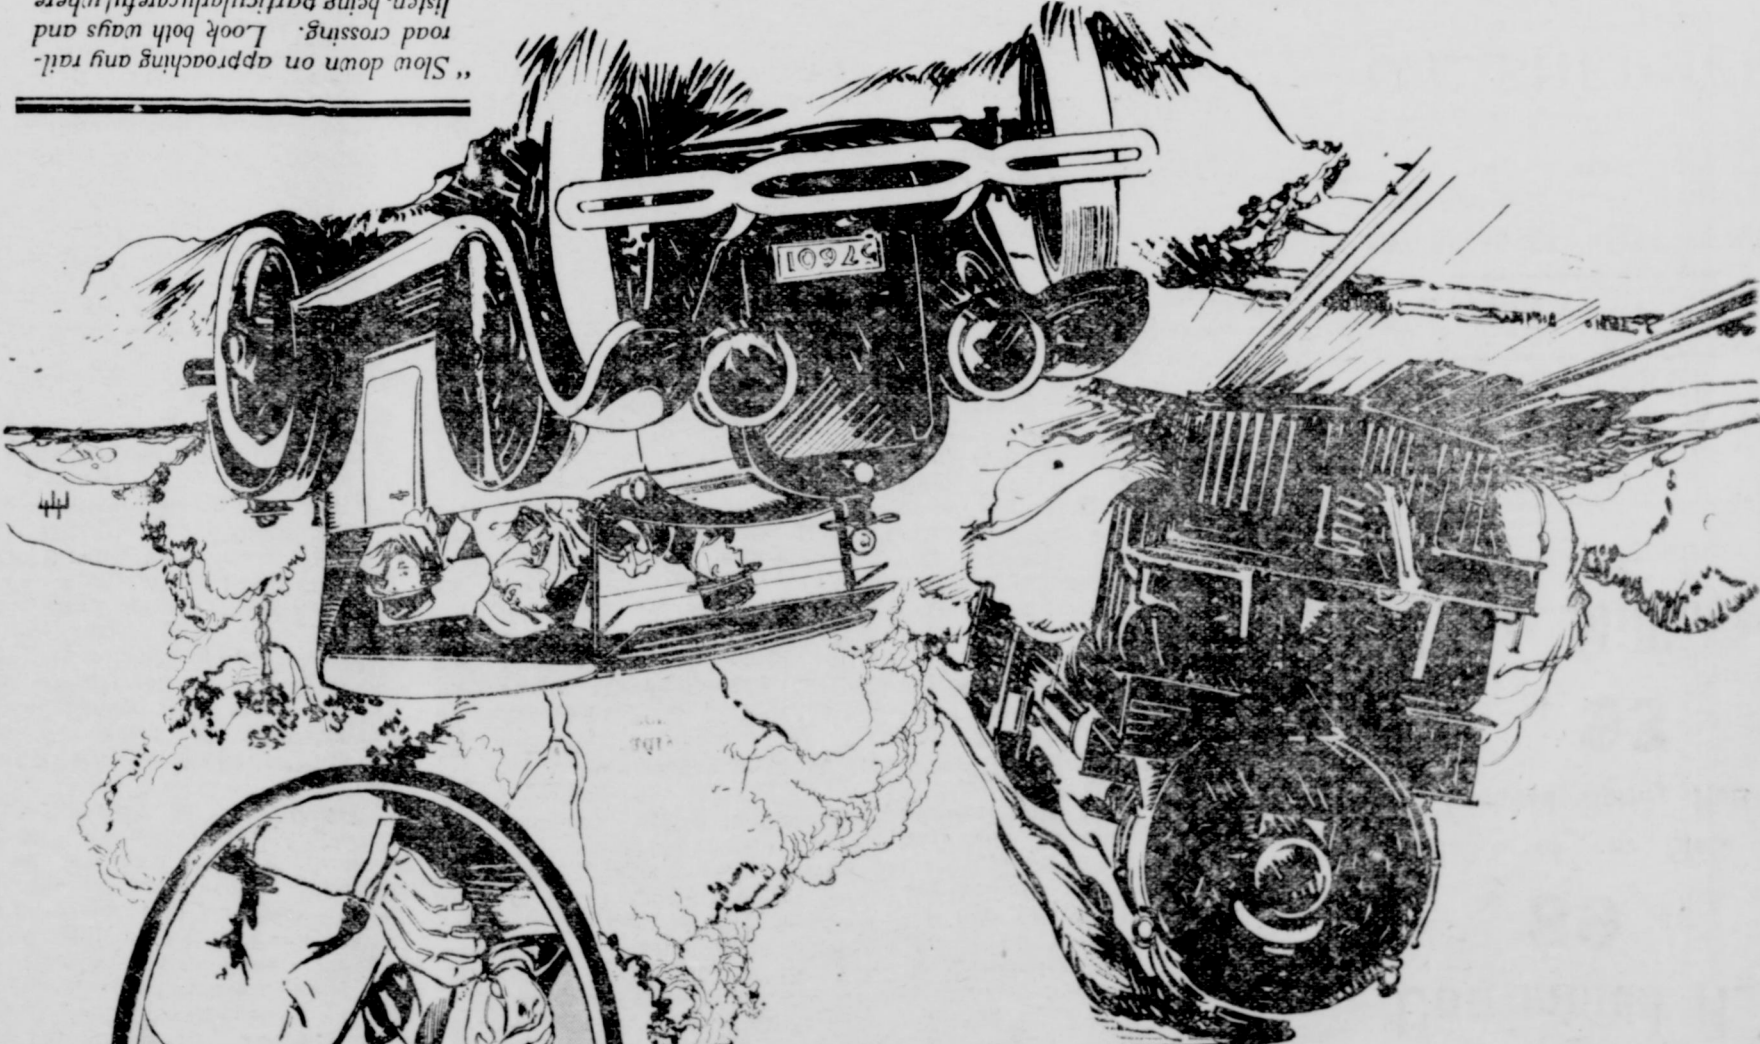

TO EVERY type and mood millinery responds most graciously this season. There are no arbitrary rules. Becomingness is the watchword. When one comes to think of it one's hat is wonderfully expressive of its wearer. Our coats and dresses we take as a matter of fact bought from the standpoint of serving the season through, but when it comes to hats, they answer to the caprice of the moment. In the collection of fashionable bonnety pictured herewith, a wide range of ideas is presented. The lace draped model is of oriental influence. There is no lessening of interest in lace, rather is it that lace appears in a more impressive way. Tiny straw hats with a pin or a cocarde of lace edging. Another charming item is ruffled ribbon, which is a very narrow sort in rainbow colorings. It is this dainty

The VETERAN, MOTORIST gives a few rules of the road

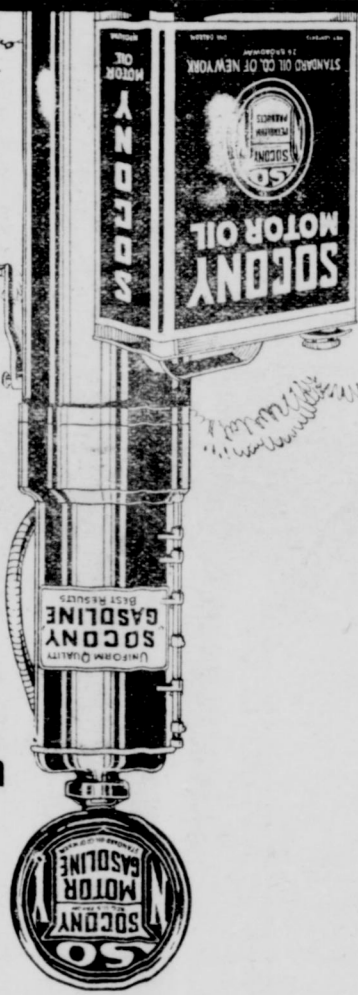

"WHY IS IT, I WONDER, that you still read about so many automobile accidents at railroad crossings? With the thousands of smashed cars and undertakers' bills caused this way, you'd suppose that every motorist would put on the old thinking cap when he spots a crossing.

"I saw a smash once, and that was enough for me. No more taking chances for Yours Truly after that, or 'hoping' there isn't a train coming. You can't absolutely trust anything but your own eyes to tell you whether the track is clear or not. The flagman may not be on duty when you happen along. The automatic signal may be out of order. The train may be coasting quietly down a grade toward the crossing. There are a dozen 'mays', and 'may not's', and 'ifs'.

"No street life's too short and sweet to take blind chances at grade crossings—when it's so simple and easy to make sure. My tip is: always assume there is a train coming. It is better to be wrong than to have your picture in next day's paper—"Victim of Auto Wreck."

PARADE NOTES

The squad of Weymouth police, headed by Sergeant Edward F. Butler made a good showing at the head of the parade last Saturday. Weymouth's finest marched with a good easy military gait and were there. There were no accidents of any kind during the parade; in fact the whole day was particularly free from trouble. Chief Pratt speaks highly of the conduct of all, and the new laws that make it possible to have safe, sane, and good celebrations. In past years the drunk list would have been long and noisy while it lasted. Saturday it was different, with no cases.

The nurses that followed the parade report they had nothing to do.

The colors carried by a mounted guard of the Weymouth Post, 79, A. L., looked fine. In this group was the national colors, the new official flag of Weymouth and others.

It took two prominent men of Weymouth, one a leading shoe man, the other a sailor to properly escort Judge Taft from Boston. This was the pleasant duty of Lt. M. F. Cate and William A. Hodges.

The Boston papers reported that Chief Pratt went to Boston, but the Chief was on the job bright and early and late right in Weymouth.

The police in Weymouth last Saturday was large, but the results are evidence of the excellent handling of the vast number of people and several thousand cars.

In the police work Chief Pratt was assisted by a squad of 23 men from Quincy, 12 state police, plain clothes men, and the Weymouth force out full strength.

At the unveiling of the tablet and flag raising on the top of Great Hill the flag was raised by the three ranking officers in the last three big wars that live in Weymouth: Major Bicknell, Major Swan, and Col. Baner.

The other exercises in order were:
1. Unveiling
2. Flag raising
3. Prayer by Rev. J. B. Holland
4. Address by Howard H. Joy
5. Address by Mr. Rotch
6. Acceptance by Park Commissioner Rea

Taft's Address at Clapp Memorial Field

To the thousands of citizens and guests from all parts of the commonwealth who gathered to celebrate the historic event, Chief Justice Taft brought a message of faith and encouragement—faith in the principles that stand out of the practice of all these New England colonies, and courage to recognize the strength with which the practice and teaching of religion enables a people to be useful to themselves and the world.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT

GOV. CHANNING COX

At the outset he touched the pride of Weymouth people, when upon introduction he said:

"My fellow citizens of Weymouth", which was greeted with applause. He said he felt honored to be invited to speak at Weymouth's 300th anniversary, and was glad it was recognized that he had a right to be here. Mr. Taft said in part:

"My father was a lover of genealogy and from early infancy I heard considerable about Capt. William Torrey, who settled in Weymouth in 1640, some 17 years after Capt. Gorges founded the town, then known as Wessagusset. He was a good deal of a man, too, in Weymouth, becoming one of its active leaders, represented it in the General Court and subsequently became the clerk of that body.

"My mother's name was Louise Maria Torrey, and it is through her that I claim the honor of being one of the celebrants of this anniversary. I have always had the impression that the first of my ancestors on my father's side, Robert Taft, also landed at Weymouth, somewhere about 1678, but I have not been able to authenticate this. What I do know is that Robert Taft settled at Braintree, which is near enough Weymouth to justify a neighborhood interest. The Tafts and the Torreys, or at least a branch of the Torreys, moved to Mendon, about forty miles from Boston, and 15 miles from the Rhode Island line. Robert Taft went early, about 1680.—The Torrey family later. There is a monument in Mendon bearing the names of the 34 men who founded Mendon, between 1660 and 1680. As I descended from 23 of them, I think I read my title clear to the claim of being of Massachusetts stock.

"I like to dwell on the history of Samuel Torrey, because though not in my direct line, he was of the family whence I am sprung, being the oldest son of Capt. William Torrey. He had a gift of prayer, and on one occasion he prayed two hours, and at the close there were indications that the congregation would be glad to have him continue. He was thrice called upon to deliver the election sermon, and twice was called to the presidency of Harvard College. He must have been a man of high character, broad learning, and great common sense, because he endeared himself to his people.

"My wife thought the Torreys a little better than the Tafts. Anyway I know where the Torreys came from, but not sure about where the Tafts came from; but they got together.

"The settlement of Wessagusset began as a commercial venture, but did not succeed because women were not included. Seems to me your settlement should go back to 1622, when the 'Episcopal party' came. The governor who intended to be the bishop, went home, and then it was a contest between clergymen.

Never Before Such a Parade in Weymouth

The arrival of Chief Justice Taft and other invited guests was delayed fully an hour, but it gave the people an opportunity to discover what a beautiful spot the town park on the summit of Great Hill really is, the cool, refreshing breezes and the extensive view of Boston harbor and the South Shore, Weymouth, Braintree, Quincy, and the Blue Hills. Concerts were given by the different bands and the school children under the direction of the popular director of music, James W. Calderwood, sang popular songs, and enjoyed the occasion.

Notable Guests Saluted

Early in the morning Chief of Police Pratt of Weymouth motored to Boston and called for Chief Justice Taft and Mrs. Taft and Gov. Cox's party at the Somerset Hotel. Escorted by members of the State patrol, the party, on reaching the Quincy line, was taken in charge by Chief of Police Goodhue of Quincy, who escorted them to the Weymouth line.

Chief Justice Taft left the party at Quincy and motored to Hough's Neck where he was a guest of the Quincy Yacht Club.

Governor Cox and party arrived on Weymouth soil on schedule time and were given a salute of seventeen guns by Battery C of Artillery. They proceeded to Wessagusset.

Chief Justice Taft was delayed, and did not reach the Wessagusset Yacht Club pier until 2.45, arriving on the admiral's barge from the Boston Navy Yard, landing near the spot where the original settlers stepped ashore. As the boat approached the landing stage a salute of 21 guns was fired by Battery C of the Artillery. The Chief Justice and his associates were first welcomed by Gen. Edwards and Gov. Cox, also Commodore Lincoln R. Boland, ex-Commodore Rufus O. Clark, Vice Commodore Robert J. Lyon, Past Commander Bryan Leonard of the American Legion, members of the reception committee of the town, and representatives of the press. Mr. Taft wore a straw hat, and was democratic in dress.

There was no opportunity for a reception at the clubhouse which was prettily decorated. The distinguished guests and party, immediately took autos for the summit of Great Hill with military escort.

The Unveiling on Great Hill

The Society of Colonial Wars of America had erected a boulder six feet high on Great Hill, and placed thereon the tablet quoted on page one, which commemorates the engagement with the Indians in 1623.

The exercises were opened by a brief address by H. H. Joy, the president of the Weymouth Historical Society, who referred to the fact that Weymouth was the second oldest town in New England, and the first town to adopt a local self government. He welcomed officials of the State and Nation. The sturdy band that came on the "Charity" and the "Swan" in 1623 found here hostile Indians. The latter planned to attack the settlers, but Myles Standish forestalled them.

Rev. Fr. John B. Holland offered an appropriate prayer, which was followed by an historical address by William Rotch, governor of the Society of Colonial Wars.

Mrs. Taft then unveiled the tablet, which was accepted by Francis W. Rea, chairman of the Park Commissioners. Rev. William Hyde of the Episcopal church offered the invocation. Then came a military flag raising of a new standard which was unfurled on the new 100-foot flagpole. It was raised by Col. Bauer and Major Swan. The Star Spangled Banner was played by the band, and sung by the school children and all.

Assembly was sounded and the next event was the parade.

Parade of 4000 or more

Never before was there such a grand parade in Weymouth. It was headed by military, naval, and marine companies with their bands, and included the military, hereditary, patriotic, and fraternal organizations of the town, with beautiful floats, also the school children presenting the early history of Weymouth. There was also a good display of the industries of the town, and other features.

WHAT IS A CREDIT BUREAU?

A credit bureau, adequately organized and efficiently handled, is an institution of value in improving the tone of a community's credit. It educates the community in the meaning of credit by orienting for its credit-givers the standing of its credit seekers. It translates thrift, sobriety, prompt meeting of obligations, right living into very real and concrete terms for each individual. Performance is recorded and made to count in his credit relations. A credit record can be established which will insure accommodation during a period of misfortune, or a reputation may be acquired which will cut off every credit avenue. Bad bills reduced and slow accounts eliminated lessen business costs and hence decrease living expenses for consumers. People who know these things are given incentive to make their actions measure to the credit standard. A credit bureau which realizes its possibilities quickens and invigorates the ethics of business relations in its community.

Doubtless there were other organizations and features in the big parade, but it was impossible to get a complete list.

The route of the parade was from Great Hill via Bradley road, Bridge street, North street, Commercial street to Jackson Square, and Commercial Square, thence by Broad street and Middle street to Clapp Memorial field.

Wreaths Placed on Soldiers' Monument

When the procession reached the Old North Cemetery, there was another large assemblage to witness the ceremony at the Soldiers' Monument, wreaths being placed on the shaft by the following representatives of the various wars in which soldiers from Weymouth took part:

Louis Bradford, seventh in line of descent from Lieut. Jacob Nash of the King Philip's war;

Frederic Gilbert Bauer Jr., eighth in descent from Capt. Thomas Baker, a soldier in King William's and Queen Anne's Wars, 7th in descent from John Wingate; sixth in descent from Barfret Rand, a soldier in the French and Indian Wars.

Ronald B. Torrey, seventh in descent from Capt. William Torrey and Charles Newcomb, soldiers in the Revolution

Richard Mathewson, great grandson of Jonathan Hawes of War of 1812; Evelyn Louise Murphy, granddaughter of Napoleon Murphy, a soldier in the Mexican War

David Dunbar, the officer of the day of Reynolds Post 58, Grand Army of the Republic;

Emery E. Welch of the Spanish War Veterans; and

Lt. William A. Connell, past commander of Weymouth Post, American Legion of World War veterans.

The band and military organizations assisted in the ceremony. The rest at this point was also appreciated by the paraders.

All along the route of five miles the organizations, guests, and floats were enthusiastically received, and it was a great day for Weymouth. As previously noted, Weymouth was beautifully decorated with the National colors.

At the Reviewing Stand

A reviewing stand was erected at the grounds of the Jefferson school, nearly opposite the Davis Bates Clapp Memorial Building, and here the procession was reviewed by Chief Justice Taft, Governor Cox and about fifty invited guests. Each organization saluted and then proceeded to the Clapp field where refreshments were served.

The Anniversary Exercises

It was nearly 6 o'clock when assembly was again sounded for the Anniversary exercises. The speakers and invited guests occupied the balcony of the Memorial Building overlooking the Clapp field where the organizations and people were assembled.

Theron L. Tirrell, the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, extended a welcome. He then requested Col. Bauer to act as master of ceremonies.

Rev. William Hyde of the Episcopal church read from the Bible the same chapter that was read at the 300th Anniversary of Emanuel College in England, from which most of the early settlers of Weymouth were graduated; the Bible being originally owned by John William Shute, a soldier of the War of 1812. The chapter read was Ecclesiastes 41: 1—15.

Rev. Charles W. Allen of the Baptist church offered prayer.

Cheers and a Tiger for Gov. Cox

Gov. Cox when introduced was received with three rousing cheers and a tiger. Gov. Cox extended the greetings of the Commonwealth to the citizens of Weymouth and said the story of Weymouth was the story of Massachusetts. It was a record, he said, of devotion and sacrifice and of privations cheerfully endured by those early settlers. He commended the town for its patriotic response to the country's call in past wars, and he urged his audience to accept the significance of the celebration as a challenge to go forward in emulation of those who had shown them the way. The men who laid the foundations of Weymouth and Plymouth erected the framework for the freest nation in the world, he said.

Chief Justice Rugg referred to the deep significance of the day and declared that fundamentals, and not fancies and thrills, make a truly great nation. Sound character and education, such as the Pilgrims practiced, were essentials to strength in government as well as in private life. He paid a tribute to Chief Justice Taft and said it was a rare privilege for Weymouth to name as her son one who had not only filled the two highest positions in the nation, but who had added luster to his office.

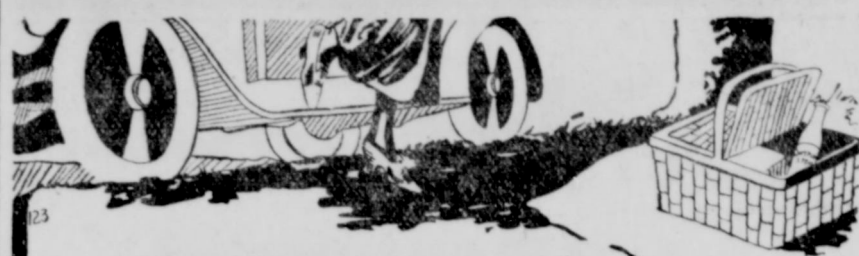

Warm Greeting for Chief Justice

Chief Justice Taft curtailed his intended speech considerably owing to the lateness of the hour. In a reminiscent mood he reviewed the history of Weymouth and the characteristics of the early settlers, his amusing references to his own family tree, and his eloquent chuckles, capturing his audience from the start. The address of Mr. Taft is printed in another column.

The singing of "America" led by the band, concluded the exercises at the Clapp field.

The invited guests were later entertained at the Masonic Temple nearby.

This closed the program of the anniversary committee, but in the evening there were band concerts at Weymouth Landing, North Weymouth, East Weymouth, Lovell's Corner, and South Weymouth, and fireworks at the Fairgrounds.

MARKET REPORT

As a guide to the busy housekeeper the Gazette-Transcript will publish each week the current market prices as of Tuesday of the week the Gazette-Transcript is printed.

Now is the time to buy native bunched beets, spinach, radishes, scallions, new potatoes, and pineapples. It is still not too late to can pineapple and size 30, 20-25¢ each may be recommended. The asparagus season is drawing to a close, but good bunches may still be obtained for 25¢.

New on the market: native strawberries 30¢-35¢ quart basket. Larger variety of berry 40¢ quart basket. Marshall berries from Marshall 60¢ quart basket; Southern blackberries 40¢ quart basket.

Lamb prices are higher. Leg of lamb retailing 40¢-45¢ lb.

Fresh caught eastern salmon are now arriving on the Boston market in good supply; these fish are being taken from the waters of New Brunswick and Canada and will continue to run until the latter part of the summer months.

"I think that fish fillets," says Mrs. Evelyn Spencer, formerly with the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, "are the key-note to enlarged fish consumption. The European woman is willing to work with the fish in the round, when it comes so much cheaper, but the American woman does not want to spend her time, and prefers to pay more, and get it ready for cooking. That is, generally speaking, for there are always prudent housewives who prefer to save the difference and do the labor, having the trimmings and bones as a by-product for fish stock, for soups and sauces." Every day the steam trawlers are bringing the finest hand-picked shore haddock to the cutting rooms on the Boston fish pier. Thousands of these fish are filleted daily, wrapped, packed in chilled containers, and shipped to dealers. When you buy haddock fillets you don't pay for the head, tail, fins and other parts you can't eat. You receive instead heavy strips of clean white meat, without bones or waste, dressed under the most sanitary conditions, and wrapped in vegetable parchment paper.

Steamed Fish

In steaming fish, parchment paper may be used advantageously. Cut up the fish fillets into servings, place them in a steamer lined with the paper, salt and pepper them, squeeze some lemon juice and a teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce over them, then dot with butter. Place over rapidly boiling water for 10 to 15 minutes, according to thickness of slices. Then grasp the four ends of the paper and remove to platter. The fish is now swimming in its own juice, which has hitherto always been lost in steaming or boiling.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS

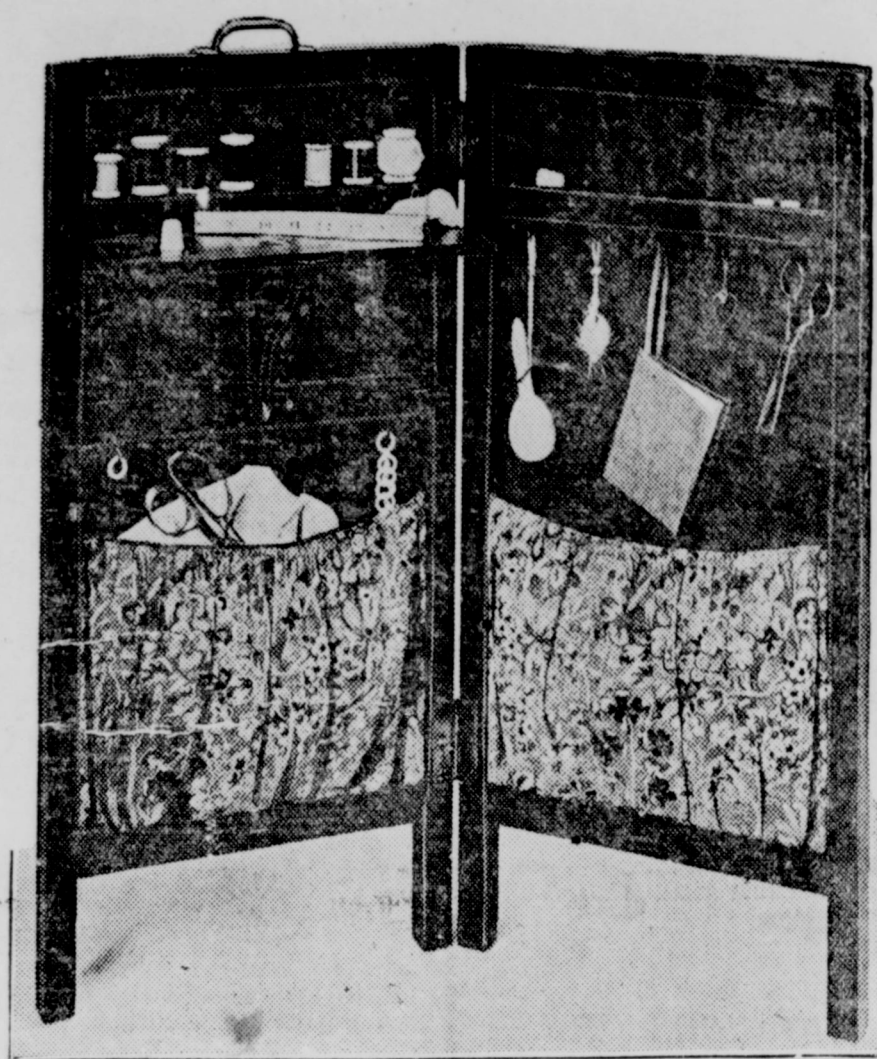

is often caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will do what we claim for it—rid your system of Catarrh or Deafness caused by Catarrh. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE has been successful in the treatment of Catarrh for over Forty Years.

SEWING SCREEN IS CONVENIENT

Arrangement of Sewing Screen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the most convenient devices for keeping all sewing equipment in place is a sewing screen. It consists of two panels (28 inches high and 13½ inches wide made of 1 by 2-inch plank) hinged together and each panel covered with burlap. A pocket is fastened to the bottom of each panel on the inside, and hooks are placed on the bottom of the cross pieces to hold the necessary equipment. Pegs or nails driven into the top of one of the cross pieces will hold the spools. A drop shelf attached to the upper part of our panel makes a good work table, and a groove in the top of the cross pieces will hold buttons. This folding sewing screen is light in weight, requires little space and can be easily carried to the porch or lawn for sewing work.

The following supplies are convenient to have at hand in the screen before beginning to sew:

Needles of good make and assorted sizes. Sizes 7, 8, 9 and 10 are most used.

Threads, also of good make and assorted sizes. A spool each of Nos. 50, 70 and 100, and basting thread should be on hand.

A plain, substantial thimble. Celluloid or aluminum makes a good, inexpensive thimble; a brass one is not desirable because it may stain your thimble-finger if it gets moist with perspiration, and may poison you if there is a sore place on your finger underneath it.

A pair of sharp shears, with blades about five inches long, for cutting cloth.

A pair of small, sharp scissors with good points, for cutting threads, removing basting, etc.

An abundance of medium-sized, sharp-pointed pins. Fine pins are easier to use than coarse ones.

A small pin cushion.

A tape measure.

A few pieces of cardboard to use as gages.

A pencil.

An emery bag for polishing needles and smoothing them when they become rusty or sticky.

The United States Department of Agriculture says that such a screen can be made of the following:

Ten feet of lumber 1½ by 1½ inches.

Six 1½-inch (butt) hinges with screws to be used in joining the panels and fastening the drop shelf to the cross pieces.

One handle with screws for the top of screen.

One hook and eye to fasten the panels when they are folded and closed.

Two yards of burlap, denim or canvas, 18 inches wide.

One dozen brass cup hooks.

One yard crotone for pockets.

One yard one-half-inch elastic for top of pockets.

Four dozen upholstering tacks for tacking burlap.

Sandpaper and stain.

Selecting Colors.

Care should be taken in selecting good colors in materials both for pockets and for outside covering. The colors in the cloth should harmonize with the color of the stain for the wood.

Often times very good dyes and wood stains can be made from nut hulls, roots, berries and bark of trees. The cloth, not being the same texture, will take the dye in a little different shade of the same color than the woodwork if the identical barks or shells are used for making the stain for the frame.

Wood Stains.

To make a good brown stain for the frame cover three pints of bruised green walnut hulls with three pints of water and allow to stand for twelve hours. Strain through a double cheese-cloth and add one ounce of permanganate of potash. This stain may be made in larger quantities and used for floor stain. It gives a rich brown floor finish. If a semi-waxy appearance is desired, one quart of paraffin oil can be added. A similar stain can be purchased on the market at a reasonable price.

the milk, and mix this with the dry materials. Beat thoroughly and add enough more milk (or water) to make a smooth batter about the consistency of thick cream. If the whites were beaten separately, fold them in last.

The waffle irons should be thoroughly clean and smooth. Heat both sides thoroughly and grease with a brush or swab dipped in liquid fat or rub the iron with a piece of fat bacon rind. Place a spoonful of batter in each compartment of the griddle, near the center, close the irons and the batter will fill the compartments. Bake on one side until the edges seem to be browning, then turn the iron and bake the other side until delicately brown.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

A card index of recipes in the kitchen will save time and worry.

To remove mildew stains from linen use a mixture of soapy starch and milk.

Clean your gilt picture frames with the white of egg applied with a soft paint brush.

A white enamel stove tray is a time saver. It is more easily cleaned than the metal, which stains easily.

Brush out your oven after baking. If rust is permitted to accumulate it will shorten the life of a stove.

If you will sprinkle a few cloves in the fat in which you are frying doughnuts you will find the result pleasing.

To wash a pair of corsets spread them on a flat table, taking out the laces but not the stays, and scrub them with a brush and soapy water. Rinse quickly in warm water and dry on a flat board in the sun or near the fire.

GOVERNMENT RECIPE FOR MAKING WAFFLES

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An excellent recipe for making waffles is as follows:

2 cups of sifted flour 2 eggs

1 teaspoonful baking powder 1 table spoonful shortening (melted)

½ teaspoonful salt 1 cupful milk (or more)

2 tablespoonfuls sugar, if desired

THOMAS V. NASH,

3t,22,29,J6 Register

"In an emergency Capt. Myles Standish was called in, and he wiped Morton off the country for awhile. In 1635, another minister came with 21 families and settled down here. The General Court says he was 'allowed to sit down', but he did not bring peace.

"Weymouth was a battleground of ministers to establish their church. Here real freedom began. After awhile peace came, and one minister stayed twenty years. Then Rev. Torrey whose pastorate extended over 51 years. Then Parson William Smith, the father of Abigail Adams, the greatest daughter of Weymouth, the wife of a President of these United States, and the mother of a President.

Making of Typical American

"These celebrations of the founding of New England settlements are advisable reminders of what we owe those who took part in them and desire interest from the high, honorable, and indispensable part which New England on the whole has played in the making of this Republic and in the creation of the typical American.

"One would make no invidious distinctions between the Plymouth Colony, that of Massachusetts Bay, that of Hartford, that of New Haven, and that of Providence. They were all possible only through the earnest self-sacrificing devotion of brave men and women, moved to expose themselves to the dangers of this New World by religious conviction, by love of God and of political freedom.

"The principles that stand out of the practice of all these New England colonies need renewal in this Tercentenary celebration. Their people taught and recognized the necessity for the right of property and, above all, they insisted on the foundation of religion among the people to make them moral and strong and able to sustain the responsibility of a Government and a Nation. The longer one lives, the more experience he has in Government, the more clearly he recognizes the strength which the practice and teaching of religion has in enabling a people to be useful to themselves and to the world.

"The strength of the New England ideas which have spread through this country and have been the chief basis of its moral aspiration is in their religious faith. That permeated those who settled New England and made her what she was. Today the hope that we may continue to be a useful Nation is to be found in the maintenance of a great body of responsible men and women who recognize the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and their duty to live up to His Commandments as they understand them. What we must fight is indifference and inertia, which ultimately lead to a dullness in appreciating the duties we owe and stir us to emphasize only the rights and privileges we would enjoy.

"The sons of New England today are perhaps a third of our whole population, and their influence upon the ideals of this country is far greater than their ratio of numbers."

"I felicitate Weymouth and New England on such a history. Your co-ordination shows peace, harmony, and progress. Goodnight and good bye."—Applause.

The singing of "America" led by the band, closed the program at the Clapp Memorial Field.

Along Route of Parade And Among the Workers

A list of the places decorated would be a list of nearly every house in town, every place of business, the churches, Town Offices, fraternal and public buildings. Seldom have we seen such a general decoration.

Again it was demonstrated that Weymouth is fortunate in having the Davis Bates Clapp Memorial Building and the Clapp Field. It was a pretty scene at the field.

It should be emphasized that the celebration was purely a local affair. That no National or State appropriation was sought as at Plymouth, and only $5000 was voted by the town; that all the organizations taking part were Weymouth organizations, and most of the individuals were somehow associated with Weymouth. Much credit is due H. H. Joy in particular for the magnitude of the celebration.

Automobile parties on the way from Boston to the South Shore, or homeward bound, were certainly up against it at North Weymouth between 3.30 and 4.30 P. M., with Bridge street, Sea street, Pearl street, and Norton street closed to travel. Later North, Middle, and Broad streets were blocked. But a good procession was their reward.

It was a pleasure to see so many Grand Army veterans in the parade. Large comfortable automobiles were provided for them, and they enjoyed the day.

The school exhibit was wonderfully good. Some probably expected to see school children marching, but really it was a pageant of the early times. Mayor Bates and Mrs. Bates of Quincy, who were guests of the town, were also entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Elden G. Howe of 233 Pilgrim road.

The float of the Norfolk Motor Co. exemplified progress: In 1623—the ox cart; in 1923—the Chevrolet Truck, model T.

The camouflaged tank of the American Legion kept up with the procession, and went "Over the Top."

Elas! The ladies of the Old Colony Club float sat in their seats six hours, and then (hence the "Elas") when they belatedly arrived at the reviewing stand the dignitaries had departed. "They also serve who only stand and wait."

Price H. Tirrell, suffering from a serious indisposition, was forced to sit quietly in his auto and let his conferees run the show.

Few probably knew that on the front row of the speaking balcony at the Clapp Memorial sat a man who could claim a double (as contrasted with Mr. Taft's single line) infiltration of the Torrey blood, being a descendant of Capt. William on his mother's side, and of James Torrey on the father's.

We heard a funny thing. While waiting on the hill for the procession to form General Edwards was heard to say to Chief Justice Rugg and party: "Say, there's a Grand Army man (Comrade Bradford Hawes) over 80 years old riding on a HORSE, and we young fellows (?) are privileged to ride in autos."

At the review a couple of handsome bouquets were handed by little Paul Fay up to Mr. Taft and Gov. Cox, which flowers being courteously acknowledged were passed to Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Cox.

At the stand it was also amusing to see a tall-batted and white ribboned functionary treating the "big-wigs" to liquid refreshment furnished by a nice lady of great thoughtfulness.

It is rumored that J. B. Reed was "sulking in his tent" or some other modest place last Saturday, but to anyone studying nature from the top of Great Hill the cruel fact was impressed that the Almighty had set the scene for a suitable commemorative monument contributed by the town (perhaps not at a cost of quite $50,000) and not a simple boulder furnished by an outsider.

The positively regal luncheon provided at Masonic hall after the exercises put the finishing touch to the "end of a perfect day." We can vouch for the hearty thanks of one chap.

The address of Chief Justice Taft which appeared in the Sunday papers was apparently from advance sheets, but the exigencies of a late hour made the distinguished gentleman deliver the speech which the audience really enjoyed—chuckles 'n everything.

Didn't the school children march well? Chief Justice Rugg evidently thought so, as per his special allusion to the young folks.

Did you note the brand-new Durants in the process? One had recorded only eight miles before it entered the running—hardly enough to tune it up for the fine brake-work it displayed on the hill.

The well known entertainer "John Thomas" was breezily present, and vied with the Brockton drum major (in white array) in extracting smiles wherever he appeared.

The cast of the die brought Father Holland and Minister Hyde in the same conveyance in the procession. One of the reverend gentlemen received a generous ovation, and it was rich to see Mr. Hyde dryly acknowledging some of the applause.

The cobs secured from some place for the horsebacking officials were not all restive equines, and the U. S. Cavalry being next back of them kept the speed up to concert pitch. Occasionally there would be a spurt, and then about half of the Weymouth centaurs merged with the Cavalry in confusion.

The absence of a band concert at the Fair Grounds when the fireworks were so late in exploding was a good reason for much unfavorable comment, and the pyrotechnics were not much shucks. However, everybody and his neighbor had a chance to show prowess in auto management, and no accidents happened—providentially!

One of the motion picture artists ran out of film in the presence of such a wealth of opportunity, but the number of miles clicked off ought to insure a treat for future movie fans.

While they last, Souvenir Gazettes of June 15 may be obtained at the office of the Gazette-Transcript, 12 Station street, East Weymouth. All the agents are sold out, but there are a very limited number at the Gazette office, which will be sold at 25 cents each; three cents extra if sent by mail, but cash or stamps should accompany order.

The invited guests who arrived at North Weymouth early were entertained at the vestry of Pilgrim church by the Selectmen and members of the Tercentenary Committee, and again later, after the exercises at the Clapp field the guests were entertained by the committee at the Masonic Temple.

Many visited Weymouth on Sunday and the holiday to view the decorations which were not taken down until Tuesday.

Another large edition of the Gazette-Transcript is printed this week (over 3000 copies) with full reports of the big celebration, and special historical articles will be printed for several weeks.

The success of the Tercentenary Celebration was not due to any one person, but everyone seemed to do his or her part. There was really no elected or appointed committee, but a general volunteer committee. Some who were inclined to kick at first over the date, day of week, etc., were finally overcome by the enthusiasm of others and the publicity of the press.

Davis Bates Clapp Memorial a Town Asset

The Davis Bates Clapp Memorial at East Weymouth is one of the institutions of which the town is justly proud. It was erected in 1903 in accordance with the desires of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Clapp as a memorial to their son, Davis Bates Clapp, who died Sept. 5, 1902.

The property of the Association consists of the Memorial building, the athletic field adjoining and Slate Island in Boston Harbor.

The property is vested in a corporation known as the Davis Bates Clapp Memorial Association, regularly organized April 20, 1905, under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The purposes of the Association as set forth in the articles of incorporation are:

"To acquire and hold and maintain land and buildings in East Weymouth and elsewhere to be used for the purpose of promoting the physical, social, intellectual and spiritual welfare of young men. To carry on any enterprise having as its end the accomplishment of the aforesaid purpose."

The duties and responsibilities of the Board of Directors are defined in the bylaws of the Corporation as follows:

"The Board of Directors shall have and exercise all the powers necessary for the entire management and control of all the property and funds of the Corporation. It shall appoint all sub-committees necessary for carrying on the purposes for which the Corporation was organized."

The Memorial Building was opened by the Board of Directors with the offer of the following privileges and opportunities to all who are eligible to membership in the Association:

"The ideal which the Association sets before itself is the ALL-ROUND MAN, well equipped in body, mind and spirit for an effective life."

The Physical Life

The gymnasium is modern in every appointment and amply equipped for all-round physical culture, and new equipment will be added as necessity requires.

Realizing that intelligent adaptation of exercise to individual needs is the secret of beneficial gymnastic work, careful examinations will be given individual members, measurement will be plotted on an anthropometric chart and special exercises prescribed re-examinations are to be made from time to time to show gains and real development.

This exact and scientific examination has been made possible through the generosity of the Stetson Shoe Co.; Alden, Walker & Wilde; George Strong Co.; George E. Keith Co., and Edwin Clapp & Son, Inc., who have presented the Association with a complete set of anthropometric instruments. Two of our local physicians in consultation with the physical director make the examinations and prescribe the exercises.

Regular classes for senior and junior boys, and various groups of men, according to age and needs, are formed with hours adapted to each class.

All indoor sports and games are conducted. Basketball teams are formed in the various groups, and a representative "Clapp Memorial Association" team selected.

Bowling

There are two fine bowling alleys of the best construction, perfectly lighted and ventilated both day and evening, carefully cared for and kept in first-class condition. Elevated seats behind the alleys afford a fine view of the games for about sixty people, and a hundred more can be accommodated at the sides.

Out-of-Door Sports

The athletic field is one of the finest in the state and includes an area of about six acres, with a hill rising at the left to give a fine observation stand, while a spacious piazza and the upper windows of the building afford an especially good view of the whole field, which is kept close mowed and in good condition all summer.

About April First baseball teams are organized and in autumn football teams and other outdoor sports.

What to Wear

The gymnasium regulations require for all class work a suit with grey trousers with black stripes, grey sleeveless shirt with crimson monogram, and white rubber-soled shoes. Grey running pants are required for all contests and athletic games.

THE GYMNASIUM

After exercise a bath is imperative and are free to all full members.

Women and Girls

Every possible facility and advantage is given women and girls, and classes arranged as is convenient, and instructions in bowling given.

The Intellectual Life

The reading room is supplied with the best of current literature, and arrangements have been made with the Tufts and Ford libraries by which the Association has the use of a large number of volumes, which can be kept a certain length of time at the Association Building for the use of the members, and then exchanged for others. It is the aim of the Association to secure a fine library of its own as rapidly as possible.

Lectures on various topics are provided from time to time. As rapidly as there is need classes are formed and teachers secured for whatever the members desire to study.

The Spiritual Life

The founder of this Association, Mr. Edwin Clapp, in a letter addressed to the trustees at the time of its incorporation, expressed it as his "firm" conviction that the controlling principle and the underlying motive for the accomplishment of the purposes of the Association must be a religious principle,—must be a Christian motive, if that purpose is to be carried steadily and effectively forward." Mr. Clapp's conviction, thus expressed, is the real spirit and motive of the present administration.

Clean sports, a genuine spirit of fellowship and help, a sense of responsibility for the other fellow's good cheer are a part of the wholesome, human, religious life. It is designed to make the whole tone of the Memorial Building a refined and uplifting influence in the deepest and widest sense.

REMARKABLE MUSICAL RECORD OF C. W. BAILEY

For continuous singing in one church choir, the record in this state was probably broken on Palm Sunday in the East Weymouth Congregational church when C. Will Bailey, the well known basso, finished his 53 years as an active choir member and singer in the chorus choir, and started on his 54th year of continuous work as a vocalist in the old "White Church" choir by singing J. Faure's bass solo entitled "Palm Leaves".

Mr. Bailey, who acknowledged when "cornered" that he was nearly 71 years "young", began his musical career as a boy soprano, singing for the first time in public at the age of 7½ years in the Congregational church at Quincy Point, where his sister was an alto singer in the church choir and his father was sexton of the church. His solo at that time was entitled "I am going to be a soldier, gird on my armour bright", and the music and words are still fresh in his mind and he has not as yet forgotten how his knees shook and his voice trembled at his debut.

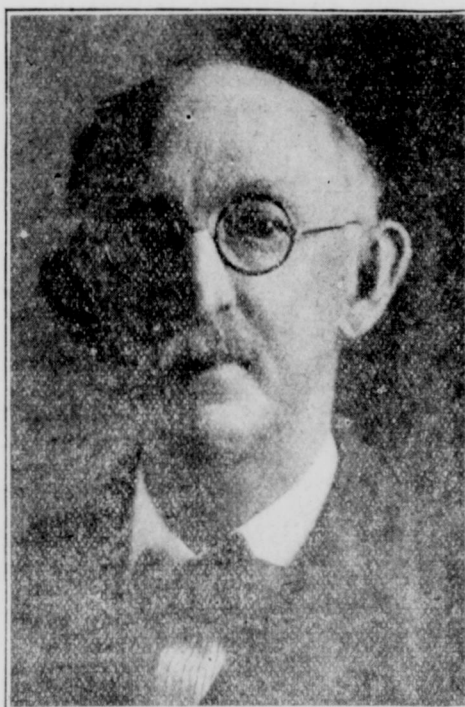

Mr. Bailey can also recall the first song he remembers of ever hearing—it was what would now be called "a mother's lullaby", sung to him by his mother when he was 4½ years old. He was sick with a fever; the doctor said that sleep was better than medicine, but a constant barking of a neighbor's dog prevented any sleep, but his mother sat by his bedside and in a simple old-fashioned melody sang these words:

"Go 'long, go 'long, you old bow wow,
We do not want your noise,
We'd rather sing the pretty songs
Of little girls and boys."

The little boy with a fever was soon lulled to sleep by the united power of music and a mother's love.

He continued as a boy soprano until he was 13 years of age, all his music being learned by note or taught him by some person on an instrument. All the popular Civil War songs were at his tongue's end, such as "Ellsworth's Avengers" and "Maryland, My Maryland" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" and many others. Bailey also developed into a young drummer, and beat for many boy companies during the Civil War times, and entertained the stay-at-homes with his singing and drumming. His voice began to change at 13, and from then until he was 19 years old, he had what was known as a "gossling" voice. At the age of 19 his voice began to "settle", and from a high soprano it went to a deep, low bass, having a range of two octaves and three notes, ranging from low "C" on the bass clef to "E" above.

His first experience in studying music was with the old-time singing master, Frank B. Bates, and the system was the "do, re, mi" fa". Mr. Bailey sang in and was manager of the Haydn Male Quartette for 25 years; this organization disbanding some few years ago on account of business engagements of two of its members.

FREDERICK HUMPHREY

C. W. BAILEY

He was also sergeant and manager of the Temple Drum Corps for 17 years, and this organization beat for Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., for 15 consecutive Memorial Days.

As a vocal soloist, quartette and choir singer and a drummer he has probably attended more funerals than any undertaker now doing business in Weymouth. At one time all the patriotic, fraternal, and religious organizations thought it proper to have martial music at a funeral service.

Mr. Bailey at one time in the old "White Church" sang with a chorus of 45 voices, known in all eastern Massachusetts by the name of the "Famous White Church Choir", and of the 45 voices then in active service, Mr. Bailey is the only one now singing, and there are only five that are living. He was also a member of the "Philemon Mixed Quartette", which sang for eight or ten years in concert and church work.

During Mr. Bailey's long term of service he has taken what might be termed two vacations, that is by accepting positions in the quartette choirs of the First Congregational and the First Unitarian churches of Waltham and in the Baptist church at Weymouth Landing.

As to what the critics thought of his singing, the following press notices from Boston papers are an indication: "Mr. C. W. Bailey interspersed the program with his rich and cultivated bass voice with the solos entitled, 'Questions' and 'The Battle Prayer'."

"Mr. Bailey was heartily encored, bowed his acknowledgements several times, but was finally obliged to respond with ever-popular 'Old Black Joe'."

"Mr. Bailey showed the great power of tone and the sweetness of his voice by singing the old song 'Darby and Joan' with much pathos."

"Mr. Bailey is acknowledged by all who heard him at that concert to be one of the best singers in the state."

When are you going to stop singing? queries the Gazette reporter. And his answer is, "Not until they pull me off the stump, and I hope I may go down and out of this world just a-singing."

Fifty-four years in church work.

Forty-six years as clerk of the parish.

Among the marked changes noted by him is the fact that not a single person is living in any official position either in the church or parish who was serving when he began.

For the past 21 years his occupation has been correspondent for the Boston Globe.

This is his favorite quotation: "Music, the only art that can calm the agitations of the soul and put the devil to flight."

FREDERICK HUMPHREY

Frederick Humphrey was born in Hingham in 1861. He came to Weymouth in 1878 to work in grocery store that he now owns and occupies. He has been identified with Weymouth interests ever since, becoming a resident of Weymouth in 1903.

Mr. Humphrey was the first president of Weymouth Grocers and Provision Dealers Association which is now in existence. Also the first president of the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers Association of which Weymouth is a prominent part, as the present president is a Weymouth boy namely, E. A. Hunt.

He was one of the prime movers and president for ten years of the Weymouth Industrial Association which was instrumental in establishing George E. Keith's No. 8 shoe factory in Weymouth in 1908. He was Selectman of Weymouth in 1920-21-22.

THE VILLAGE STUDY CLUB OF SOUTH WEYMOUTH

By Harriet W. Simpson

The Village Study Club was organized in the year 1907 through the combined efforts of Rev. Harry W. Kimball, who was at that time pastor of the Union Congregational church of South Weymouth, and Miss Mary G. Moar. With keen perception of the mental needs of a small community they believed that the necessary stimulus would be provided by bringing to a number of people who were sufficiently interested in self-improvement for thought, study, and discussion.

By invitation of Miss Moar twelve people met at her home on the eleventh of September, 1907, and plans were formulated by which the club came into existence. To Mr. Herbert H. Longfellow was given the honor of naming the organization, "The Village Study Club."

There were no printed bylaws, but it was decided there should be a president, a secretary who should also serve as treasurer, and a program committee. The president would be required to serve two years, and the secretary three years.

It was voted that the club membership be limited to 36. At a later date, however, this vote was rescinded upon the motion of Mrs. Herbert H. Longfellow, seventeen voting in favor of and nine opposing the change.

It was decided by vote to hold the meetings of the club at the Fogg Library on the second and fourth Monday evenings of each month at 8 o'clock, from October to April, the membership fee to be fifty cents per year with a guest fee of 25 cents. Rev. Harry W. Kimball was elected the first president, and Miss Mary G. Moar the first secretary.

The first regular meeting of the club occurred on October 14, 1907, with 27 members present. The program committee, with Mrs. Henry B. Reed as chairman, Mrs. Herbert H. Longfellow, and Rev. Harry Kimball agreed upon the study of immigration for the first year of work, the topic as presented being, "American Citizens of Today and Tomorrow." At the close of the first club year a banquet was served.

During the second year the topic "Creative Americans" brought the members in close touch with the world of Art, Science, Music, Literature, Statecraft, and Business.

Then followed "Problems of American Life", "American Commerce", "Our Courts", "Our Treatment of Criminals", "South America" and many subjects of interest up to the fourth and fifth years which were given exclusively to the study of Shakespeare.

During this period eighteen plays were read, with four evenings of music. With the passing of years the musicale has become an highly enjoyable feature in the work of the club.

On November 15, 1915, the first copy of "The Village" an original magazine was presented by members of the club, with Mr. Prince H. Tirrell the editor. So marked was the success of this literary venture that the magazine continues to this day, appearing annually.

One finds many events of interest in the records of the Village Study Club, but none that can measure up to the standard of excellence which marked the presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream" on the evening of June 23, 1913, upon the lawn of Mr. Henry B. Reed's estate. To the untiring effort of Mrs. Reed, with the help and interest of her committee was due the credit of a most artistic production, the memory of which will never fade.

Another memorable occasion was that of the progressive dinner in May of 1910, when the members partook of grapefruit at Mrs. Alfred Tirrell's; the fish course at Judge Cook's; meat course at Mr. Arthur C. Heald's; salad at Mr. Roy E. Moar's, and ices and coffee at Mr. Henry B. Reed's. Following the dessert the club presented Mrs. Alfred Tirrell with flowers in honor of her 82d birthday, after which the program of the evening was in order.

On October 29, 1917, the club observed with appropriate exercises the 400th anniversary of Martin Luther's nailing his thesis on the door of the Wittenburg church.

On April 14, 1920, for the first time, a drama was given by club members in the Fogg Opera House. The proceeds, given to the Edward B. Nevins school, were used to help furnish a "Teachers Room".

The club makes an annual gift of money to the Fogg Library for the purchase of books.

The Village Study Club holds a place of honor among the organizations in the second oldest town in Massachusetts.

It would seem that its position might be considered unique, in that for sixteen years it has continued to serve its original purpose. With the present membership of one hundred and ten is assured a future worthy of the past.

For the season of 1923—24 the following officers will serve:

President—Mr. John F. Robinson
Vice President—Mr. Clyde B. Coleman
Secretary—Mrs. Ralph P. Burrell
Program Committee—Col. Frederic G. Bauer, Miss Frances Wheeler, Mrs. Maybin Brown, Miss Margaret Collins, Mr. Charles A. Dean
Music Committee—Mrs. Freeman Putney Jr., Mrs. Arthur R. Taylor, Mrs. William Barnard Play Committee—Mrs. Arthur Brackett, Miss Helen Simpson, Mr. Ralph A. Klingeman

The list of members comprised fifty names, the full number permitted by the Grand Chapter.

The officers of Mayflower Chapter, No. 65, of East Weymouth, exemplified the work, under the direction of Mrs. Edith G. Bicknell, Worthy Matron, and Mr. Atwood E. Hunt, Worthy Patron

Wessagusset Chapter was the recipient of handsome and valuable gifts, among which was a full set of regalia from Hatherly Chapter, No. 189, of Rockland.

The new chapter starts with the best of prospects, in an excellent field, having received to date over thirty applications for membership.

Regular meetings every fourth Wednesday in Odd Fellows Building, South Weymouth.

Plans are now being made for the constitution of Wessagusset Chapter by the Grand Chapter, Mrs. Jane Gray Payzant, Grand Matron, and Mr. Cleson S. Curtice, Grand Patron on Thursday evening, November 8, 1923, in Fogg's Opera House, South Weymouth.

MOUNT HOPE CEMETERY ASSOCIATION

August 12, 1858, certain citizens of Weymouth wishing to associate together with corporate powers for the purpose of providing, establishing and preparing a cemetery or burial (sic) place for the dead" made application to Thomas J. Burrill, Esq., one of the justices of peace for the county of Norfolk, to issue a warrant for a meeting. The subscribers to this request were Noah Vining Jr., John S. Fogg, B. D. Vining, Allen Vining, Thomas White, Jason Holbrook, Oliver B. Shaw, Abner Holbrook, Joseph Hawes, and Gilman Burrill.

The warrant was addressed to Joseph Hawes August 23, 1858, requiring him to call a meeting for September 1, 1858, at the school house in the Sixth District; and pursuant to the same the meeting was called, Thomas White acting as moderator.

A "board of provisional directors" was chosen to draft a constitution and to select a "suitable lot for burial purposes." Noah Vining Jr., John S. Fogg, Abner Holbrook, Allen Vining, Jason Holbrook, and Gilman Burrill being elected as such directors; and it was also voted to add Albert Tirrell and Minot Tirrell Jr. to that board.

Admission to the Association was made easy, and a committee was appointed to increase the membership. September 22, 1858, a constitution was adopted, the preamble and each article (eight in number) being voted upon separately. Seven "conditions and limitations" governing holders of lots were also adopted, and a committee of five was chosen to "provide means" and buy land for the association.

December 13, 1858, at a meeting after three adjournments, presumably while an organization was being perfected, the name Mount Hope Cemetery Association was tentatively decided upon, and John S. Fogg was elected the first president, Allen Vining secretary, and Ezra Pratt treasurer.

But the name timidly taken has persisted, and the Mount Hope Cemetery Association as a South Weymouth institution has continued without interruption, the present officers being Frank E. Loud president, Bates Torrey secretary, and Joseph E. Gardner treasurer.

New Bank Building Open for Inspection

Wednesday, June 27, 1923, was a proud day for the officials, directors and working force of the Weymouth Savings Bank, and the citizens of the town generally united with them in the rejoicing over the completion of the new bank building in Washington Square which was open for inspection from 2 to 9 P. M.

For some months the citizens have watched the progress of the erection of the building, which marks a new era for Washington Square being a bank building of which any city of 100,000 population would be proud. Located at the corner of Washington and Front streets, it has a frontage of nearly 100 feet on the two streets, and attracts attention whether approached on these streets or from Commercial street.

Wednesday the building was doubly attractive because of the hundreds of visitors and because of the many baskets of beautiful flowers, the gift of neighboring banks and local merchants. These came from Kidder, Peabody & Co., Merchants National Bank of Boston, First National Bank of Boston, Quincy Savings Bank, Quincy Trust Co., Hingham Savings Bank, National Mount Wollaston Bank, Weymouth Trust Co., East Weymouth Savings Bank, South Weymouth Savings Bank, South Shore Co-operative Bank, Howard P. Furness, Joseph Kelley; the architect, Thomas M. Jones, and others.

The visitors were not confined to Weymouth and South Shore people, but there were bank officials from Boston and more distant towns, including Attleboro, where a new bank building is proposed.

The new home of the Weymouth Savings Bank is of light limestone, two stories high, with large plate glass windows, and artistic entrance. A new granolithic sidewalk enhances the appearance of the building.

All the first floor is occupied by the bank. There is a large foyer for the public and three or four windows at which they may do business. At the left is an entrance to the Treasurer's office, which also leads to the room for the board of investment. At the right are private booths for the use of customers, convenient to the safe deposit vault.

The space back of the counter is roomy, and in the rear is the large bank vault, and a room in which the numerous machines are located, including cancelling machines, posting machines, adding machines etc.

The inside finish is of gumwood, and the walls are painted gray, presenting an attractive appearance.

The second floor of the building is occupied by Dr. C. P. Whittle, the dentist; A. S. Jordan & Co., insurance, and other offices.

Vice Presidents Edward W. Hunt and Dr. Clarence P. Whittle were assisting in receiving by the trustees and directors: George E. Bicknell, Charles F. Vaughan, Charles M. Taylor, Frank J. A. Perry, Arthur E. Pratt, Charles G. Sheppard, Charles G. Jordan, W. Edward Guttererson, Charles T. Crane, C. Lincoln Abbott, George A. Walker, and Frank M. Bryant; also Charles T. Crane, the treasurer for nearly fifty years; John P. Hunt, the assistant treasurer, Irving H. Tirrell, the clerk, and Miss Helen F. Dwyer and Miss Helen A. Kenerson of the office force.

The architect was Thomas M. Jones of Boston and the builders were C. J. & J. M. Buckley.

The bank will be open for business next Monday at the new location.

AMERICAN LEGION

Post 79, American Legion, held its regular monthly meeting in G. A. R. hall Monday evening. There was a large number present and a vast amount of business was transacted. Special attention was given to the field day and the different committees reported that everything was progressing very favorably. There is a lot of work to be done and it is up to every member of the Post to dig in and help put this affair across big. There will be horse racing, baseball, soccer games, and numerous other sports. There will also be a five-mile handicap running race around the track at 6 P. M. Entries for this event will close July 11, and will be received by Arthur Griffin, Fore River avenue, North Weymouth.

There will be a special meeting to-night at the Fair Grounds so cancel all other engagements, if possible, and be there promptly at 7 o'clock and help the committee in every way possible.

W. R. C. NOTES

The rummage sale held yesterday afternoon was a success financially.

President Mrs. Abrams and nine officers and one corps member attended the school of instruction at Braintree on Wednesday.

P. C. Mrs. Mahoney and Mrs. Woodbury attended the Middlesex County Association meeting at Melrose on Tuesday. The mayor turned the key of the city over to the Grand Army and Relief Corps and after dinner the manager of the theatre invited the G. A. R. (84 of them) and the W. R. C. (125) to the theatre and had a most interesting program for more than two hours pleasure.

Weymouth had her big day, and Comrade Oliver Burrell will have his big day on Monday, July 2. We wish for him many happy returns of the day.

WILLIAMS—CARTER

Wednesday evening Miss Mary L. Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carter of 87 North street, North Weymouth, was married to Chester A. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Williams of Braintree. The Rev. Thomas B. Bitler, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church, North Weymouth, performed the ceremony in the church.

Mrs. John Tower, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Katherine Marigan and Miss Mable Marrigan of Quincy. Ushers were Wallace Williams of Salem, N. H., Louis Quayley of Braintree, James I. Paps of Bridgeport, Conn., and Carl Bjorkman of Weymouth.

Mr. Williams, a World War veteran served with Co. A, 101st Infantry. He is a construction engineer for Stone & Webster. The couple will live at North Weymouth.

"Great and Worthy" says Taft

Hon. William J. Holbrook, who went to Washington as a representative of the Weymouth Historical Society, to invite Chief Justice Taft to visit Weymouth, has received a letter from him in which he says,—

"Boston, June 24, 1923

Hon. William J. Holbrook, Town Counsel of Weymouth

"It was a great and worthy celebration of the town's 300th birthday yesterday and I am grateful to you and the town leaders for the privilege of having taken part in it and having seen it. I wish to thank you personally for the favors you have done me in this matter.

"With the hope that our paths may cross again, believe me,

Sincerely yours,

Editor Weymouth Gazette-Transcript:

Dear Sirs:

Your souvenir edition for the Tercentenary Celebration was an excellent piece of work. Your biographical and historical sketches were meaty, terse and readable, and the general make-up was unusually good. It gave me pleasure to exhibit my "home" paper to my friends.

I was glad to see the way your manufacturers filled up the advertising space. They should continue the practice for the benefit of themselves, the town, and the paper.

Yours very truly,

Bus Company Anxious To Secure License

As yet the Selectmen have received no notification from the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company that Weymouth service will be discontinued because of the recent town meeting, and no threat is expected.

The transportation problem took a new turn this week, when a member of the local Transportation Committee made the statement that the town was committed to the "Subsidy Act" and must continue to pay one half of all deficits. The gentleman said the town had accepted the Act of the Legislature about three years ago. Whether this is the situation the Gazette cannot say.

Bus companies are however, getting busy and the Selectmen have received a communication from the Norfolk and Bristol Bus Company, a Massachusetts corporation, for license to operate motor busses in the town of Weymouth, in compliance with the rules and regulations of the town. The communication reads, "Our running schedule to be the same as is now in operation by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company, and the rate of fares over these lines to remain the same as they are at the present time."

The offices of the company are in Hyde Park. An accompanying letter reads, "In asking for this license, we feel that our past four years of experience justifies us in doing so. For a one-year license from your town we will be in a position to give you a fleet of busses which will take care of all the traffic, and which your town will be proud to have. We will be pleased to meet your Board at any time, and go over this transportation problem with you."

HIGH SCHOOL BONDS

Proposals were opened yesterday for the purchase of the High School loan bonds of $250,000, and awarded to the Old Colony Trust Co. at 101.151. There were fourteen bids. The rate of interest named was 4 1/4%.

The rate of interest named was 4 1/4%.

Including this issue the borrowing capacity of the town of Weymouth is $104,821 as per financial statement of Town Treasurer John H. Stetson under date of April 9, 1923, as follows:

Net valuation for year 1922	$15,439,482
Debt limit	452,097
Total gross debt, including this issue	457,500
Less exempted debt:
Water bonds	78,500
County Hospital bonds	14,000
Sinking funds for debts inside debt limit	17,724

Net debt $347,276

Borrowing capacity $104,821

Since the closing of the school, work has been rushed on the addition and changes, and makes a showing.

JERRY, THE DRIVER, SAYS:

Spreading sunshine in this world isn't as easy as the poets say; every time I start to whistle around the office the bookkeeper swears.

We sometimes wonder why the Creator created the skunk; but, on the other hand, why did man invent the cigarette and peppermint gum?

The grocer cracks a lot of funny jokes about the coal man giving short weight, but the coal man doesn't make you pay for the wagon.

The advertising that counts is the advertising with a punch, and I have sometimes thought that that might be a good way to make collections.

The Marshal of the Parade

Probably no man worked any harder or did so much to make the Tercentenary celebration the success it was than Col. F. J. Bauer of South Weymouth. At one of the first meetings of the committee the Colonel was chosen Marshal and the numerous duties of this position left on his shoulders. How well he tackled them, results testify. He appointed clear concise men who were well qualified for the positions they filled, issued clear concise instructions and with the lukewarm attitude of many to the celebration at its beginning; the great amount of work that fell on the Colonel and how well he did it, can best be summed up in the statement the parade was a wonderful success in every way, thanks to him.

The Gazette is fortunate this week to present to its readers a brief sketch of the busy, active life the Colonel leads; yet he spared the time to put over the Tercentenary parade in the fine manner it was put over. The Colonel was the man for the place, and he did a fine piece of work, the citizens of Weymouth owe him a most hearty vote of thanks.

Col. Frederick Gilbert Bauer was born in Jamaica Plain, Jan. 23, 1881. He graduated with a Franklin Medal from the Boston Latin school in 1897, and received the degree of A. B. (summa cum laude) from Harvard College in 1900, delivering the Latin oration at commencement, and the degree of LL. B. (cum laude) from Harvard Law school in 1903. He was admitted to the Massachusetts bar March 3, 1903, and has been engaged in the practice of law in Boston since that time. For several years he was a member and later chairman of the Republican committee of Ward 23, Boston.

He served three years in the First Squadron Cavalry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and for over six years as an officer of the 8th Infantry, M. V. M., resigning as captain in 1914, at which time he was commissioned as major in the Judge Advocate General's Officers Reserve Corps. He reported for active duty July 25, 1917, and served successively as Judge Advocate of the Northeastern Department, United States Army; Judge Advocate of the Sixth Division, with which command he went overseas and served at the front; Chief of the General Law Section in the office of the Judge Advocate of the A. E. F. at Chaumont; Chief Finance Officer of the A. E. F.; a member of the Interallied Commission on the Maintenance of the Armies of Occupation, and assistant to the Acting Judge Advocate General. He was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel in France Oct. 22, 1918, and received from the King of Belgium the decoration of Commander of the Order of Leopold II.

He left the Army in July, 1920, but in November accepted a commission as major in the Judge Advocate General's Department of the Regular Army, serving as Judge Advocate of the First Corps Area. He left the Regular Army in October, 1922, to resume private practice, and on February 3, 1923, was commissioned colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Officers Reserve Corps.

Col. Bauer moved to South Weymouth in 1908 and has resided since that time at 236 Pleasant street. He is a Past Master of Eliot and Westsagasset Lodges, A. F. & A. M.; a Past High Priest of Dorchester R. A. Chapter; a Past Thrice Illustrious Master of Temple Council, R. & S. M.; Past President of Boston Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, and at the present time a member of the Board of Managers of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; Past Commander of Joseph Steadman Camp, No. 51, Sons of Veterans, and the present Division Counselor of the Massachusetts Division of the Sons of Veterans. He is also a member of the Harvard Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, Harvard Club of Boston; Society of the War of 1812; Boston Chamber of Commerce; Greater Boston Chapter of the Military Order of the World War; South Shore Commandery, Knights Templar, and Boston Bar Association.

ELEANOR A WINNER

Saturday's race of the 15-footers was sailed in a light southeast wind which fell away almost to a dead calm. The Eleanor of Ira M. Whittemore won in 2-57-10, in the wake being the Woolf, Edith W. Stride, Jumbo, Wee Scott, Rosalie, Paul, Dorothy, Ruth, Hank, and Discard.

NEW POLICE AMBULANCE

The new police ambulance had a rather unique christening its first Saturday night when it carried a load of $3000 worth of Scotch whiskey from North to East Weymouth on its initial trip.

Early in the evening a message to the police headquarters from Boston told of the arrest there of two members of a gang of five and stated that the other three were in all probability in North Weymouth. Sergt. Butler with officers Boyle, Hunt, and Caughen started out and soon located the other three men, namely, Murphy, Young, and Brown at 3 Ocean avenue. They were placed under arrest charged with being implicated in the writing of false checks.

The men were taken to the East Weymouth lockup and the patrol wagon made the return trip to 3 Ocean avenue where upon search $3000 worth of Scotch whiskey was found concealed in the cellar. The efficiency of the Weymouth Police Department is appreciated.

TOWN AND VICINITY

The east wind last night was a relief after three days of 96 degrees.

The Grammar schools of town closed yesterday, diplomas being presented to the graduates.

The furniture used in the presentation of the class play at the High school graduation was loaned by W. G. Shaw of Quincy.

There is a premium on the Tercentenary Souvenirs of the Gazette-Transcript, and the very limited balance of the edition of 4000 copies will be sold for 25 cents.

A poem by Thomas Alexander Hyde on the Weymouth Tercentenary is printed in the Gazette-Transcript this week.

THE WEYMOUTH TERCENTENARY

By Thomas Alexander Hyde

Three hundred years out of ages of mysterious time Crowned with glory and youthful prime,
Weymouth, fair daughter of Britain's land,
Was separated by wisdom choice and faithful hand,
To be a sacred shrine of eternal flame,
Set on fire by heroes brave of mighty fame.
Weymouth is second to none in power,
First to colonize in time's prompt hour,
First in battle and in arts of peace,
Her women fair and brave in deeds of grace,
Her radiant influence far and wide
Has gathered today thousands by her side.
Weymouth's glory and patriotism shall endure,
While her men are brave and maidens pure.
Where is romance? Why? Weymouth is ahead.
In King Philip's war her many heroes led Indian struggles, conflict, grim and dire
Tell of blood-drenched field, hunger and dread fire,
Her wood-crowned hills, forests dense and green
Could they speak forth, the wonders they have seen.
Out from secret paths and dubious ways,
With warwhoop shrill in those awful days,
Rushed swarms of savages hideous in war paint,
Struck terror to the feeble of heart and paint.
The early settlers feared, but Myles Standish came
With valiant heroes worthy of the name,
Hard the struggle, the settlement was saved and then Weymouth arose to colonize in power again.
Her boats and ships made settlements along the bay
And trade and commerce felt and owned her sway.
Even now on this Great Hill admiring as we stand
The beautiful scenery, stream, bay, and land,
There rush from Weymouth ports with dread surprise
Leviathans of the deep, memorials of skill and enterprise.
Her far-flung line on sea and land reaches to the skies.
We place a boulder in love, but greatness clouds our eyes.
Senators and statesmen of wisdom and renown
Presidents and governors who have won the crown
Judges on the bench for calm and wise decision
For justice, high honor, and clarity of vision Doctors of medicine and D. D. of Theological skill, Who have in loving service cured with God's will Orators, poets, and musicians, in rapturous song
Have thrilled and thrilled the public throng
And marched with glorious melody to victor fight, Weymouth heroes, soldiers, sailors, for freedom's right
Even now, are with us, men of great renown
Chief Justice of the law and Generals with the crown
For patriotism, courage, and wise administration.
In war and council abroad, and in our nation
Who as they place wreaths on this rock and along the way, Proclaim this Tercenary, Weymouth's greatest day.
Trace their lineage and proud ancestral name,
From Weymouth's sons and daughters of bright fame.
But hush! hark! I can say no more,
My words are lost amid the din and roar
Of marching thousands and the thunders of applause
Loud trumpets and the roar of guns honor Weymouth's cause
National troops, artillery, and tanks of war,
Hosts of proud citizens that have come from far,
Military band with loud music proclaim Weymouth's Tercenary shall go down to fame.

East Braintree to Hold Big Carnival

The carnival committee of Braintree Point club are: Perley Smith, Clarence Cassidy, Albert Welton, George Pratt, James Furse, P. A. Gibson, J. R. Elliott, and E. H. Lowell.

A monster carnival of fun, sport, and frolic will be held on Saturday on the grounds of the Braintree Point Welfare Club, Inc., in which all the residents of that section of the town will take active part. The proceeds will be devoted to the improvement of the club grounds, which are also the out-door recreational center of the community.

The club itself is located at the foot of Arborway drive, off Quincy avenue, East Braintree, and controls practically the one salt water bathing beach of the town. The clubhouse and the grounds skirt the beach, and wooded hillsides, rising from the shore, give that unusual and most desirable combination of salt water and shade at the same time. The bathing is excellent and during the summer the beach is open to the townspeople and the summer folk, who throng it at almost any hour of the day.

The community spirit that the club is fostering is responsible to a great extent for the condition of the beach and the fact that today women and children find safe bathing and relief from the torrid heat there daily.

The members themselves worked together to transform a one-time dilapidated pier into a serviceable landing and a sea wall. The same community spirit, too, was responsible for the clubhouse itself.

The site for the house was obtained but funds stopped far short of letting the contract to a builder. The members unhesitatingly agreed to do the work themselves, and they did it. The result is a modern building that cost $8000, but could not be constructed for twice that amount.

Through the same spirit, a splendid grade school was secured for the children of that neighborhood, who had previously been compelled to travel long distances to attend classes. The new school is the Watson school, now almost completed.

Plans for Saturday's carnival include water sports, games, supper, and dancing for everybody in the club hall throughout the evening.

To reach the club grounds, those using the street cars should take cars to Weymouth Landing, and walk to the club from Arborway drive. Motorists are advised to take the "inside" boulevard to Plymouth, down Quincy avenue. The club is reached from Quincy avenue near the new bridge. The officers are: James Furse, president; William J. Cogswell, vice-president; Clarence Cassidy, treasurer; William Murray, recording secretary; and Newman Page, financial secretary.

DIVISION 14, ANCIENT ORDER OF HIBERNIANS

Division 14, A. O. H., was organized by P. J. Healy in the year 1893.
He at that time was a member of Division 9, East Weymouth, from which he was transferred to Division 3, North Abington. Transportation at that time was not as convenient as today, and he being a staunch Hibernian was anxious to attend all meetings, but he found it impossible on account of transportation facilities, so he made up his mind to form a division in South Weymouth, which looked almost a difficult task, as another society had started to form at that time.

Nevertheless Mr. Healy succeeded in getting together fourteen men, including himself, and two other members who were transferred with him from Division 3, so with these fourteen men he was satisfied he could build a substantial division.

They held a meeting at the Engine hall, South Weymouth, and elected officers as follows: D. J. Nolan, president; D. Sullivan, vice president; R. J.
Smith, treasurer; M. B. Welch, recording secretary; E. B. Halligan, financial secretary. Other members were Patrick Cullinane Jr., Joseph Cullinane, P. J. Welch, John Sullivan, Park street, William Murphy, P. J. Healy, Robert Healy, Richard Madden, J. S. Halligan.

The officers were installed by County President J. J. Murphy of Norwood.
The Division immediately began to hold entertainments and socials which were largely attended by both young and old, and this kept the financial conditions substantial, and today Division 14 is one of the strongest of its size in Norfolk county. The present officers are: John Santry, president; Thomas Monahan, vice-president; F. J. Dowd, recording secretary; P. J.
Welch, financial secretary, and D. L. Sullivan, treasurer.

The Gazette-Transcript Strives to be Worthy of Your Friendship and Respect

COL. BAUER'S TRIBUTE TO THE PRESS

The publisher of the Gazette-Transcript is thankful that his efforts to make the Tercentenary a success were appreciated:

Mr. Frank F. Prescott, Editor,
Weymouth Gazette-Transcript,
East Weymouth

My dear Mr. Prescott:—On behalf of myself and the others connected with the Weymouth Tercentenary I desire to thank you for the publicity which was given the celebration in your columns.

As shortness of time made it difficult to distribute written or printed notices among those who were concerned with the parade, it would have been impossible to get the necessary information to the townspeople had it not been for the publicity given our notices in the Gazette-Transcript.

I feel that whatever success the celebration had is, under the circumstances, in large measure due to your cordial cooperation.

Yours very truly,
FREDERICK GILBERT BAUER, Chief Marshal

CREDIT HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Editor Gazette-Transcript:
On page thirteen of your issue of June 22, is the following summing up of our Tercentenary celebration: "Its success is not due to any one person, but everyone seemed to do his, or her part" etc.

Now this is true and all right as far as it goes. It is also true that said success is due chiefly to the work of a very small minority of our citizens, namely "The Weymouth Historical Society."

The writer is not and has never been a member of that society; is not acquainted with any of its leading members (more's the pity, they are surely worth knowing) and what follows is just his personal opinion. He is an outsider, outside the society, not the town. For many years, that society has been at work on our "Town History", taking up the work started more than fifty years ago.

Much of this work was simply drudgery. Suppose your family have lived in the town, one, two, or even three hundred years, and in order to prove your title to some real estate you were obliged to furnish a list of your ancestors, grandparents, great and small ditto, uncles, aunts and cousins, down to your own generation. Some job that?

Well, two volumes of 400 pages each, about one-half of the history, are filled with the genealogies of those who live or have lived in Weymouth.

Year after year these men have worked on with little or no encouragement, and often when in town meetings they have asked for a little cooperation on our part, they have met with indifference, and even opposition. Yet in spite of hindrances they have kept at work and success has at last crowned their efforts and a town history seems to be an assured fact.

If one should go through the files of our Gazette for the years past, he will find that its members have always been to the front in all that relates to the best interests of the town. They have public spirit, a quality that the town as a whole has (heretofore) lacked. Last year they staged a fine celebration at Great Hill, and made a success of that also, though our town officials, professional men, and others who might have been expected to honor the occasion by their presence, were most of them conspicuous by their absence.

Well they took their medicine without a whimper, but to "a man up a tree" it looks as though they decided to leave this year's celebration to be planned by others. Time flies, mid-summer is almost here, and it looks as though there would be no celebration, so the Historical Society stepped into the breach and their plans, backed by the whole town have made the celebration a great success. They have helped to make history, as well as to record it, and probably feel amply repaid for their labor.

Let me close this conglomeration of facts and opinions; fact as to their works and opinions, as to their state of mind, with the guess that nothing would please them so much as to see us falling over each other in a rush to get a first edition of Weymouth's Town History.

FEARING—RIX

Miss Sarah Randall Rix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rix of 22 Cottage street, East Weymouth, and Edward White Fearing, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Fearing of Main street, South Weymouth, were married at the home of the bride's parents at 8 o'clock Saturday evening by Rev. Francis A. Poole of the Old South Union church, the double ring service being used. Many guests were present. Miss Emily Sampson played the wedding march from Lohengrin; Mrs. J. C. Gardner of Orange, New Jersey, sister of the bride, was maid of honor; Allen C. Fearing, brother of the groom best man; Miss Carolyn Nutter of Melrose, niece of the groom, flower girl, and Clinton G. Gardner, nephew of the bride, ring bearer. The ushers were Justin J. Fearing of New York, brother of the groom; Arthur G. Rix of Braintree; William J. Rix and Merion J. The bride was gowned in white canton crepe trimmed with silk lace. Her tulle veil was fastened with a pearl headress, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and

THE STUDEBAKER LIGHT-SIX SEDAN

Where Quality Counts Above Everything Else

Quality is more important in an enclosed car than in most any other product in daily use.

Regardless of price, it is not economy to buy a makeshift job in which the quality is skimmed and cheapened at every turn. Paint, imitation leather and fibre board too often cover serious structural defects and cotton-and-wool trimming cloths are short lived. The chances are that the buyer will more than pay the difference later—in higher upkeep cost, frequent repairs and excessive depreciation.

The price of the Light-Six Sedan is the lowest at which it is possible to obtain a substantial, high grade hardwood and steel body, upholstered in mohair, in combination with a chassis of proved dependability and performance.

Power in surplus measure to satisfy the most exacting owner

Studebaker's South Bend plants build more high quality closed bodies than those of any other automobile manufacturer and consequently overhead costs are reduced and the price to the customer is low.

The in-built quality of the Light-Six Sedan is evident the moment one gets behind the wheel, and is appreciated far more after twenty-five or thirty thousand miles of service.

The Light-Six Sedan, with its sturdy four-door body, its improved L-head motor, and the excellence of its chassis, combines distinction of appearance with a reliability of performance, a degree of comfort and economy of operation unknown in any other car at anywhere near its price.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

—Mr. and Mrs. Parker T. Pearson and family are on an auto trip to Rockport, Maine, where they will visit Mrs. Pearson's mother.

—The members of the choir at the First church, Weymouth Heights, will hold a picnic at Minot on Saturday afternoon and evening.

—The Misses Ruth and Florence Nash, also Gordon Rauch, attended the Clark C. E. Union congress meeting and supper held at the Cohasset Congregational church on Wednesday evening.

—Miss Ruth Sladen, who has been teaching in Halifax the past year, is home for the summer vacation.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of the First church gave a surprise party to their president, Gordon Rauch, of Church street Saturday evening. Games were enjoyed and a jolly evening spent. One of the pleasantest parts of the occasion was the presentation of a brief case to Gordon, in behalf of the Christian Endeavorers of the First church. Refreshments were served.

—Walter J. Sladen of Church street is improving from his recent illness.

—The entertainment given in the First church chapel last Friday evening, the proceeds of which were given to the Weymouth Hospital fund was a great success. The program, which was in charge of Mrs. Joseph Teague, consisted of piano solos by Robert Bates, these being much enjoyed; readings by Mrs. Edith Kilborn of Kingston; also pleasing vocal solos were rendered by Miss Bertha C. Nash, her selections being: "Come for its June" by Dorothy Forster; "Lady Bug" by Bainbridge Crist and "Just for today" by John H. Densmore.

A village school act was given, the parts being enacted in a most clever and witty manner by the Misses Isabel Jones, Doris White, Ruth Freeman Helen Ries, Mrs. F. C. McDowell, Robert Bates, Joseph Teague, Irving Hunt, and Fred Lunt, with Mrs. Evelyn Hunt enacting the part of teacher. The village school sketch added much fun to the program and all were to be congratulated on the humor and wit displayed. Following the entertainment ice cream was served and a social hour enjoyed.

—The Ladies Benevolent Society of the First church held a lawn party on the grounds of the parsonage Tuesday, the following people presiding over tables:

Candy—Mrs. J. C. Nash
Frankfurters—George B. Bicknell
Refreshments—Mrs. James B. Jones
Mother Hubbard—Mrs. Harry Johnson and Mrs. Conway
Punch—Mrs. Carl Hurlburt and Mrs. Rufus Bates

Ice cream—Mrs. Charles Macker
The evening session of the lawn party on account of rain was necessarily held indoors, but in spite of this, the program in charge of the Weymouth Heights Campfire Girls was given just the same and consisted of the following:

Pantomime by the Campfire Girls, entitled "Grandmother"
Reading "Mark Anthony's Original Oration" by Esther Mayo Group of humorous songs

Campfire Girls
Reading "Counting Eggs"
Annie Conway
Reading, "A little boy," Bertha Proulx
Reading, "How the sermon sounded to baby," Laura Nash Reading, "What the little girl said," Gladys Conway Dialogue, "Love in the kitchen," Helen Moulton and Mary Tolles

The program closed with a group of Campfire ceremonial songs. The girls were in their Campfire costumes and the songs were most effective and added a splendid closing feature to the fine program which they had rendered.

MARKET REPORT

As a guide to the busy housekeeper the Gazette-Transcript will publish each week the current market prices as of Tuesday of the week the Gazette-Transcript is printed:

Strawberries were cheap due to a large supply on the market. Good berries may be purchased as low as 20-25¢ quart basket, and large Marshfield berries as low as 30¢. Now is the time to preserve native strawberries. Spinach is low in price, three lb. for 15¢. This is also a good time to can spinach.

New on the market: Native peas 40¢ lb. Crook neck squash 15¢ lb. Native gooseberries 25-30¢ quart basket. Native cabbage 5-6¢ lb. Now is the time to buy native bunched beets, which are plentiful and retailing as low as 5¢ per bunch; native beet greens three lb. 20¢; bunched carrots 8¢; native cucumbers small three for 10¢; large 15-20¢. Native lettuce 5-8¢ head; new potatoes 5¢ lb.; radishes and scallions 5¢ bunch. Romaine 10¢ head; spinach three lb. 15¢; mackerel lb. 15¢ halibut lb. 35¢ native halibut is high; retailing at 50¢. Fresh swordfish has just appeared on the market 55-60¢ lb.

One of the common problems of the homemakers is how to secure variety in the daily meals. One of the best solutions is a more general use of vegetables. Serve raw or cooked, as a salad, cooked and creamed, or served with a butter sauce, they are an attractive, appetizing and wholesome addition to the daily meals. If raised in the home garden they are readily available during all of the growing season. The surplus may be canned or stored, and thus provide for an abundant supply for every day in the year. Suggestive canning budget for family of five.

Young beets 15-20 quarts; string beans 15-20 quarts; tomatoes 30-40 quarts; beet greens 8-10 quarts; Swiss chard 10-15 quarts. Spinach 10-15 quarts; canned corn, peas, and young carrots may be included.

NOTES ON THE PARADE

Evidently every line in the Gazette-Transcript is read, and the publishers hear from some items, especially if exceptions are taken. Last week the columns of paragraphs "Along route of parade and among the workers" attracted attention. They were written by different reporters, but none written by the publishers have received unfavorable comment. Perhaps it would have been better if two or three items had been omitted.

KING COVE BOAT CLUB

The King Cove Boat club held its first meeting June 28, 1911, in Culley's boathouse at King Cove. There were nine members present. L. H. Culley was chairman for the meeting. Mrs. John White and son Arthur left last week for Toronto, Canada, where they will spend a few weeks with Mrs. White's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hecks.

At the regular monthly business meeting of the Lovell's Corner Improvement Society plans were made for the celebration on the Fourth. The committees are planning a good time. Everybody is invited.

NEW TRIPS TO PLYMOUTH

New pleasures and old are combined in the steamer trips to Plymouth, which began yesterday with one of the most popular innovations ever planned.

The innovation in question was a combination daylight and moonlight sail, starting from Rowe's wharf at 2 P. M. and ending at the same place at 10.15 P. M. after the first half-holiday excursion to Plymouth in the history of the line.

The regular daily and Sunday trips, starting at 10 A. M., have enjoyed undiminished popularity for many years and for many reasons. They accord a delightful outing, in the first place, for the Plymouth boat, after leaving Boston harbor, skirts the South Shore. On one side are picturesque landscapes, dotted here and there with historic landmarks, survivals of Puritan and Pilgrim days. On the other side are ocean views. Refreshing breezes mark the trip down and back.

The round trip by day has always been especially popular with excursionists accompanied by children and with tourists eager to return to Boston by nightfall.

But there has been a growing demand, particularly among those who enjoy the Saturday half-holiday, for a later trip, which would combine the pleasures of daylight and moonlight sailing, and this demand has been met by the new Saturday schedule introduced yesterday, which will continue through the summer.

The Plymouth sail is noted for comforts and conveniences as well as for outing pleasures and the opportunities it offers to those desiring to visit the Pilgrim shrines. The stop at Plymouth on all days, Saturdays included, is so arranged as to give passengers ample time to view Plymouth Rock and other places of historic interest. On the way down and back passengers can also enjoy a variety of entertainment. The large and attractive dining saloon is noted for the excellence of its cuisine. The Mayflower orchestra provides popular music. The reserved staterooms are the equal of any to be found on liners bound for New York and other ports.

The steamer South Shore, which is familiar to travelers from all parts of the country, is a large, staunch and handsomely appointed boat with a service that has always challenged criticism. The boat is in charge of one of the veteran New England coast commanders, Capt. Gallano, and from the captain down every one is employed by the year to make sure that the quality of service will remain high summer after summer.

Not a life has been lost, either passenger or member of the crew, for the motto "Safety First" is rigidly observed in all circumstances.

For every cent spent in studying better ways of farming, it's safe to say that two cents come back to farmer and consumer.

To The Public

We have already published statements as to the wages and working conditions of our telephone operators.

The proof of these statements is to be found in the way the operators have continued in the service.

In organizations fairly comparable with ours, a labor turnover of less than 50% per year is considered good. By labor "turnover" is meant the number of people hired to replace those who for any reason have left.

Henry Ford points with pride to a labor turnover in his automobile plant of from 3 to 6% per month; in other words, from 36 to 72% per year.

In manufacturing industries in general, a turnover of less than 100% per year is considered satisfactory.

In our company in 1922 the turnover among women employees in our central offices was less than 16% for the year.

And of those who left, less than 1% left for the purpose of seeking other employment.

We submit these facts without argument.
